The following are the team who left town yesterday morning on 8.20 train. F. Traynor, goal; J. Joyal, point; P. Myles, cover point; R. Hall, M. Halpin and R. H. Fortye, defence field; J. J. Sheehy, centre; R. S. Kelly, J. Henderson and C. Rutherford, home field; and W. S. Scott and W. Rudkins, home.

On arriving at Beaverton the boys went to the Ontario House, and after having dined, repaired to the lacrosse grounds at 2.30. It had been expected that the grounds would be in a deplorable state, owing to the heavy rain, and though the Checkers had spared no effort to get them in shape, they were in places muddy and even under water. They are about the size of the old grounds in Ashburnham, though of course not so smooth or well kept.

All Beaverton had turned out to see the game, and a great many players from Orillia, who are interested in the championship, were present to watch which way it went. The referee, Mr. J. C. Ballantyne, of the Brampton Excelsiors, a member of the Lacrosse Executive Council, paraded the teams at 3.10 for

THE FIRST GAME.

Contrary to his usual practice Jimmy Sheehy did not secure the ball from the face, and the Checkers, closing round it with an impetuous sweep, carried it to the Peterborough goal. The hearts of the supporters of the home team who had accompanied them began to palpitate; Harry LeBrun since said, "Jimmy, when I saw you lose that ball my heart jumped into my mouth," but the charge was checked by Joe Joyal, who, like a rock, received the onslaught and sent the rubber careering to the other end of the field, where Scott and Rudkins captured it—Rudkins making a throw that was at first supposed to be a goal. The umpire, however, did not hold up his hand and playing was continued, the ball going to centre, where a struggle took place for its possession between Dick Kelly and Kennedy, a Lindsay man, who swings a 'crosse for the Checkers, in which, with his accustomed activity, Dick came out ahead and made a pretty close throw on goal. The ball, however, went behind the flags, where a face was necessitated. Kelly again got possession of the ball and threw a drop to Henderson, who, however, was hustled out of the way by a big six footer of the Checkers. After a struggle of 11 minutes, during which, owing to the state of the grounds, the ball had to be faced no less than 14 times, Dick Kelly succeeded in scoring the first goal for his team. Some small bets were made in favor of the Beavertons during this game. After a breathing spell the teams again took up their stations and was begun.

In this game the Checkers began to give evidence of weakening and did not play as carefully in the field, the ball being kept at their defence all the time, drawing their men away from the centre to the scene of the struggle, while Sheehy and Kelly, whenever the rubber did emerge from the vicinity of the Beaverton flags, were ever on the alert, and did not let it go far enough to endanger Peterboroughs' poles. As in the preceding game the ball had again and again to be faced afresh and considerable time was consumed in this way. Sheehy at length collaring the ball, passed it on to home where Joe Henderson, who was waiting his chance, got it on his crosse and sent it through the Checkers' flags again, making the second goal for Peterborough. Although almost half an hour was occupied in this game, the actual play only lasted about eight minutes. In it became evident that the demoralization of the Checkers was complete. Changes were made in the positions of their players and they wore an anxious look that presaged their defeat in this as in the other games. This time Jimmy Sheehy, with his old time twist, drew the ball, and his right hand man, Dick Kelly, lost no time in depositing it near the Checkers' flags, but it was returned to centre by Ross. A face-off followed soon after in which Kelly again got the sphere and sent it Checkerward, and after a short struggle around the poles, Henderson put it through, making three straights and the championship for his club.

THE THIRD GAME,

The boys were wild with delight, and Harry LeBrun was the happiest man that has trod the Checker lacrosse ground for many a day. Cheers were exchanged between the clubs and the Beaverton boys handed over the medal, saying that if they must part from it they would rather have it come to Peterborough than anywhere else.

THE RECEPTION.

After taking tea at the Ontario House the boys left for home, getting a hearty send off from the vanquished Checkers, who accepted their defeat in the spirit of true sportsmen, and announced their intention of coming here in quest of the championship at an early date. On arriving at the station the conquering heroes were met by an immense gathering of the townspeople headed by the City Band, and a torchlight procession was formed. On stopping from the cars Mr. Harry LeBrun was handed a large and beautiful bouquet of flowers, presented by the young ladies employed in his establishment, who took this graceful way of expressing their regard for their employer and their sympathy with the deep interest he takes in the welfare of Canada's national game which occupies so large a place in the hearts of the Dominion's fair daughters. Headed by the band and accompanied by a surging crowd of enthusiastic admirers the procession wended its way up town, pausing at the City Hotel to partake of Mr. Clancy's hospitality. The procession broke up at the Little Windsor Hotel and the boys dispersed to receive the congratulations of the numerous friends who thronged around them.

The beautiful bouquet, with which Mr. LeBrun was presented, has found an appropriate resting place in the Gildersleeve Cup, and is on exhibition in the show window of Mr. J. J. Sheehy, whose energy and activity has contributed so largely to past triumphs of the Peterboroughs.

Without such guarantees Spain must decline to give satisfaction for the recent insults to the German embassy.

BERLIN, Sep. 11.—The Crown Prince Frederick William has replied to the note from King Alfonso. A definite settlement of the pending question, he says, can only be had by a full agreement between the great powers.

Castelar in Fighting Mood.

MADRID, Sept. 11.—Ex-President Castelar made, yesterday, a highly inflammatory speech at Corunna to the Artisan Club. He declared an alliance between Germany and Spain would prove fatal to the latter and that the Latin races must combine against the Germans. Preparations, he said, should precede war, but if war came the responsibility must rest wholly on Germany. In case of war, he thought an alliance was indispensable to Spain.

Light Wanted.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In his letter in the issue of THE DAILY EXAMINER yesterday "Progress" makes certain vague intimations—in very general terms indeed—as to what Mr. Geo. A. Cox has done for the town. I should have been better pleased if "Progress" had been a little more to the point—had filed a bill of particulars. I fail to see the thing in any other light, than that Mr. Cox, with the shrewdness of a good business man, is looking out for number one and that in the Dickson Company exemption matter he expected to derive the lion's share of the advantage.

I remain, sir, yours, etc.,

FAIR TAXATION.

Local Prohibition in Canterbury, England.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

MY DEAR SIR,—In the appendix to the report referred to in my former letter, there is a long list of the names of places in which the sale of intoxicating drinks has been forbidden by property owners and others, and which present a marked contrast in many ways to those in which it is not forbidden. There are about 150 names given of parishes, etc., in which there are no public houses or beer shops. The testimony as to the good results covers 22 pages in the appendix and embraces the items from number 2,069 to 2,322. The following is a quotation from the report itself.

Your committee, in conclusion, are of opinion that as the ancient and avowed object of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors is to supply a supposed public want, without detriment to the public welfare, a legal power of restraining the issue or renewal of licenses should be placed in the hands of the persons most deeply interested and affected, namely, the inhabitants themselves, who are entitled to protection from the injurious consequences of the present system. Such a power would in effect secure to the districts willing to exercise it, the advantages now enjoyed by the numerous parishes in the province of Canterbury, where, according to reports furnished to your committee, owing to the influence of the land owner, no sale of intoxicating liquors is licensed.

Few, it may be believed are cognizant of the fact—which has been elicited by the present inquiry—that there are at this time within the Province of Canterbury upwards of one thousand parishes in which there is neither public house nor beer shop; and where, in consequence of the absence of these inducements to crime and pauperism, according to the evidence before the committee, the intelligence, morality and comfort of the people are such as the friends of temperance would have anticipated."

The following are a few of the replies to the queries on the returns to which the report is founded.—

FROM THE CLERGY.

2070.—"There being no public house or beer shop in this parish is a cause of unmitigated good in so far as it removes temptation to some distance."

2075.—"There is no public house or beer-shop, I am glad to be able to say, in this parish. Of this the good is great; the inconvenience, if any, in comparison exceedingly small. The constable's office is a sinecure and a drunken man is a very rare sight."

2077.—"I have no hesitation in saying that the abolition of the public house has been a great boon and an unmingled benefit to the place. It has contributed very decidedly to the well-being of the laboring inhabitants and I am moreover confident that no real practical inconvenience has been experienced from its abolition."

2118.—"I have been in this parish since 1844 and have not seen anyone tipsy—if anyone get tipsy. It cannot be here for we have no public house or beershop. We have had no case for the police since I have been here."

2131.—Magistrates never have a case from this parish, nor has there been a pauper in the Union for some time past."

2202.—No drunkard in this parish. Magistrates never have a case from this parish nor has there been a pauper in the Union for some time past."

2225.—"The gain to my parish by turning beershops into cottages has been very great. A neat of wickedness has been got rid of, the sound of oaths and blasphemy no longer heard."

FROM CHIEF CONSTABLES AND SUPERINTENDENTS OF POLICE.

2313.—"In parishes where there are neither Public Houses nor Beer-shops the absence of crime is remarkable."

2315.—"I may state that from the above 97 parishes, in which there are no Public Houses or Beer-shops, little or no crime comes."

2319. "In this division I have 57 parishes with 69 public houses and 15 beer houses; 12 without either. In these last I find fewer drunkards and less crime."

The foregoing are fair specimens of the whole. In every case the testimony is to the inestimable blessing arising from the absence of houses for the sale of intoxicating drinks—there is virtually no drunkenness, no pauperism, no crime.

And this is the case, too, even in parishes bordering on other parishes where there are beer shops and public houses, where drink can be obtained at a distance of one or two miles from the boundary line. If the results of the abolition of drinking places are so good in parishes, how much better they will be by the abolition of them in counties. Local prohibition, then, does prohibit. The "no license" system does not mean more drunkenness, more poverty, more crime among the people. The witness-bearers are not temperance fanatics. What is good for Canterbury is good for Ontario!

Archbishop Lynch on the Scott Act.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Will you be good enough to insert the following letter of Archbishop Lynch in your daily and weekly editions of Thursday, and oblige,

Yours truly,

A MEMBER OF THE C.E.T.S.

SIR,—I wish to give an answer through your columns to the frequent applications made to me in reference to the Scott Act. I am even reproached with favoring intemperance by not assisting the promoters of this Act. I shall give a general answer to all. I have, as well as my priests, exercised all my influence to suppress intemperance, and thank God, we have no reason to be discouraged at our efforts. Drunkenness is not the besetting sin of our good Canadian people. We have less drunkenness in Canada, I think, than in any other country of the same latitude. If we had a population of character such as is reported of that of Glasgow, Edinburgh, London, or a city in Ireland, we should then vote for any act that would suppress the terrible scandal of intemperance. We doubt very much whether this partial prohibition, by counties, would do all the good which the promoters of the Scott Act could wish. The difficulty of enforcing the Act will be very great, it will require a cordon of police around the counties, and a host of spies through them to detect illicit manufacturers and vendors of poisonous stuff that they will sell for liquor, that will quickly bring on delirium tremens, and finally insanity and other miseries, so that instead of one respectable vendor of safe liquors there will be a host of persons without conscience or character, who will traffic in this poisonous liquor, which will cause a greater evil than that which some people desire to have suppressed. I am quite sure that the example of the immense part of our population by the exhortation and societies will put down intemperance safely and quietly in the small minority as has happened elsewhere. Moderate drinkers, as may say en passant, can vote for moderate drinking and moderate selling, but their pretensions should not allow them to vote for total prohibition. It is difficult to enforce any moral virtue on an unwilling people; they will always claim the right of doing as they please, provided they do not injure their neighbors. The Catholic Church has encouraged voluntary temperance by the means of associations, and the Pope has ever granted indulgences for these temperance societies.

One of the great causes of intemperance is weakness of constitution and poverty of blood. Give to the laboring man fair wages by which he can have a comfortable breakfast in the morning of meat instead of a little tea and bread, often without butter, and there will be little craving for strong drink and hence less intemperance. Men working in our foundries and factories require strong nourishment, and if they had a good bowl of soup for their dinner or lunch there would be less craving for strong drink.

In vine-growing countries there is very little drunkenness, we must except the north of France and Belgium, where the cultivation of the vine, owing to the climate, is not successful.

Let the Government have conscientious inspectors of liquors, and also punish all adulterations most severely, and we should not have many cases of habitual drunkenness and delirium tremens. Let the Government also punish severely a repetition of public drunkenness by confinement in jail with hard labor, even by compelling the offender to clean the streets.

It has been asserted that the use of wine is prohibited in the Bible. This is not the case. Our Divine Redeemer instituted one of his greatest sacraments in bread and wine, and St. Paul advises his disciple Timothy to use a little wine for his stomach's sake, for there are persons of weak constitutions that require such nourishment. There is an old and a good saying, "always eat when you drink," and this double nourishment will prevent drunkenness.

We largely depend for wine for sacramental purposes upon vineyards in the south-western part of Ontario, bordering on Lake Erie, and we hope that such an industry will not be disturbed, as we can rely fully on the integrity of those gentlemen who keep these vineyards, not to adulterate the wine.

I shall not enter into the financial difficulty that will attend the enforcement of the Scott Act. Tens of thousands will be thrown out of employment in the hop fields, vineyards, cooperages, etc., etc. If there were a public necessity for the Scott Act all these inconveniences should be overlooked. I have not heard of a single county in Ontario where the people are so besotted as to require the Act. The few drunkards that are amongst us can be reformed by good nourishment and by severe punishment, and above all by a strict inspection of intoxicating liquors.

†JOHN JOSEPH LYNCH, Archbishop, Toronto.

Rules for Bathing.

The Royal Humane Society recommends to the notice of the English public a code of rules published by the society, and entitled, "Caution to Bathers." They are as follows:

Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal.

Avoid bathing when exhausted by fatigue or any other cause.

Avoid bathing when the body is cooling after perspiration.

Avoid bathing altogether in the open air if, after having been a short time in the water, it causes a sense of chilliness, with numbness of hands and feet.

Bathe when the body is warm, provided no time is lost in getting into the water.

Avoid chilling the body by sitting or standing undressed on the banks or in boats after having been in the water.

Avoid remaining too long in the water—leave the water immediately there is the slightest feeling of chilliness.

The vigorous and strong may bathe early in the morning on an empty stomach.

The young, and those who are weak, had better bathe two or three hours after a meal—the best time for such is from two to three hours after breakfast.

Those who are subject to attacks of giddiness or faintness, and those who suffer from palpitation and other sense of discomfort at the heart, should not bathe without first consulting their medical adviser.

A man has been arrested in the act of selling bogus reserved seat tickets to Barnum's circus.

The Countess of Kingston has offered her tenants the option of purchasing their holdings.

American Girls and Titles.

If I felt free to mention names, writes the London correspondent of the Detroit Post, I could tell tales to wring the heart about American girls who have married English noblemen. In almost every instance it proves fatal to the bride's happiness. It isn't long since Lord Flyfinger married the heiress of an American Crœsus. She was envied by all her marriageable cronies, and old Crœsus was congratulated on the fine alliance. He grinned with self-complacency, and handed over $1,500,000 to His Lordship Flyfinger on the spot. Flyfinger took the wife and the money to England, where he introduced her to a few acquaintances, and then left her to shift for herself, while he travels with relays of fast horses and mistresses, races and hunts, gambles and lives a wild life on the million and a half of money for which he sold the shrieve of his title to a frigat hopeful, ambitious American girl.

Five or six years ago an American girl, whose name was on all lips, married a rich Englishman, who had the entree of high society in England. She was feasted, toasted, envied. But she had slept in a social cocoon ever since, heartily wishing herself home, not seeing, for months, sometimes, the husband, who loves to follow the hounds.

An American gentleman living here, whose name would be recognized by the reader if I were at liberty to mention, told me recently "I have been approached within a month by an Englsh Lord, who may be a Duke some day, but whose fortune has become greatly impaired by his dissipation. He has fixed his eyes on an American girl whom he has never seen. She is comparatively uneducated and not very bright and fearfully plain. Her nose is snub. Her mouth is large. Her eyes are small and watery. Her father is an Irishman. But he is worth at least $20,000,000. This Lord wants me to bring about a match between himself and this girl. I'd see him hanged first, for I know what a sacrifice of her it would be."

One other case: There is a young lady now in high society in America, her native land, whose husband is an English Lord, and whose father-in-law is a duke. She is beautiful, accomplished, interesting, and she might have made a good match in New York. But she wanted a Lord, and she got him. He inherited gambling from his mother the Duchess, and he gambles away all he can get. He is dissolute and unscrupulous; she is neglected and wretched. So she pays very long visits to her relatives in America, where she can plunge into society and forget her pitiful European experiment.

A person being asked what was meant by realities of life, answered: "Real estate, real money, and a real good dinner, none of which can be realised without real hard work."

SATURDAY, SEPT. 12, 1885.

RIEL REPRIEVED.

When the jury returned a verdict of guilty against Riel, charged with treason-felony, and the sentence of death was passed upon him, the incongruous recommendation to mercy accompanying the verdict, was considered by many as an indication that the jury held the opinion that he was insane, and therefore a fit subject for executive clemency. But the result of the appeal to the Manitoba Court of Appeals removes this hope of the rebel leader's friends. Riel is pronounced sane and responsible for his actions. The rejection of the application for a new trial was glorious news for Sir John and his cabinet. At the time of Riel's trial, it is well known that much evidence—documentary and otherwise—was suppressed by the Government, certain documents having been refused on the plea that they were important state papers, while one of the principal witnesses, Sir David Macpherson, was spirited off to Europe, Sir John Macdonald, Lieut-Governor Dewdney and others having been deliberately and advisedly kept in the background. Such facts as they could have testified to might have altered the entire complexion of the case, and have shown that the real criminals occupied high places at Ottawa and Regina. The facts that could have been brought out would have, in all probability, only elicited official confirmation of the indirect evidence existing, that the rising of the half-breeds was the only part of the alternative left them, in place of entire deprivation of their rights. Under these circumstances, it was not to expected that the Government, in view of its share in Riel's guilt, would be hard on him, and allow his sentence of death to be carried into execution.

The refusal of the application for a new trial by the Manitoba Court of Appeals, led many of the more unsophisticated of the public to believe that justice would be done and that the sentence of the law would be carried out. These, however, reckoned without their host. They did not recollect that Sir John would eventually be equal to the occasion, and that the man who had found means, fifteen years ago, to condone a cold-blooded and deliberate murder, and also, not only release the perpetrator of it, but reward him with the gift of a large sum of money to enable him to pass a few years of exile in luxury, would from the vast resources of his trickery, find a means of a second time befriending Riel and assisting him the second time to escape justice. In confirmation of this it is officially asserted that Riel will not be hanged next Friday. "Old To-morrow" has again resorted to the waiting game. No preparations have been made for the execution, and none will be made. The influence of Archbishop Tache has been brought to bear upon the Government, and the Government, on Thursday last decided not to issue the warrant for the execution of the death sentence upon Riel.

The case will be taken before the Privy Council. We all know what the delay will be. Weeks, certainly, and, probably months, will pass by before their Lordships of the Judicial Committee will arrive at a decision of the matter. Thus both Riel and Sir John will have a lengthened respite. Sir John will not be compelled to act for a long time. He will trust to luck in the meantime—hoping that something will turn up to befriend him and the man he has once befriended, and whom—as everything indicates—he is anxious to befriend again. The public need not look with any degree of impatience for the execution of Riel's sentence. In the case of executions in the North-West, it is necessary for the Dominion Government to issue an order for the carrying out of the sentence of the court. Thus Sir John has the matter in his own hands and he may be trusted to get out of the fix in which he finds himself. He will delay the settlement of the matter, hoping that Riel may die in the interval or escape from prison, by some hocus-pocus, which Sir John knows well how to manage. As Riel goes flying over the border again with three or four thousand of Dominion dollars in his pocket, supplied by his old time friend, Sir John, the latter will uplift his impious hands and exclaim: "Would to God I could catch him."

The Panama Canal.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—M. DeLesseps is bringing the influence of a powerful financial house to bear to obtain authority from the Government for the emission of Panama Canal shares. Premier Brisson adheres to his determination that no decision shall be given until after the elections.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Many Church gatherings take place late in the month in the United States. Eight Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church are in business session.

The Ontario Beekeepers' Association have resolved to show a collection of their products at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition in London next year.

We are glad to hear that the health of Hon. C. F. Fraser, Commissioner of Public Works, has so far improved that he will be able to return to his Department in a few days. This will be a welcome intelligence to the many friends of the hon. gentleman throughout the Province.

The Dominion Ministers, who have been letting their Departments run themselves for many weeks past, are now hurrying back to Ottawa. They are greatly alarmed about the new developments in the case of Riel. Doubtless they are inclined, remarks the Hamilton Times, in the anguish of their soul, to say with a leading Hamilton Tory, "Oh, "if the scouts had only shot Riel dead! "Then Sir John Macdonald would not now "be between the devil (The French Bleus) "and the deep sea (The Ontario Orangemen) "as he now is!" Some Tories will never pardon those militiamen for not taking the law in their own hands.

Exactly the Cheese.

Hastings Wins the Gold Medal for Cheese at the Provincial.

A telegraphic despatch from London states that Mr. J. B. Drewery, cheesemaker at the Thurlow factory, of which Mr. Harford Ashley is part owner, carried off the first prize and gold medal at the Dominion and Provincial Exhibition, for the best and most perfect lot of colored cheese on exhibition. Mr. Drewery is deserving of a great deal of praise for his wonderful success in a contest where the best makers of the Dominion were competing. Mr. Drewery is a pupil of Mr. James Whiton, the gentleman engaged by the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association to instruct the factorymen in the art of making fine cheese. Mr. Whiton is perhaps the best cheese instructor ever known in this part of the country. He has carried off the sweepstakes prize for three years—at Toronto in 1881, at Kingston in 1882, and at Guelph in 1883, and then being barred by the rules of the Association. Mr. Whiton's pupil, Mr. Drewery, stepped in and won the gold medal at Ottawa in 1884, and again yesterday at London. This is a record highly creditable to the County of Hastings, as the dairy centre of Eastern Ontario, and especially praiseworthy to Messrs. Whiton and Drewery.—Ontario.

An exchange has the headline: "Where does lying begin?" Just about where a woman passes her twentieth birthday.

"Robbie," said the visitor, "have you any little brothers and sisters?" "No," replied wee Robbie; "I'm all the children we've got."

Boy (who does not appreciate sermons)—"Well, I'd just like to know what preachin's for, anyway?" Small sister—"Why, its to give the singers a rest."

"I hev prought mine schmall pox mit me," said a German lodger to the landlady. "Oh! you wretch!" she screamed. "And me here with four little innocent children that ain't vaccinated."

Sunshine and Sleep.

Sleepless people—and they are many in America—should court the sun. The very worst soporific is laudanum, and the very sunshine. Therefore, it is very best plain that poor sleepers should pass as many hours as possible in the sunshine, and as few as possible in the shade. Many women are martyrs, and yet they do not know it. They shut the sunshine out of their houses and their hearts, they wear veils, they carry parasols, they do all possible to keep off the subtlest and yet most impotent influence which is intended to give them strength and beauty and cheerfulness. Is it not time to change this, and so get color and roses in their pale cheeks, strength in their weak backs, and courage in their timid souls? The women of America are pale and delicate; they may be blooming and strong, and the sunlight will be a potent influence in this transformation.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

He Had to Believe It

"A Kaintucky man told me a curious snake story wunst," remarked a hoosier from Southern Indiana. "It happened to hisself, he sed. He wus out arter a ground-hog for dinner one day when suddenly he see a snake lift his head above the high grass an' hiss. He got within a few foot of the reptile an' wus jest on the pint of pullin' the trigger, when the snake made a clean jump an' went plump down the muzzle of his gun. So how to get it out he didn't know. Hit finally occurred to him to shoot it out, which he did, an', stranger, he swore to me by all that is holy that he driv the head of that snake right down through the hull length of his body, an' jest turned it inside out."

"You didn't believe such an all-round story as that, did you?"

"Stranger, I believed every word of it. I had to. When a Kaintucky man who is sweatin' big drops of whisky tells a story 'bout snakes, that actually cum within his own experience, an' awars to it, mind ye, no citizen of Southern Indiany who has a family to support ever is foolish enough as to go an' allow as what it ain't so."—Detroit Post.

Dr. Talmage Abroad.

The Eloquent Brooklyn Divine Addresses an Immense Audience in Belfast.

BELFAST, Aug. 30.—Fully 4,000 people gathered at St. Enock's church to-day to hear Rev. Mr. Talmage's sermon. He afterwards spoke to a vast assemblage, estimated at 40,000, in the open air. The subject of his sermon in the church was, "Lost and Found."

Scripture lesson: The parable of the ten virgins.—Matthew xxv.

Text: "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke xix., 10.

When Kossuth visited the United States, about twenty years ago, so great was the enthusiasm for Hungary that I remember very well the trees around the New York "Battery" were crowded with people who had climbed there to see the distinguished stranger as he passed. I shall never forget that scene. Indeed, if one be well poised, he cannot stand in a better place to see a passing crowd than in a tree-top. Well, Christ was coming to Jericho, and there was a small man, whose head did not come up the shoulders of other people, who despaired of seeing the distinguished stranger while standing on the dead level; so he climbs up into a sycamore tree—broad branched, stretching its arms across the highway—and sits there while Jesus advances. Christ, coming up with a great multitude, casts His eye up, and sees this man on the branch of the sycamore, and says: "Come down," and after the man has alighted He says, among other things, to him: "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Our sympathies are always aroused when we see anything that is lost. Even a dog which has wandered away from its master we feel sorry for; or a bird that has escaped from its owner, we say: "Poor thing." Going down the street near nightfall in the teeth of you feel very pitiful for one who has got to be out to-night. As you go along you hear the affrighted cry of a child. You stop. You say, "What is the matter?" You go up and you find that a little one has lost its way from home. In its excitement it cannot even tell its name or its residence. The group of people gathered around are all touched, all sympathetic and helpful. A plain body comes up and with her plaid she wraps the child and says, "I'll take care of the poor bairn." While in the street, but a little way on, the crier goes through the city ringing a bell and uttering a voice that sounds dolefully through all the alleys and by-ways of the city: "A lost child! Three years of age, blue eyes, light hair. Lost child!" Did you ever hear any such pathos as that ringing through the darkness?

You are shipboard. You see against the sky a vessel. It comes nearer. You hoist a flag. It makes no response. You say: "What is the matter with that vessel?" You put the sea glass to your eye, and you find there is no one in the rigging—no one on deck. "Ah," you say, "I guess that must be an abandoned ship." It comes on, falling into the trough of the ocean. It floats every whither, tossed by the wild sea, and the crew say to the passengers, and the captain says to his mate, "It is a lost ship."

You are going down the street and you see a man that you know very well. You once associated with him. "Why," you say, "he is all covered with the marks of sin. He must be in the last stages of wickedness." And then you and say, "God pity his wife and child! God pity him! A lost man.

But, my friends, we are lost. "All we, like sheep, have gone astray," and the bellmen of heaven come out hunting up and down to find those who have missed their way, ringing through all the streets of the city, and all the valleys and mountains of the earth, the old gospel bell: "The Son of Man has come to seek us. It is not one armed with thunderbolts, riding down the sky in ponderous chariot to crush us, but the Son of Man; his nature just like our nature, with one exception; his infancy rocked in the cradle of a mother's arms; his boyhood spent in Nazareth amid a boy's temptations. Afterwards, with blistered hand learning a trade. Afterwards preaching, not with priest's gown, but in citizen's apparel; talking as brother talks with brother. Oh, he was the Son of Man; he walked like a man; he slept like a man; he ate like a man; he drank like a man; he wept like a man; he suffered like a man; he was a man! he knew what sin and temptation are by personal contact, for he lived in a most abandoned village, and he moved around amid fishing villages known in all ages for their vices; and in after years he preached in Jerusalem, a city which, though it had a temple, was worse than New York. And when Christ comes now, he comes not to a new world to make a discovery, but he comes to an old world where he once lived; to a race whose nerves, and muscles, and bones, and flesh were just like those which he inhabited. Like us, the cold chilled him; like us, fire warmed him; like us, betrayal exasperated him. I warrant you that, in

THAT HOSTILE AND ROUGH SOCIETY,

he received many a kick and bruise and cuff that have never been recorded. I am glad to know that he comes in the fresh memory of his sorrow on earth, and of those thrilling night scenes and day scenes of his earthly citizenship, to seek and to save that which was lost.

In the first place, I remark that we are lost to holiness. Are you not all willing to take the Bible announcements that our nature is utterly ruined? Sin has broken in at every part of our castle. One would think that we got enough of it from our parents, whether they were pious or not; but we have taken the capital of sin with which our fathers and mothers started us, and we have by accumulation, as by infernal compound interest, made it enough to swamp us forever. The heart is a battle ground, across which armed battalions sweep right and left. The ivory palace of the soul polluted with the filthy feet of all uncleanliness. The Lord Jesus Christ comes to bring us back to holiness. He comes not to destroy us, but to take the consequences of our guilt. He breaks through thorns, and he dies to offer us cleanliness. Here is a man who, a few weeks ago said: "All is right with me. I am not willing to confess I am a sinner," Now the spirit comes to his soul, and he feels himself to be so great a sinner, that there is no mercy for him. When did he make the most accurate estimate? Now. "The heart is and desperately wicked." But says some one in the audience: "I have sinned so much I do not believe Christ will take me." A great commander thought of going over into Italy. His friends laughed at him and said: "You can never get over the Alps. If you know anything about the Alps, you know you can never get over there." The commander waved his hand and said: "There shall be the Simplon Pass—the wonder of following ages. We stand and see the monument of our guilt. The obstacles seem so great that it is impossible for us to find a way into the peace and life of the gospel; but Christ comes and he waves his wounded hand, and cries: "There shall be no obstacles! I will come over the mountain of thy sin and the hills of thine iniquity." Oh, ye who have sinned, instead of flying away from Christ, if you only knew who it is that comes to save you, you would fly no farther, but turn around, and while Christ seeks you, you would seek Christ, and this house would be a scene of a penitent sinner and a pardoning Saviour, throwing each other's arm around each other's necks; while heaven could afford to stop half an hour and hang over the battlements gazing. What is that flutter among the angels? Who is that horseman rushing through the city with quick dispatch? What is that announcement on the bulletins of heaven? I know what it is. Christ has found that which was lost.

"Nor angels can their joy contain,
But kindle with new fire;
The sinner lost is found, they sing,
And strike the sounding lyre."

I remark again,

WE ARE LOST TO HAPPINESS,

and Christ comes to find us. A caliph said: "I have been fifty years a caliph, and I have had all honors, and all wealth; and yet, in the fifty years, I can count up only fourteen days of happine' ' How many there are in this audience that cannot count fourteen days in all their life in which they had no vexations or annoyances. We all feel a capacity for happiness that has never been tested. There are interludes of bliss; but whose entire life has been a continuous satisfaction? Why is it that most of the fine poems of the world are somehow descriptive of grief? It is because men know more about sorrow than they do about joy. John Milton succeeds when he writes "Paradise Lost," but fails when he comes to write "Paradise Regained." Dante's "Inferno" is a chime of horrors. Bryant's "Thanatopsis" is a poem of tears. Take the pathos out of the writings of Tennyson and Longfellow, and you have taken three-fourths their power. John Ruskiu writes his most effective passages about the ruin of Venice. It is because men know more about sorrow than about joy that they are more effective in describing the former. The dog of bad news runs faster than the carrier-pigeon flies with good tidings. There are flushes of satisfaction in the heart; but whose life has been a prolonged delight? The soul has four ranks of keys, and the world does not know how to play on such an elaborate instrument; but religion comes, and with her right hand she touches the higher keys of the soul, and then sweeps with them the symphonies of heaven. Christ comes to find those who have been lost to happiness. He soothes them, he inspires them, he lifts them,

HE OPENS THE DOOR of the lost Eden, and invites them to come in again to peace.

Oh, how many in this house have been goaded, and stung, and plagued! Had it not been for risking your eternal interests some of you would have put an end to the scene of earthly suffering with your own hand. A deep undertone of sadness rolls through the soul. You would be willing now to give up your money, and your social position, and all you have achieved, for one day of the peace which the good old slave expressed when he said in broken language: "In owning Christ I seem to own everything. The air is mine, for I can breathe it, the sunshine is mine, for I can lie down in it." To have something of the complete satisfaction which belongs to the humblest of God's children, you would give almost anything. Oh, ye who are struck through with unrest, Christ comes to-night to give you rest. If Christ [illegible] you will be independent of all worldly circumstances. So in the hour of suffering and martyrdom was Rose Allen. When the persecutor put a candle underneath her wrist, and held it there until the sinews snapped, she said: "If you see fit you can burn my feet next, and then also my head." Christ once having taken you into his custody and guardianship, you can laugh at pain and persecution and trial. Great peace for all those whom Christ has found, and you have found Christ. Jesus comes into their sick room. The nurse may have fallen asleep in the latter watches of the night, but Jesus watches with slumberless eyes, and he puts his gentle hand over the hot brow of the patient, and says: "You will not always be sick. I will not leave you. There is a land where the inhabitant never saith: 'I am sick.' Hush, troubled soul! Peace!"

This Jesus comes

INTO A HOUSE OF BEREAVEMENT,

and he says: "I took your lost darling, I come now to make up for his absence. I wanted him at the gate when you came through. The days of your separation will only add to the joys of reunion! Peace. 'I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.'"

Just as sometimes a child is so sick that it cannot lie any longer in the cradle, and the mother has to take it up, so sometimes the Lord's children are so troubled that they cannot lie easy anywhere but in God's lap, while he bends over them and sings this sweet song: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you."

"The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,
I will not, I will not, desert to his foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake."

Again, I remark that we are lost to heaven, and Christ comes to take us there. I cannot imagine anything more distressful than, without having musical taste, to sit and listen to an oratorio for two hours and a half. Though it be the best of oratorios, if a man have no musical taste, it is distress to him, while it is joy to others. And I cannot imagine anything more distressful for a man who has no love for pictures, to be shut up in the Luxembourg gallery in Paris. Yes, I can think of one thing worse than that, and that will be for a man to enter heaven without any taste for it. I sometimes hear people talk as though all a man had to do was just to

LEAVE THIS WORLD AND GO INTO HEAVEN

and sit down to its enjoyments. If a man cannot stand Christian society here for one day, how would he stand a million ages of it? I see an unregenerate soul entering heaven. It enters heaven, looks around, and sees God there, and angels there, and hears the cry, "Holy, Holy," and the unregenerate soul says: "This is no place for me," and he flies to the battlements, and he cries, "I can stand it here no longer," and he leaps off into outer darkness. In other words, the worst hell for a man would be heaven if he has no qualifications, no preparations, for it. But Christ comes to take the discord out of our soul and string it with a heavenly attuning. He comes to take out that from us which makes us unlike heaven, and substitute that which assimilates us. Ten thousand times the gate of heaven has swung back and forth, but it never swings back and forth save as Christ opened it, and you will go in through Him or not at all. Christ wants you there. How do I know it? Suppose a man lost a diamond, and he looked for it eight or ten days, would you not conclude, from the fact that he looked for it so long, that he wanted the diamond? And when I find Christ seeking for your soul, seeking for it ever since it has been a soul, seeking for it by day and by night, seeking cold, searching for it with tears in His eyes, and blood upon His brow, and scourges on His back, and

A WORLD OF AGONY IN HIS HEART,

I know that it is because he wants to find you. Oh, He has prepared a glorious heaven for you. It is all ready. Not merely a throne, but steps by which to mount it. Not only a harp, but a song to play on it. Not only a banner procession, but a victory which it is to celebrate. God wants no vacant chairs at that banquet. He does not want those who stand around Him in glory to wonder why you have not been solicited. He does not want the book of life to thunder shout till your name is in it? What do I breathe? It is the fragrance of Him whose garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces. What do I hear? It is the footstep of Him who comes with worn sandal in the journey from Bethlehem to Nazareth, and from Nazareth to Jerusalem, and from Jerusalem to Golgotha, and from Golgotha to glory, and from glory here, seeking that which is lost. Oh, jostle Him not from thy door-step. Do not drive this Christ away, as though He were an unworthy beggar soliciting your alms. Hear His voice. Trust His sacrifices. Respond to His love. Take His heaven. Do you not know, oh man, oh woman, that you are the lost one spoken of in my text? "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost." You may hide away from Him; there are some things which will find you, whether Christ by His grace finds you or not. Trouble will find you.

TEMPTATION WILL FIND YOU.

Sickness will find you. Death will find you. Eternity will find you.

Soon you will be gone from all these scenes, and if a thousand men should come out with lanterns, and torches, and St. Bernard dogs used to hunting up missing travelers, and search for your soul, you could not be found by them. The grave will have your body. Your heirs will have your estate. Eternity will have your soul. In the flash of a second your last opportunity for heaven may go out. Postpone this question of the soul and you are postponing getting into the last lifeboat that shall put out from the wreck for the beach ere the hull lurch over and go down. God forbid that any of you should at the last have the dismay of the woman of whom I was reading. One night she could not sleep because of her soul's wandering from Christ. She got up and wrote in her diary: "One year from now I will attend to the matter of my soul." She retired, but could not sleep. She rose again, and wrote a better promise in her diary; "One month from now I will attend to the matters of my soul," She retired again, but found no sleep, and arose again and wrote: "Next week I will attend to the matters of my soul." Then she slept soundly. The next day she went into scenes of gayety. The following day she was sick, and the middle of the week she died. Delirium lifted from her mind just long enough for her to say: "I am a week too late. I am lost!" Oh, to be a year too late, or a month too late, or an hour too late—aye, to be a second too late, is to be forever too late.

A Sermon in a Sentence.

The Montreal Witness in referring to the attempted race between the British sloop yacht Genesta and the Yankee yacht Puritan, on Wednesday last, says:—

"There was but little yacht racing off Sandy Hook yesterday, but there was a great deal of true manliness and fair play exhibited and a very pretty contest in courtesy between the owners of the two champions. The foul, while the fault of the Puritan, was not a deliberate one, but was caused by the over-confidence of the Puritan's captain in the powers of his boat. Nothing could have been fairer than the judgment of the committee under the circumstances, and nothing more manly than Sir Richard Sutton's declaration that he wanted not a walk over but a race. The sons of the Vikings are brethren on either side of the sea. If the United States has no longer a merchant fleet, it is not because she cannot if she would rival England on the seas. England, while she has the ocean to herself, can well afford to yield her neighbor a yachting triumph, but should the latter spring again through free trade into nautical life, her commerce would have a life and death struggle for supremacy.

Mr. Wm. Munns, of Toronto, will speak in the Baptist Church, Smith, on Sunday morning, and in the Ashburnham Methodist Church on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Complimentary.

We take the following extract from a letter received this morning :—

"I may say that the books bound and re-"ceived by me last week were very fine. No "better binding can be seen from any bindery "in Canada. The books give great satisfac-"tion and the work is greatly admired."

The EXAMINER Book Bindery is the place to get your books neatly, cheaply and expeditiously bound.

Mr. F. S. Spence

Will speak at meetings to-night and to-morrow as follows :—Saturday, 12th Sept., Bethel Church, Otonabee ; Sunday, 13th September, a.m., Allendale Church, Otonabee ; Sunday, 13th September, afternoon, Keene Methodist Church ; Sunday, 13th September, 8.30 p.m., Peterborough Opera House. These may be the only opportunities of hearing this well-known advocate of the Scott Act before the polling day in this county.

Campaign Items.

The Scott Act Committee rooms will be open to-night from 8 until 10.

A Scott Act meeting will be held at Ashburnham on Monday evening in the Metho-Church. The Rev. Mr. Wallace will be the speaker. The structure will undoubtedly be crowded.

Remember the address by F. S. Spence, of Toronto, at the Gospel Temperance meeting in the Opera House to-morrow, Sunday, evening. Service will commence at 8.30.

THREE CHALLENGES FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Challenges for the Central District Championship from the Cannington, Orillia and Beaverton clubs are in the hands of Mr. G. H. Giroux, secretary of the Peterboroughs. That from Cannington is the first to be considered, and the match will probably take place at an early date. The challenge of the Checkers bears date of Sept. 10th, and the rules of the N. L. A. provide that no challenge for any championship match shall be received later than the 9th inst., so that it is really invalid. The matches with Cannington and Orillia cannot well be played in less than three weeks, which would bring the third well over into October. The matter, however, will be fully considered at a meeting to be held on Monday evening at the Little Windsor, and a full attendance of members is requested.

For the Collegiate Institute.

The Committee on Appointments of the Board of Education met yesterday afternoon and decided to accept the services of Miss M. E. Hunt, of Toronto, as lady teacher in the Collegiate Institute here. Miss Hunt comes highly recommended, and, although a very young lady, is an associate in arts of McGill College, Montreal.

A Year in the Central.

Albert Holbridge, a young man of about 19, was arraigned before P. M. Dumble at the police court this morning on two charges, first of stealing a horse and set of harness from Edwin Howson, a farmer near Keene, and second with, at the same time, stealing a buggy and set of harness belonging to Thomas Howson, brother of the first complainant. From the evidence, it appeared that Holbridge had engaged to work six months for Edwin Howson, and to receive in payment the horse he was accused of stealing, Howson at the same time paying him $2 a month for pocket money. Holbridge seems to have become impatient to get the horse, and on Tuesday, having served only three of the stipulated months, made off with it, taking also the buggy and two sets of harness. As was reported in the EXAMINER he came to town, and failing in his endeavours to dispose of the horse and rig here he went to Lindsay. In the meantime his employer came on here, and at the instance of Chief Johnston telegraphed Lindsay, where Holbridge was arrested. The case was clearly made out and the prisoner, who elected to be tried summarily, had no defence. Mr. Dumble committed him to the Central Prison for one year on each charge, the two sentenses to run concurrently. Holbridge was quite broken down on hearing the sentence, and when his former employer spoke kindly to him as he left the court, sobbed bitterly. Mr. Dumble pointed out to him that a man at his age had still a chance to make a name for himself and that his period of imprisonment would soon be over, and hoped he would then endeavour to make a new start in the right direction.

The Hazel Brae Lawn Social.

The second bazaar and lawn social given by the ladies of Peterborough in aid of the Hazel Brae branch of Dr. Barnardo's home was held on the grounds of that institution last evening. The latter were brilliantly illuminated with upwards of 100 Chinese lanterns, and the avenue from the entrance was lighted up by the glare of a large number of torches, the whole presenting a very pretty appearance. The attendance was large, not less than 300 people having been on the grounds. The Fire Brigade Band, which rendered gratuitous service, enlivened the proceedings with a selection of music. A large quantity of fancy articles for the bazaar had been sent in by friends of the institution, and a lively trade was carried on in them by the ladies who had undertaken this department. Tea, coffee, fruit and refreshments of various kinds were dispensed by other ladies, and many of the visitors regaled themselves at their stands. Mrs. Gen. Haultain was the central and leading spirit of the affair, and under her guidance the ladies who had undertaken the entertainment brought it to a most successful and satisfactory issue. The total receipts were $91.31, in addition to a quantity of fancy articles which will be disposed off for the benefit of the home at some future time.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

Personal.

Mr. Hugh Ross and family leave for Montreal this evening.

Mr. Baird, Bursar of the Penetanguishene Reformatory, is in town for two or three days.

Mr. Allan Jones, Post Office Inspector, from Kingston, is visiting here.

Mr. H. R. Meredith, Assistant Inspector of the Bank of Montreal, was recently in town.

Mr. H. LeBrun is in Montreal to-day, and will see the champion game between the Montreal lacrosse cracks.

Mr. H. Morris, formerly of the audit office of the Midland Railway here, and now in the claims department of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway, with headquarters at St. Louis, paid the town a visit yesterday.

A letter has been received in Cobourg from Prof. G. C. Workman, M.A., formerly Professor of Mental and Moral Science in Victoria University, now prosecuting a post-graduate course in Hebrew at the University of Leizaig, Germany. Prof. Workman's [illegible] to learn that, as he remarks, Germany thus far has been a kind foster-mother to him, and he has reason to feel profoundly grateful for the advantages of the past twelve months. Prof. Workman's address is Zieter Strasse, 1. Leipzig, Germany.

Guns and Ammunition.

I would respectfully advise the public that I have Colt's Magazine Rifles in stock as well as Winchester ; price $20. Cartridges to suit, 85c. per box. Discount for quantities as usual. Shells, Wads, Shot, Powder and Caps at very low prices. George Stethem.

The Churches.

Rev. I. Tovell will preach in George Street Methodist Church at 11 a.m., and Rev. F. H. Wallace, B. D,, at 7 p.m.

The Baptist Church pulpit is expected to be occupied by Rev. Mr. Grant, Secretary of Baptist Home Mission.

Rev. B. B. Keefer will preach in the George Street Methodist Church to-morrow evening.

Mr. Wm. Munns, who has charge of the organization of the Scott Act work for the city of Toronto, will deliver an address in the Mark Street Methodist Church to-morrow (Sunday) evening at 7 o'clock.

Hastings.

Our Council cannot be charged with extravagance in the administration of municipal affairs, as the rate for all purposes is only 9 mills on the dollar.

Tweed.

A new industry has been started near the village of Tweed, by a company that commenced on the 10th inst. to open and operate a mica mine near the village. The mine is located on the farm of Mr. Peter Cornyea, who, it is said, has sold five acres to the company for $10,000. The quality is said to be first-class.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

The Right Way.

TORONTO, 27th August, 1885.

GENTLEMEN,—We are directed by Mrs. Conger to acknowledge the prompt and courteous settlement, through you, of her claim on the British Empire Mutual Life Insurance Company for $20,000 secured by policy in her favour on the life of her husband, the late Mr. P. D. Conger. Although the conditions of your policy allow the period of one month for payment after the necessary proofs are furnished, yet in this case a cheque for the full amount, without any discount, was forwarded as soon as the proofs were completed.

Yours sincerely,
MOSS, FALCONBRIDGE & BARWICK,

MONDAY, SEPT. 14, 1885.

Personal.

Mr. Robt. Menzies, an old Peterborough boy, now of Lindsay, is in town.

Mr. Peter Hamilton left this morning for a trip to Chicago and the Western States.

Mr. G. B. Sproule and family have returned to town and business after a month's camping.

Mr. Whipple, of the Cleveland Locks Company, is in town visiting Mr. Brook, of the Peterborough Locks Company. He will probably pick up some new wrinkles respecting the making of locks, in the local factory.

Mr. C. J. Leonard, of Belleville, barrister, a former resident of this town, has, by the increase of business, found it necessary to take a partner Mr. H. O'Brien in the business.

Capt. Stapleton, quarter-master of No. 3 regiment of Cavalry, went to Kingston this afternoon to arrange for the quartering of the different troops on their arrival at the brigade camp to-morrow.

Lacrosse.

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Association at the Little Windsor this evening to consider the two championship challenges on hand, and to arrange for the matches. A full attendance is requested.

Lansdowne Rink Races.

There will be an exciting contest at the Lansdowne Rink to-night, when races against time will take place. The winners are to be those making the best distance in a two hours' skate. There are already twelve entries and more will be made before the start. This will be one of the keenest and most exciting contests that has yet taken place on the rink.

No Exemption.

It is really scandalous that the Street and Bridge Committee of our most excellent Council, should neglect to put in repair the sidewalk on the north side of such a prominent thoroughfare as Charlotte street, from George to Stewart street. The traffic over this street is next in volume to George, and the condition of the sidewalk in some places especially, is shameful. In view of the approaching fall show, when large numbers of visitors will arrive via the G. T. R. in our town, some effort should be made to put this sidewalk in thorough repair. If the corporation are too poor to put down new planks, they should at least turn the old ones which are not so thin as many are, that the weight of any ordinary person would break through as may be seen to-day. Aldermanic avoirdupois is not required to demonstrate the truth of this assertion.

Off for the Brigade Camp.

This county will be well, if not numerously, represented at the brigade camp for No. 3 Military District that will be pitched at Kingston to-morrow. None of the 57th will go, but No. 3 troop of cavalry and the local wing of the Durham Field Battery, about 20 strong, under Capt. Sanderson, will put in their annual drill. Some of the horses belonging to the Battery have been sent forward to-day, but the most of the wing will embark on the military train that starts from the G. T. R. station to-morrow morning at 7 o'clock. C troop of No. 3 regiment of cavalry will report 35 non-commissioned officers and men. The troop will be commanded by Col. H. C. Rogers (Capt.), who, being senior officer, will command the regiment in camp, Lieut. R. A. Morrow and 2nd Lieut. J. E. Hammond. Capt. Stapleton is regimental quarter-master, Sergeant W. H. Hill, regimental quarter-master sergeant and D. H. Barritt, regimental paymaster-sergeant. C Company is composed of first-rate material and may be expected to take the laurels for soldierly set-up appearance and drill again this year. The military train will be made up in Peterborough, take on the on the local detachment and pick up the others en route.

Scott Act Campaign.

Sunday Evening Mass Meeting in the Opera House—Mr. F. S. Spencer, of Toronto, Delivers an Able Address.

At 8.30 p. m. on Sunday Bradburn's Opera House was crowded throughout with an audience to listen to a gospel temperance address by Mr. F. S. Spencer, of Toronto. Mr. D. W. Dumble occupied the chair and on the platform, besides the speaker of the evening, were Rev. I. Tovell and Rev. F. H. Wallace. After the singing of the campaign "battle hymn," prayer was made by Rev. F. H. Wallace, and the speaker began by asserting that the hour had come when the people of this country were called upon

TO DECIDE BETWEEN THE RIGHT AND THE WRONG.

All agreed that temperance was right and intemperance wrong. Moral suasion as the sole means of combatting the evils of intemperance had had its day and the feasibility of making men sober by act of parliament, in face of the fact that they were made drunk by act of parliament, was becoming every day more apparent. The issue was based on the meaning of the word "temperance." It was not the moderate use of what was harmful, but total abstinence in the individual was the counterpart of prohibition in the state. The speaker then averted to the

SCRIPTURAL AND SCIENTIFIC ARGUMENTS

to be advanced against the use of alcohol. The Apostle Paul in the list of vices to be shunned, included drunkenness, and temperance was one of the virtues especially insisted on. Temperance was a virtue and the practice of virtue in its strict meaning was a "manly" subordination of appetite to will and reason. The temperance of scripture and science was total abstinence. Lager beer, a Liberal Temperance Union "harmless" beverage, was drunk for the alcohol it contained and whiskey was drunk for the same reason. The only difference in the matter was a difference of degree. Here the address took an eminently practical turn and the lecturer produced a small bottle of alcohol and two tumblers for the purpose of demonstrating visibly the effects of alcohol. It was shown that alcohol was volatile and abstracted heat, it was irritating and inflamatory in its action, it was stupifying and it paralyzed the nervous system. Its astringent and hardening qualities were shown by its action on the albumen of an egg, upon which the speaker poured alcohol with the effect of almost immediately hardening it. Alcohol was declared not to be a food. The double function of food was to repair waste and to generate heat, Alcohol did neither, but, taken into the stomach, it had the effect of paralyzing the nerves of that organ and of hardening the food it contained. The case of Alexis St. Martin and the experiments of Dr. Beaumont were cited to show the injurious effects of alcohol on the stomach. When lying down the pulse was less frequent and the heart was thereby allowed rest, but if alchhol was taken the pulse would be quickened, and the heart was worked harder and the sleeper woke unrefreshed. Alcohol favoured the formation of fat by preventing the elimination of fatty matter, and thereby it favoured the fatty degeneration of the heart and other internal organs. The fat produced by spirit drinking was an accumulation of unhealthy fat and effete matter—it was not a sign of health. Alcohol was not even warming, its apparent affect in this way being due to a paralasy's of the superficial nerves, admitting of expansion of the cuticular blood vessels. Alcohol was pointed out as a specific poison

OPERATING MOST POWERFULLY ON THE BRAIN

hardening it as the alcohol hardened the albumen of the egg. The terrible effects of alcohol on the human system were then graphically pictured, and the ground taken that as enjoined by both Scripture and science, was the only basis of dealing with the evil of intemperance. Temperance could have no other meaning than total abstinence. As to its political application, it was shown that as a Christian people, our laws were founded upon the laws of God, of which they must be a reflex. As alcohol affected the individual, so did it affect the State, and temperance meant total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the State. God's way of dealing with sin was not by restriction and regulation, but by prohibition and by that alone. If anything were wrong, God forbade it, he did not tolerate it to the slightest extent. His way was

TOTAL ABSTINENCE,

SUPPRESSION, NOT REGULATION.

The plea that prohibition was an invasion of the liberty of the subject next received attention. God's first law was a sumptuary one, and restricted the liberty of action of our first parents in the choice of food. Freedom for the right meant suppression of the wrong. The temperance people believed in liberty, but they wanted liberty to do only that which was right. The essence of British liberty was that no man was allowed to do another wrong, and why was not that principle to be applied to the suppression of the drink traffic? There was no other way to prevent and put a stop to the making of drunkards except by prohibition. So long as a license law prevailed, so long was no man's son safe from the danger of becoming a drunkard. The speaker closed an excellently delivered and logical address by appealing eloquently to the people to vote for the Scott Act on the 24th of September.

Mr. Spence is certainly the most effective and argumentative speaker that has yet spoken on the subject here.

Woven Wire Spring Beds, warranted; only $5.00, and a good line of Mattresses and Feather Pillows at A. Clegg's.

Toronto Topics.

The coming Young Liberal Convention is attracting increased attention. So far as can be at present learned the meeting will be without prejudice, and it is impossible to predict what resolutions will be carried. The question of Canadian independence will be brought up by individual members if not under the auspices of the committee on resolutions. Another preliminary meeting will be held on Monday evening.

Belleville.

The entries made with Mr. Wm. Davis, secretary, for the stallion race on the first day of the West Hastings show, Sept. 23rd, are :—J. C. Sanford, Brighton, b. s. "Revenue." Dr. Willoughby, Colborne, b. s. "Aberkonian." Potter & Williams, Napanee, b. s. "Glenelg." F. Gauthier, Belle[illegible]

Sidney, his entered his stallion, but did not give his name.—Ontario.

Bobcaygeon.

The twelve head of Polled Angus cattle, from Big Island, which left here on Saturday last, to attend the Dominion Exhibition, at London, and the Industrial, at Toronto, have already made a good beginning. According to a despatch received from London, the herd has taken :—First prize for aged bull, with King of Trumps (2895); first for yearling bulls, with Abbotsford; second and third for cows, with Wanton (4610), and Caroline II. of Kildrummy (3814); first for two year old heifer, first for heifer calf, and second for fat cow.—Independent.

Provincial Exhibition.

The Dominion Exhibition.

Friday was the last great day of the Dominion Exhibition in London, and the attendance ran up to 15,000. The management of the exhibition have, as the Council of the Agriculture and Arts Association always do, excluded from the grounds all gambling devices and other objectionable features which in past years were tolerated at the London local show to the annoyance of respectable visitors. The provincial model farm dairy exhibit has attracted a great deal of attention as it is doing in Toronto. There are three departments of dairy work in operation, centrifugal separation of cream, making butter and the testing of milk for dairy purpose. The tests are scientifically made with any milk brought for the purpose and most of those who have got milch cows on exhibition have availed themselves of the chance of finding out the character of their milk. A small but well arranged exhibit from Manitoba is also an object of great interest.

Ontario Crops.

Reduced Estimate of Spring Wheat and Fall Wheat.

Mr. Blue, Secretary of the Bureau of Industries, has issued the following summary of reports received on the staple crops of the Province and revised estimates of the produce of crops, based on returns by seven hundred and thirty-one correspondents, made under date of the 3rd inst.

The following table gives the revised estimates of the crops according to returns dated September 3, compared with similar estimates dated Aug. 5 :—

Book Notice.

Godey's Lady's Book for October is a brilliant number, opening with a handsome steel engraving of "The Lady of Lyons." This picture illustrates the story of Bulwer's famous drama of that title, which has been carefully transcribed for the magazine in a narrative form. "The Lady of Lyons" is a fine piece of work. The subject is one of high literary and dramatic merit, Pauline being a character made famous by the authorship of genius and the histrionic talent of the best actresses the world over. A novel design in colors for a sofa pillow or quilt accompanies the usual illustration, and the story matter presents some notable features. "The Yoke of Honor" approaches a final climax, having held the interest of its readers to the very end. Miss Emily Read, the authoress of "Wearithorne," has a strong dramatic story entitled "Another Christabel," and Max Vander Weyde continues his observations on Phillipa's clever doings; the subject of this month's article is the decoration of interiors with rustic work, leaves and grasses. The more serious matter in this issue is represented by "Three Letters from Herat." There are several pretty poems, and a bright story called "Alice and I." The number closes with a full Arm Chair and a readable Book Table. The new subscribers are promised some rare inducements, and the older ones find the attractions of the book strong enough to hold their interest. Godey's compares favorably with the best publications of its kind in this or any other country. It aims to be, and certainly is, a LADY'S BOOK par excellence.

Pilching Flowers.

Mr. Adam Dobbin, acting guardian angel of Court House Park, has a hard time in watching flower filchers and small boys. On Sunday night two fine foliage plants were stolen from the central flower plot. The tracks left by the thief leaves no room to doubt that the culprit was a woman. Mr. Dobbin says he has more trouble with the women than any other class. They sit down in front of the flowers, pretending to admire them, with their backs to Adam. They spread out their skirts as widely as possible and under cover thereof, uproot some choice plant and slip it into a hand bag or under their clothing. He has detected two or three at that sort of thing. Ladies have free run in stealing our hearts and the loose change in the nocturnal pantaloons, but Adam draws the line at flowers. He asserts that if any woman is detected hereafter, her sex shall not protect her from his vengeance. The original Adam got into considerable trouble with a woman, and the curse still seems to cling to his namesake.

ROME, Sept. 12.—Only a few cases of cholera are reported in infected Italian towns.

A Famine in India Probable.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 12.—No doubt remains but that a terrible famine is impending in India. The crops in the Deccan have all failed for want of rain, while in Bengal the crops are ruined by an excess of rain and floods.

The country for miles about Calcutta is completely submerged. Nearly all the railways in the province are injured by the floods and land-slides. The railway at Luckersera has been completely swept away. Public subscriptions have been started here and in all the large towns. All possible preparations are being made to provide against famine, which is now inevitable, and to mitigate its horrors.

The Hog Cholera in Iowa.

BREDA, Iowa, Sept. 12.—Cholera has broken out among the hogs here, and serious damage has already resulted. It is reported that some farmers have lost from 26 to 160 head. Nearly 2,000 dead hogs have been reported. Hogs and corn are the two chief sources of revenue for the farmers here, and if the disease is not checked soon it is destined to cause a serious financial depression throughout this part of the country, if not the entire north-western part of the State. Most of last year's corn has been fed to hogs, and many farmers have practically nothing else to depend upon in meeting their payments.

THE SPRING WHEAT CROP.

The estimate of the spring wheat crop in Ontario, as issued by the Bureau for the month of August, has been reduced for the month of September by over five million bushels, or over one third, equal, without counting the deterioration of the remainder of the crop, to a loss to the country of about five million and a half dollars. The murky, moist weather which prevailed in August induced rust, which destroyed the crop in Western Ontario completely, and though that in Eastern Ontario did not suffer so much, yet it was attacked by midge and weevil, so that the grain is small in quantity and poor and shrunken as to quality. The fall wheat crop, which is the most important one, has not been injured; on the contrary, it is thrashing out better than was generally expected, so that the estimate has been slightly increased. The estimates of other grains, as will be seen by the table published in another column, are somewhat reduced.

THE USELESS AND COSTLY SENATE.

The Senate of the Dominion of Canada has never done anything to show that it is "worth it's salt," not to speak of the immense sums it costs and the uniquitous legislation it introduces or confirms. The Hamilton Times puts the matter very tersely and pointedly:—The last session of Parliament lasted six months. The Senate met on 87 days. The average sitting was two hours long. The Senators received $1,500 each and mileage. The sessional expenditure upon the Senate was $175,000, equal to a capitalized sum of $3,500,000. The Senators were paid at the rate of $8.62 per hour for the time they worked. Worked? They did no work. They carried no Bills of importance. They did nothing to revise hasty legislation nor did they make any effort to prevent unjust legislation. The Franchise Bill, which was a direct attack upon the rights of the Provinces, was swallowed by the Senate at a gulp, just as the Gerrymander Act was adopted three years before. The Senators meet, and yawn, and compare notes about their rheumatism, but many of them are too old to be capable of attending to business, and the rest have no business to do. Any one who has visited the Senate Chamber at Ottawa knows that Canada does not get value for the money expended upon that institution. Then why should the Senate be retained?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau will sail from France for home on the 24th, completely restored in health. The Secretary of State is hardly a Scott Act man. The same day that he takes to salt water is the day the Scott Act advocates hope the people of this country will take to fresh water.

There is no domain of social or domestic life sacred from taxation of the National Policy. Necessities, luxuries are all alike made to pay. The oyster season is at hand and the people can appreciate the policy that imposes a morsel of taxation with every mollusk swallowed. The duty is as follows: Oysters shelled in bulk a specific duty of 10 cents per gallon; oysters in cans not over pint 3 cents per can, including cans; oysters in quart cans 5 cents per can, including cans; cans exceeding one quart in capacity and additional specific duty for each quart or fraction of quart including the cans, 5 cents; oysters in the shell 25 cent ad valorem. The only duty before on this class of goods was 1½ cents per can.

Toronto Industrial Exhibition.

A Good Exhibit.

TORONTO, Sept. 12,—The attendance at the Industrial Exhibition, yesterday, was very large for a first week day, the weather being extremely fine. The speeding of horses in the ring was only a limited success, owing to the heavy state of the track from recent rains. It has been definitely decided that no review of the volunteers will take place on the Exhibition grounds, owing to the want of new uniforms for the Northwest veterans. The restaurant accommodation is much better this year than ever before, but there is a great want of public conveniences. As the exhibits take their final shape the great superiority of this year's show becomes more clearly apparent. The superabundance of musical instruments, most of which are kept in almost constant use, is as striking as the deficiency in paintings. The inside show is also particularly strong in stoves, several firms having made special efforts to appear to good advantage.

SUMMARY OF HOTEL

A Seaside Boarder Who Lives on Cucumbers.

Several years ago in walking along the half submerged fringing reef of the Tortugas group of islands, my attention was attracted by numbers of great black, worm-like creatures that were strewn over the bottom just within the breakers, where the water was smooth. They were Holothurians, or sea-cucumbers. Wishing to secure a large specimen, I hailed my boat over among them, and soon had one more than a foot in length in the glass jar, or portable aquarium, carried for that purpose.

Another was lifted from its sandy bed for examination, and a curious creature it was. It seemed like a great, grotesque caterpillar, made out of leather and stuffed with water, as the handling caused it to eject two streams of water with considerable force. After placing it upon the seat of the boat we found that the creature had ejected all its interior organs—actually thrown them all out. This would have been a grievous calamity to almost any animal, but curiously enough, they have the power of producing lost parts to a wonderful degree, and if placed back in the water would soon provide themselves with an entirely new set.

If we should follow up our investigations of the anatomy of the sea-cucumber we should find that it breathes by what is called a water-vascular system. In the star-fish a hard red spot is seen upon the upper surface, punctured with minute holes. Through this water is strained and taken in, passing out into the arms and filling the sac-like feet. In the sea-cucumber there is a similar arrangement, only the madreporic plate, as the pink sieve is called, is on the inside.

Though certainly not gourmands, starvation affects them in a remarkable way. Thus, if kept a long time without food, a ring will be formed about the tail that grows deeper and deeper, until finally the piece drops off. In a short time another ring appears and another piece is sacrificed—a most remarkable operation, you will say, but quite ingenious when we understand it.

The animal is merely retrenching, and, as the food supply becomes smaller and smaller, portions of the body are thrown off, so that there will not be so much to feed, until, at last, the sea-cucumber will sacrifice its entire body to save the mouth or head, and finally this dies, certainly after a heroic struggle.

But, while we have been looking at other sea-cucumbers, what has happened to the one we placed in the glass jar? Being a large animal, it soon exhausted the air in the water, and is now endeavoring to get out, twisting its body deliberately about to show its discomfor for you must remember that the sea-cucumber and all other water animals require air just as much as ourselves.

For a few moments the sea-cucumber writhed about in its lazy fashion, when, all at once, out of one end I saw peeping a curious, delicate head.

A moment later it was still further out—a transparent, shining fish, and soon, with a convulsive wiggle, it freed itself from its strange prison and swam about a moment; then it settled to the bottom.

Its body w so delicate and transparent that print could almost be read through it, and a specimen that I have before me now, though shrunk and hardened in alcohol for several years, is still almost like glass.

How did the fish get into the sea-cucumber? you will ask. This was, at first, a puzzle, and to ascertain whether it was accidental or not, we collected a large number of the cucumbers, (Holothuria floridiana), and in nearly every case, as soon as the animal had exhausted the air in our aquarium, the silvery, eel-like Fierasfer—for this is the fish's name—would come wiggling out, swim about a moment, as if dazed and bewildered, and then sink to the bottom and die.

It was evident that the fish was not eaten by the Holothurian, and equally plain that the fish was not adapted for the outside world. Hence, we assumed that the Fierasfer was a boarder in the cucumber, and such is really the case.

But, though I made many experiments, the fish could never be induced to return to its home, though freshly aerated water was constantly supplied.

The explanation that seemed the most tenable was that the fish never left the holuthurian; but this was highly improbable, and so the puzzle remained until it was solved by the curator of the great aquarium at Naples, Italy.

He found that his sea-cucumbers were also inhabited by a Fierasfer, and by carefully watching them he saw the fishes come out and return.

In the large tank the fishes ventured out, swam around, probably fed, and finally returned; and here is the most remarkable thing about it. Instead of returning head first, as you would naturally expect, the Fierasfer slipped, not its head, but the tip of its tail into the orifice.

In a moment, the sea-cucumber relaxed to draw in water, and the cunning fish slipped in an inch, then rested; another relaxation by the cucumber, and another inch gained, and so on until, to the amazement of the Italian naturalist, the Fierasfer disappeared, tail first, within the very accommodating animal.

The Fierasfer, then, is a boarder in the sea-cucumber, a tenant that not only lives upon its host without pay, but does not hesitate to attack it when hungry. This has been proved by Prof. Semper, who found pieces of the water-lung of the living hotel in the stomach of the boarder; but, as we have seen, the former has the power of reproducing lost parts, and probably does not suffer. The boarder undoubtedly feeds upon the food taken by its host.—Prof Holden in Golden Days.

A London contemporary is authority for the statement that a young doctor has made a great professional success in that metropolis by his politeness. He was consulted by a lady who suffered from cold feet. "The reason of your cold feet, madam," said the doctor, "is that they are not large enough to hold blood sufficient to heat them." Since then all the pretty girls in London swear by him, and some of our young doctors might do a good business these hard times by profiting by his example.

TOGETHER IN DEATH.

It was a bright starlit night, a faint breeze tempering the heat that had been more than oppressive all day, and Charles Hamilton stood idly enjoying it, as well as a first-class Havana, from the veranda of the little hotel where he had taken up his abode for the time being.

He was a very handsome man, this Charles Hamilton—tall, and finely-built, with a fair face, laughing blue eyes, and a tawny silken moustache shading his handsome mouth, with wavy hair, of the same leonine shade, tossed carelessly back from a broad white brow a dangerously handsome man, with that easy nonchalant air that is generally more powerful in helping to win a woman's heart than any other gift a man can possess.

He was down here in Mexico, partly on business and partly on pleasure, and his stop promised to be quite long, as things looked then.

Out on the night air music was floating towards him—not a very high class of music, but still inspiriting or dreamy, as it was time about, it was far from unpleasant.

"I don't see," he said, taking the cigar from between his lips, "how on earth the Mexicans can stand their weekly fandango, and above all, in such weather as this. By George! it would be worth while to go over to have a laugh, if nothing else. If there was one pretty woman there, I might pass an hour or two, for it is confoundedly slow here.

"In novels I have read of the beauty of the 'dark-eyed daughters of the sunny south,' and pictured houris with my boyish brains; but alas! for dreams—even a good-looking one I have failed to see. 'Dark-eyed daughters,' the poetry is very good, and their eyes are dark, no doubt, but then the rest of them is so very much the same way, one gets mixed; but," flinging the cigar away, "I will pay them a visit, but I will not stay twenty minutes, except I meet a pretty Mexican maiden."

A few minutes later he was in the hall where the fandango was in full bloom, and then—then he did see a pretty Mexican maiden.

Yet pretty was hardly the word to apply to the little dark-eyed beauty his eyes fell upon.

She was small and daintily formed, and her face was a picture in its coloring, form and expression.

She was very dark—purely olive, but a crimson flush glowed warmly on her cheeks, and warmer still in her curving lips; her eyes were wells of dreamy light, and shaded by silken lashes, and a cloud of ebon hair, bound back by a glittering band, fell in waves below her waist.

So Charles Hamilton stayed, and little dreamed that the time would come when, in bitter anguish, he would curse the day he met Francoise, the beauty of the ball.

But he met her and managed to make her acquaintance, and danced with her more than once, despite the heat of the night; looked into her deep eyes, admired her hair; then went back to the hotel and laughed at the whole affair.

After that, however, he managed to meet her again, and the again became many times, till at length, her beauty telling upon him, he yielded himself up to the enjoyment of it.

Not that for a moment he loved, or even believed he loved, the little Mexican; but her homage pleased him and her beauty charmed him.

Perhaps Charles Hamilton never really gave one serious thought to what he was doing, winning a passionate young heart to a madness of love, then smiling at how plainly she showed it.

Yet this man was capable of love—love deep and strong, and a love already given.

Sometimes there rose before him the haughty young face of the girl he loved, with its great brown eyes and satin smooth skin, and crown of waving chestnut hair, its perfect features and curving mouth; and then—well, then for a while he repented his love-making to Francoise, not from any thought of her, however, nor pity for the passionate young heart he had won, but simply because it came to him how Viviane Wentworth's beautiful lips would curve with disdain if she knew of it—how her eyes would darken with scorn, not of Francoise and her untutored heart, but disdain of him, her lover, whom she had trusted so entirely.

Then in the midst of all, a letter came, and one that for the moment took his breath away, for it was from Viviane's uncle.

He was coming down himself to see about something he felt he could best superintend in person, and he was bringing Viviane with him.

Charles was with Francoise when the letter was given to him, and he opened and read it.

"Viviane coming here!" he said aloud in his surprise, forgetting for the moment that Francoise was beside him.

Whatever the Mexican girl read in his face, her own suddenly blanched, and a passionate light shot into her dusky eyes, momentarily changing them for the moment.

She caught his hand with both her tender brown hands, and looked up into his face.

"Who is Viviane?" she said.

A flush rose to his face.

"A friend of mine," he answered slowly.

"A friend [illegible] tell me—[illegible]"

"It is [illegible] me," he finished her hands from his arm.

"Enough!" he said; "that is rather too much to ask, Francoise."

"But you love me—you have told me so. You have sworn it to me many times," she said.

"Men utter many things," he said.

"A lover? Then you are my lover. Tell me it again as you told it me before—the time you kissed me."

His face grew more annoyed, but if Francoise noticed it this time she gave no sign, only clung closer to him, her beautiful eyes fixed on his face, her long hair falling like a cloak around her.

It was not pleasant now to Charles Hamilton, with the knowledge that the [illegible] was coming [illegible] to be reminded of his treachery to her.

He remembered his own last words as he had kissed her good-bye:

"Keep this kiss for me, my darling, till I claim it, and I will keep mine for you."

"Your kiss will burn my lips till you return," she had answered, and he knew she had kept her word, and her kiss—ah, he had wiped it away many times on the red lips of Francoise.

A silence fell between him and Francoise now, and he felt her hands drop from his arm as a shudder swept over her.

He glanced at her, and noticing her pallor, felt how contemptible his act had been—felt it this time, not only in memory of Viviane, but in sorrow for the girl herself.

He saw that her eyes had turned in the direction of the blue waves that lay below them.

She seemed to feel his gaze, and she turned her eyes suddenly back to his face, and their expression startled him.

"Do you know," she said, "I would sooner leap into that water there, never to rise again, than know you loved another; but, ah!" with a low laugh, "I could not lie there if I left you with her."

The next moment, without waiting for him to speak, she turned and left him.

One week later, Viviane Wentworth and her uncle arrived in Mexico, and Charles Hamilton clasped the girl he loved so dearly, despite his love-making to Francoise, close to his bosom again.

A few days passed, during which Viviane rested. Then she announced herself ready to see the sights.

"I would like to see the great cliff," she said; 'the one you mentioned in your letter."

Charles Smiled.

"It is very near the home of Mrs. King," he said. "I wrote you of her, also; she was the dearest friend my mother ever had, though Mexico has been her home for years. My most pleasant hours here have been spent with her."

Most likely when he sai that he forgot the hours spent with a little dark-eyed beauty, beneath odorous Southern tress, or rambles through valleys and dells, when the same little beauty was his companion.

He had only seen Francoise once since Viviane had arrived, and that time something in her manner had given him a vague feeling of annoyance—a feeling he found it strangely hard to banish.

Looking in the fair pure face of Viviane, he wondered how for a moment he had let the dark beauty of Francoise move him—how for an instant he had yielded to its spell.

A vague feeling—could it be fear?—haunted him, and Francoise's face rose before him as he had seen it last, all the bloom faded from it, the strange passionate light in the beautiful eyes.

He tried to banish all memory of it in the light of his darling's presence, in the joy of her smile, and the music of her voice.

He tried, and he succeeded, and his heart was light enough the day he dropped a line to Mrs. King, telling her he was bring Viviane to see her.

The morn of the appointed day rose fair and clear; not a cloud dimmed the azure of the sky, and Viviane came down all smiles for her visit, feeling sure she would like Mrs. King from her lover's description.

Charles' spirits were light as well, and any fears he had about Francoise he had put aside with a firm will, and almost laughed at the forebodings that had haunted him for some time.

Early in the afternoon the horses stood waiting, and soon Viviane came down in her riding-habit to where her lover awaited her.

How proud he was of her, how rarely fair she was, the deep blue of her close-fitting habit making the purity of her complexion more noticeable, as well as displaying her beautiful form perfectly.

In his after life, when all hope was dead, and living itself was bitter as death, Charles Hamilton never forgot that ride with his darling. Her words, her smiles, her every attitude lived with him forever.

Soon they reached the pretty sequestered home of Mrs. King.

As they approached the door after dismounting, their hostess met them with out-stretched hands, welcoming with smiles the beautiful girl she was prepared to love.

After they had spent about an hour with Mrs. King a messenger followed them. Viviane's uncle must see Charles at once about something concerning the mines. He could return in an hour or two, if he pleased.

Mrs. King would not hear of Viviane returning with him, and Viviane seemed willing enough to stay till his return.

"I will return as quickly as possible, my Viviane," he said, with a proud possession in his tone that made Mrs. King smile.

Half an hour after Charles rode away, Viviane announced to Mrs. King that she was going up the cliff.

"My head aches slightly," she said, "and a walk will do it good."

"I would accompany you," the elder lady said, "but for years I have been unable to walk any distance. But why not wait till Charles' return?"

"He will be late, I know," Viviane answered. "and I must have time to drink in all the beauties of the scene, if it is such as is described."

Ten minutes later, Viviane was on her way, and just as the sun was setting she reached the point where the view was finest.

A low exclamation of delight left her lips, and then she became conscious some one was behind her; and turning, she looked into a brilliant dark face, with passionate gleaming eyes—the beautiful face of Francoise, the Mexican girl.

For a moment the girls stood looking at each other; then Francoise spoke:

"You are the one he loves, I the one he won with false promises and vows."

Something in the gleaming eyes struck terror to Viviane's soul, but she spoke calmly:

"Of whom do you speak?"

"Of your lover—Charles Hamilton."

"And he made love to you!" Viviane said, speaking mechanically, for she could scarcely realize the truth.

Charles Hamilton had made love to this dark-faced girl while [illegible] made love to me, and taught me to worship him. "But I am going to pay him back in a way he little dreams of."

[illegible] did not mean any [illegible] to kill herself, and at [illegible] way up [illegible] Mrs King [illegible] only long enough [illegible] ve his [illegible], when [illegible] that Viviane had gone alone.

A terrible fear, which he could hardly account for, took possession of him. Ah, Heavens! how soon was he to know what the foreboding meant!

As Francoise spoke the last words she drew nearer to Viviane, and pointed to the water.

"That would cool my brain," she said; "but I told him I could never rest while he lived for you, and so you and I will die together."

A shriek rang from Viviane's lips, a shriek aeard by her lover, who dashed up the cliff, almost realizing the truth.

Another wild agonized shriek in his ears, then a turn in the cliff, and then the two struggling forms on the top of it.

Then Francoise saw him, and a wild laugh rang from her lips, and then—oh, God! the cliff was empty.

Like a madman Charles dashed along, intending to leap off the cliff, but suddenly his foot struck a rock, and the next moment he had fallen forward, a ghastly wound in his forehead—a wound that took away his senses for many a day; but when consciousness did come back, he only wished he had died, for the story they told him wrecked his life forever.

Francoise and Viviane had been washed ashore still clasped in each other's arms, and the people, not knowing the truth, had buried them together, to sleep till the last great day, when all will awake together.

They told him how the two beautiful faces had lain together—the lily-fair one of his darling, the olive dark face of Francoise; the cloud of bright hair of his love mingled with the raven tresses of the Mexican maiden; and he spoke no word. For what could he say? His heart was buried in the grave of Viviane and in the grave of Francoise as well.

Another woman he never wooed, another woman he never won—grey-haired and old before his time, he will go down to the grave faithful to her to whom his faithlessness for a little while had brought the mystery of death—the mystery of life as well, in the brightness of happy youth.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

This Season.

Fair, VanEvery & Co'y have opened a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps, in many styles, much below regular prices. Don't fail to see them.

Baptist Church.

Rev. E. W. Dadson, editor of the Canadian Baptist, the connexional organ, preached two magnificent sermons in the Murray Street Baptist Church last Sunday morning and evening. Rev. Mr. Munro, the pastor, will be in his place next Sunday.

Gentlemen

will find at the "Golden Lion" an elegant stock of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, Over-coating, Rubber Over-coats, Furnishings, Underwear, &c. Tailoring a specialty—and a first-class cutter at your command.

Will be Popular There.

A new book has been issued under the title "Talks to Homely Girls." The book agent will make his fortune with this book in Lindsay. The girls there will hail with delight the chance of somebody talking to them, if it is only the author of a book.

True to Date.

The Lindsay Post, referring to the recent baseball match, which did not come off, on account of the rain, says:—"The Peterboroughs kept the engagement in the most business-like manner, and it is very creditable to that club that they came to Lindsay to be in readiness, although the weather looked to be very unfavorable when they left home. * * * The Lindsay club have certainly nothing to complain of now, and must when they engage to go to Peterborough see that such engagement is kept."

Improvement.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson is making substantial improvements to his fine property on Stewart street. On the Stewart street side he has placed a very handsome boulevard, which adds greatly to the beauty of his neatly kept residence premises. On the Sherbrooke and Bethune street fronts he is erecting three new tenement structures in red brick, which will be a decided improvement to the locality. Mr. Ferguson apparently does not believe in paying taxes on vacant lots or in being left behind in the race of improvement.

Justice's Justice.

This morning Albert Buffery, a fallen-from-grace salvationist, was arraigned before the Police Magistrate charged by Chief Johnston, who had arrested him, with drunken and disorderly conduct on Saturday night. He pleaded guilty so pathetically that his worship released him on the charge with a caution. But Buffery's trials were not over. It appears that he is a painter and that on Saturday night while under the influence of drink he visited the paint office of Mr. Thos. McGrath, for whom he had been working, and raised a ruction, breaking some glass, and conducting himself so badly that he had to be put out. For this offence he was fined $2 and costs and $1 damages or 10 days in jail. Having more time than money he elected to take the days, and is now pining behind prison bars. At the same time he preferred a charge of assault against Mr. McGrath. The latter apparently used more vigor than was necessary to eject Mr. Buffery from his premises; and a fine of $5 was imposed.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Scott Act Committee, Ward One, will be held at the head-quarters to-night, at 8.

A Conference Called.

We hear that a circular has been issued calling a conference of citizens to have a quiet talk over the exemptions question.

To Subscribers.

Subscribers to the DAILY EVENING EXAMINER will greatly oblige us by reporting promptly any neglect in the delivery of their paper.

Fair, VanEvery & Co.

have imported this season a most complete assortment of Mourning Goods, ranging from the new Crepe Epingle, Jet Cashmeres, French Silk Crapes, &c., to the more artistic Black Crape Bonnets, Caps, &c.

W. C. T. U.

A largely attended meeting of the W.C. T.U. was held on Saturday afternoon in the [illegible] ladies on "Woman's work in connection with the Scott Act," giving a most interesting account of the Scott Act work performed by the ladies in other counties in which it had been submitted, and showed the great influence that could be exerted by them.

Guns and Ammunition.

I would respectfully advise the public that I have Colt's Magazine Rifles in stock as well as Winchester; price $20. Cartridges to suit, 85c. per box. Discount for quantities as usual. Shells, Wads, Shot, Powder and Caps at very low prices. George Stethem.

Stock for the Industrial.

This morning Mr. Joseph Redmond, the veteran stock breeder of Otonabee, shipped for the Industrial Exhibition, Toronto several heads of thoroughbred stock. They are prime animals, and it will take some very superior cattle to get ahead of them on the prize lists. We hope to have the pleasure of inspecting Mr. Redmond's medals and diplomas when he returns from Toronto.

Scott Act Notes.

A Scott Act meeting will be held to-night in the Ashburnham Methodist Church. The Rev. Mr. Wallace will deliver the address.

The Scott Act Ward Committees will meet on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week. Mr. W. G. Fee, county organizer, will conduct the proceedings on Friday night.

The W. C. T. U. are holding a special meeting in reference to Scott Act work this afternoon.

Sunday Rowdyism.

A jury of about twenty young toughs held a carnival of Sabbath desecration yesterday in No. 4 ward. They have among them three or four revolvers and several boxes of cartridges, and they amused themselves by shooting across a street north of the Methodist cemetery, at a target placed on the opposite side of the street. The pastime was hardly a proper one for the Sabbath day, and besides it was not without danger, for a gentleman taking a quiet stroll in that quarter, came very near being perforated by a stray bullet.

Opening a New Street.

Work is being pushed on the opening of Bolivar street, a new thoroughfare that is being opened from the boundary to Park street, through the Burnham property. The work is getting on finely, the owners of property bestowing voluntary labor. Mr. E. Burnham gave a width of 66 feet through the whole length of the street. Property owners on the new street gave $150 and the town $100. The opening of this street makes several choice lots for building purposes and it is probable that they will be taken up rapidly.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the [illegible] made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

Souvenir Number.

We have received from the publishers part II. of the Souvenir Number of the Illustrated War News. This part contains the history of the rebellion from the battle of Fish Creek to the conclusion of the trial of Riel, and is illustrated by eight pages of engravings, two of which are double-page pictures. As a supplement to this part, the publishers have prepared a lithograph, printed in 15 tints, entitled, "The Volunteers' Return," which is really a fine piece of work, and the subject very appropriate. The engraving represents the meeting between a party of volunteers and their parents, wives and children, and the grouping of the figures and general design of the plate is very fine. Every person who has been on service himself, or any one who has had friends or relatives among the brave boys, can appreciate the sentiment conveyed. Parts 1 and 2 of the Souvenir Number can be had either separately or in one volume, in paper covers, from all newsdealers. These two parts form a complete letter-press and illustrated history of the rebellion. Everyone interested in the history of Canada should secure a copy.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

What We May Expect.

Fine weather this week.

The electors to be talked full of the Scott Act.

Mr. Carnegie to commence a new industry in the brick works—without exemption.

The Rathbun's to not open their coal yard this season.

Councillor Davidson to run a Colonization Company in the Northwest.

Adam Dobbin to sleep in the band stand in the park after last night.

And shoot somebody with his lawn sprinkler.

What they are Saying.

Only one constable needed when we get the Scott Act.—John A. Nicholls.

In that case we'll all vote against it.—The Police Force.

Me too.—Tommy Beavis.

I expect big contributions to my Endowment scheme.—Principal Grant.

But, you know, we're just after building a new church.—The congregation of St Paul's.

We have splendid ink now.—The school teachers.

And no excuse for not giving proper attention to writing.—The Inspector.

You's a fine boulevard Mr. W. G. Ferguson has put in fornist his place.—Street Inspector Wilson.

Three for you—I'm the b'y that done it—Johnny Cousins.

What hussy stole my foliage plants last night?—Adam Dobbin.

What We Would Like to Know.

If Goldwin Smith is really coming to Peterborough.

If Mr. Spence finds it ex-spence-ive to carry the "pure stuff about with him.

If the prayer meetings in all the churches have been cancelled in favor of the opera house meeting.

If many Peterboroughonians will visit the Industrial this week.

Why the Central Exhibition is not being boomed.

In what part of the next century the Trent Valley Canal will be completed.

Why Peterborough is not the head centre for the collection of inland revenue for Peterborough, Port Hope, Cobourg and Lindsay.

Why Mr. Spence didn't tell the people how the Scott Act was going to do it.

Great Activity

in the Mantle and Dress Making Department at Fair, VanEvery & Co's. Ladies will appreciate the large assortment of handsome materials from which Rich and Elegant Mantles and Dresses are being turned out daily.

A Woman at the Bottom of it.

"The trouble between Germany and Spain is the same old story," remarked Mr. Podsnap to his wife.

"What same old story?" queried Mrs. P.

"Why, there's a woman at the bottom of it, as usual."

"How so?"

"Why, it's all about Caroline something or other—I forget her other name."

"Caroline Islands, is it not?" suggested she.

"Yes, that's it."

Mrs. Podsnap did not enlighten her liege Lord. She will spring his mistake on him some day when she has a point to make.

Warriors Off and Away.

C Troop Cavalry and the Field Battery Leave for Camp.

This morning the Peterborough contingent to the Kingston camp started for the Limestone City. At 7 o'clock the horses of the tooopers were put on board the cars at the G.T.R. station. The full number of 35 men and horses reported for the journey, including the officers and non-commissioned officers mentioned in yesterday's EXAMINER. The superior character of the horses, which was equalled by that of the men, was the subject of liberal comment by the few spectators assembled to see the warriors off. The Peterborough wing of the Durham field battery was also on hand. This was commanded by Captain Sanderson, assisted by Sergeant-Major Metheral and Sergeant Snider. The following are the names of the gunners (21) who left this morning for camp:—Messrs. Haultain, Hamilton, Spensely, Errett, Fitzgerald, Chrow, Robertson, Lannan, Davis, Bacon, Morgan, Donovan, Donovan, Moore, Huffman, Sharp, Kincaid, Lilly, Scott, Whelan and Lillico. The latter, however, went forward yesterday with the horses to be attached to the battery during the annual drill. It was after eight o'clock considerably before the military train got off for Port Hope. The boys will arrive in Kingston and camp this afternoon, where they will be met by Quartermaster Stapleton and Quartermaster-Sergeant Hill, with refreshments and a hearty welcome. The discipline of the camp will this year be of a strict character—discipline as well as drill—the object being to fit men as far as possible for active service. Special instructions have been issued to ensure a more efficient target practice. The sale of spirituous liquors and the playing of all party tunes by military bands is strictly prohibited. There will be little time for "soldiering," and yet a good deal of real soldiering, as will be seen by the following programme for drill, etc. :—

Morning Parade	from 6:30 a.m. to 8 a.m.
Breakfast	8 a.m.
Second Parade	10 a.m. to 12 noon
Dinner	12:30 p.m.
Afternoon Parade	2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.
Tea	5 p.m.
Retreat	6 p.m.

The morning gun will fire at 5.30 a.m., and the evening gun at 9.30.

WEATHER NOTES.

August has been a cold wet month generally speaking, never exceeding 83° in the shade, while we have had it as low as 36° in the morning, with the average temperature 70° 6-31. Considerable frost occured during the month, and we had our first ice on the morning of the 27th; we had our usual rate of thunder storms, but none of any severity; our heaviest rain fall was on the 3rd, and the total for the month was 5 inches 24-100 of an inch, which is far above the average for August. The wind was blowing from the given points at sun rise on each day, respectively, namely: East, 4 days; north, 4 days; south-east, 4 days; north-east, 2 days; north-west, 10 days; south, 4 days; south-west, 2 days, and west, 1 day.

EXCULPATORY.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—A casual correspondent accuses your own correspondent for not giving him credit for 14 bushels of spring wheat to the acre. Query: Would that include hen-feed and chaff. Casual correspondent has just learned that John P. Galvin is selling out and going to the Western States. Why, sir, it is nearly two months since he had his property in Peterborough and this township advertised for sale. Verily, indeed, what peculiarly constructed shells some people are compelled to spend their life in. Now, Mr. Editor, I never do and never intend getting into newspaper controversy with wilful ignorance, I always cut such productions out and consign them to the stove.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain,

National Liberal Temperance Union.

The "Professor" Holds a Meeting in Douro Town Hall—Mr. Harry Calcutt Takes the Platform.—While John A. Nicholls Looms up in Opposition.

(From a Correspondent.)

A meeting of the electors of Douro was held last evening in the Douro Town Hall, under the auspices of the National Liberal Temperance Union. The Reeve of the township, Mr. John Moloney, occupied the chair, and the speakers on behalf of the N. L. T. U. were the "Professor" from Toronto, and Mr. Harry Calcutt. The building was packed to the doors, and and although considerable [illegible] it, it having only been advertised by dodgers distributed at the church doors on Sunday—a detachment of supporters of the Scott Act, including Rev. Mr. McFarlane, of Lakefield, Mr. Fessey and Mr. J. A. Nicholls, were present, ready to take a hand in the discussion. The audience were evidently disposed to regard the meeting as a good opportunity to have a little fun, and in spite of the chairman's request for order, a good deal of playfulness was evinced. The "Professor," who contrived to occupy three chairs, was in his element, and announced that the chairman would speak first and that the opposition would be accorded a twenty minutes' hearing after he, the "Professor," had spoken. He then held forth for about two hours, reciting with professional elocutionary skill the speech which is being circulated by him through the country in pamphlet form. He also delivered in a masterly style, a portion of Mr. Gordon Mowat's Stratford oration, which created a profound impression. Mr. Richardson depicted in thrilling and heartrending terms the dire effects of over-indulgence in salt, and it is safe to say that fresh meat will hereafter have a boom in Douro. To report in full the highly scientific and scholarly speech would occupy too much space, but two novel gems which do not appear in the printed edition are too rich, however, to be consigned to oblivion. For instance, he stated that "Dr. Workman, in his report of the Toronto Asylum of 1845, said that fifty per cent of the inmates were confined through

THE EFFECTS OF RELIGIOUS EXCITEMENT."

If any one doubted the above, Mr. Richardson said they could look it up and see for themselves. He then proceeded to charge that religion caused more insanity than intemperance. The Rev. Mr. McFarlane, of Lakefield, rose, and said, "as a minister of the Gospel, I challenge that statement." The learned lecturer, replying, said that Rev. Mr. McFarlane was, no doubt, so used to making wild statements that he could not prove, that he was ready to challenge anything. A tumult at this point arose; so did the chairman, and following his example, every one else arose, but above all, the cry "turn him out, turn him out," arose. Similar pleasing incidents interspersed throughout the remainder of Mr. Richardson's address, considerably enlivened the proceedings.

About 10:30 Mr. Nicholls took the floor, and with great rapidity replied to the alleged scientific and Biblical teachings of Mr. Richardson. One or two humorous anecdotes added spice to his speech. The position of the Scott Act Association, as laid down by themselves, and not as represented by the N. L. T. U., was expounded, and the cause of prohibition energetically advocated. When Mr. Nicholls resumed his seat, the battle cry, "Turn him out," again rang clearly through the almost midnight air.

Mr. Calcutt, as a brewer and a resident of the county, (not one brought in from Toronto), wished to make an explanation. The explanation might be termed a brief, terse, and logical arraingment of the Act. He said, "of course when Mr. Nicholls goes on the street, and says down in Halton, 'how is the Act working?' They say, 'oh it is working bully.'" This remark created general merriment. Mr. Calcutt was very indignant at the reward bills signed by Mr. Cox, and made some personal references to that gentleman which did not seem to find favor with the crowd, it being evident that though the Act in that part of Douro has few friends. Mr. Cox has many. Mr. G. Galvin called Mr. Calcutt to account for these personalities, and that gentleman restored good order, by saying that he "was liable to make mistakes because he was not a professional speaker, although everybody was a 'professor' now-a-days."

Mr. Richardson's reply was to the effect that the Act was a failure, informers deserving to have their ribs broken, as was done the other day at Simcoe, where it was a pity they did not serve the Scottite Magistrate the same, and that the Scottites were tyrannical and dishonest. As one of the four Scottites present at the meeting had some of his property stolen at this juncture of "the unhappy struggle," and made the fact known, the latter charge had not much weight.

The meeting, as an entertainment, proved a treat for all present, and entitles Mr. Richardson to the credit of being a successful and accomplished caterer for the amusement-loving public.

Young Liberals in Session.

The convention of the Young Liberals in Shaftesbury Hall, opened this morning with a great attendance. Crowds of young men were yesterday and to-day, met and welcomed by the reception committee. The first business to-morrow will be the election of officers, for the Provincial Association, and the completion of organization. A public mass meeting will be held in Shaftesbury Hall, on Wednesday, which will be addressed by speakers selected from the representatives of the different part of the province.

"Progress" and "Fair Taxationist."

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—On my return to town after a brief absence I noticed in your daily impression of Saturday a short letter from "Fair Taxationist," referring to my first letter. He seems to question the correctness of the facts implied in my incidental assertion of the large part which Mr. Cox has had in building up the town and calls for "a bill of particulars" in a legal manner, which, to my mind, settles the question of his identity as a lawyer, or at least a pettifogger. I have no desire to embroil myself in a controversy on the subject, yet I cannot refrain from pointing out to "Fair Taxationist" that the "particulars" he calls for are, as a matter of public notoriety, as much his property as mine. He has the same means of knowing the facts he calls for as I have. Everybody knows that Mr. Cox has the largest real estate interest of anybody in town. If my captious friend will turn to the assessment roll, to which he has as free access as I, he will discover that Mr. Cox's property is assessed at something like $350,000, about a tenth of the total assessment of the town. In the taxation of this property he is directly or indirectly interested, of course. In the acquisition of this property, a considerable portion of which is the creation of his own industry and energy, it cannot but be acknowledged that Mr. Cox has done a great deal to improve and build up—literally—the town, and his possession of it is a guarantee that no enterprise or policy that would tend to injure the town could escape injuring him also, and vice versa, whatever would benefit him must necessarily benefit the town. In all his extensive building operations he has kept the object in view, of erecting structures that, for solidity and beauty of appearance, are ornaments to the town, and would be a credit to any city. It is largely due to the efforts he has made, the influence he has exercised, the example he has set in building operations, that strangers, in coming into Peterborough, are so strongly impressed with its beautiful, substantial and city like appearance. Not only in what may be called public buildings, has his example been a good one, but it is largely due to the example set by him, that a high class of residences are becoming so frequent. While on the subject of buildings, I might point out to "Fair Taxationist" that the good work is still going on. During the present season, I am informed by a gentleman who should know, and who, I believe, does know, that every Saturday Mr. Geo. A. Cox signs a cheque for $4,000 to pay for building material and the wages of workmen. The circulation of this large sum of money throughout the town constitutes a direct boon to labourers, mechanics and business men, and cannot but tend to build up the town.

"Fair Taxationist" cannot but know that Mr. Cox, throughout his whole career, has taken a course, which, while it might be beneficial to himself, has been to a very great extent in the interests of the town. If he has long been a resident of the town he must recollect how assiduously Mr Cox worked in the interests of the Auburn woolen mills, a now thriving institution, and how successful he was in inducing the subscription of outside stock. If I remember rightly he even dropped some 4 or 5 thousand dollars in connection with the affair, and this must be admitted by my critic as an occasion, on which, according to his small-souled sneer, Mr. Cox did not "derive the lion's share of the advantage." The lock works is a thriving new industry, and that must be marked down on the credit side of Mr. Cox's account. The stove works will in a few days be in operation, and it is something of which the town may be proud. This also goes down to Mr. Cox's credit. If these institutions are prosperous, Mr. Cox will make money which I am sure no one will not regard but as the just reward of the energy and enterprise he has shown. How the vigorous operation of these industries will benefit the town by the circulation of money, employment of labour and increase of population, I will not insult the intelligence of your readers by explaining.

If I chose, Mr. Editor, I could go on in this manner further than your space will allow. "Fair Taxationist" must have known these facts as well as I, for they are generally known and acknowledged, except by some one like him whose interest consists in belittling Mr. Cox's record, and in pursuing selfish ends regardless of the interests of the town.

This reminds me of a constrast I instituted in a former letter and I will now, in turn, ask some information from my critic. Will "Fair Taxationist" kindly explain how his friend and sympathiser, and the opposer of the town's real interests, Mr. Carnegie, M. P. P., can reconcile his course in obstructing the introduction of manufactures, to his professions? It strikes me that he has quite changed his tune since the time, which will be remembered well, when he was most earnestly advocating a $5,000 bonus to the brick works. That was all right then, for he was personally interested, now the town is interested and he finds it wrong to exempt new industries that will be worked and will give employment. But what can one expect of a man who builds his residence outside the town to escape town taxes? Has he any right to interfere with a scheme that is intended to benefit the town? Will "Fair Taxationist" tell me why, if Mr. Carnegie has the interests of the town so much at heart, and, why, if he has such abiding faith in the N. P.—why, with the abundant capital at his command, he does not start some new industry that will turn the dormant brick works to account and make the "tall chimney" smoke? When he does something in this direction, I shall be happy to favor him with exemption, and will recognize his right to interfere in a matter involving the interests of the town.

I have not attempted to fulfil "Fair Taxationist's" request, but have simply written what suggested itself on the spur of the moment. I have no special information on the subject, nor any means of getting any, and if my critic is honestly in search of information, a little enquiry will give him more, I fancy, seeing the position he holds, than will be agreeable to him or his obstructionist schemes. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, I remain,

Yours etc.,

President Arthur's Stable.

There are three large box stalls on one side, and six stalls on the other. The president's riding horse is the occupant of one of the box stalls. He is a sorrel gelding 7 years old, and about sixteen hands high. There is nothing remarkable about this animal. He is simply a good-looking, easy-riding horse, his principal gaits being pace and canter. The president frequently takes a ride on summer evenings. He is a fair rider and fond of the exercise. He has four carriage-horses, two in the box stalls and two in the stalls on the other side. They are all bays, about sixteen hands high. They are very stylish, and are groomed to perfection, and either pair hitched to any one of the handsome carriages, with Albert on the box, make a very striking turnout. Occasionally they are driven four-in-hand.

The other stalls are occupied by Alan Arthur's buggy team, one a Hambletonian gelding, and the other a Black Hawk mare. They are driven a good deal, either single or double, by their owner when he is at home, but while he is at college they receive only the necessary exercise. Alan Arthur is a very daring rider. He not only knows how to ride well, but has plenty of nerve, and it takes a good horse to get the better of him.

In one of the remaining stall stands the little Indian pony which the president brought back from his trip to the Yellowstone country last year. He has not yet made his debut, but he is receiving a course of training at the hands of Albert on the White Lot drive. When by patience and careful training he becomes perfectly docile he will be driven by the president's daughter Nellie to a dog-cart. He is a cute little thing, with roached mane and banged tail. His color is what is termed in the west as "painted," or "calico," and what the children call "circus,"—irregularly marked with white and brown in about equal proportions. He was presented to the president last summer by Sharphosen, an Arrapahoe chief.

The presidential party held a big pow-wow with the Indians last summer near Fort Washakie, on the Shoshone agency, and presents were exchanged. Although the agency is held by the Shoshone Indians, there is a band of Arrapahoes on it, and Sharphosen is their chief. He gave the pony to the president as a gift for his daughter. The pony was taken along with a company of soldiers as far as Cheyenne, and from there shipped to Washington, where he arrived early last fall.—Washington Star.

The Earth's Interior.

If we go down a deep mine we find that the rock at the bottom is hotter than at the top; if we sink a very deep well the water comes up warm. By observations of this kind it has been found that the earth gets hotter the deeper down we go into it; the rate at which the temperature increases is not everywhere the same, but on the average it may be put at 1 deg. Fahrenheit for every 60 feet we go down.

We have been able to get only a very little way down into the earth, nowhere as much as a mile, and therefore we can not say how far down the temperature continues to rise, or whether the rate at which it increases is the same at all depths. But what little we do know makes it all but certain that the earth is very much hotter inside than at the surface. For consider what would happen if we were to put a coating of clay some inches thick round a red hot cannon ball. The heat from the ball would travel or be conducted through the clay slowly, because clay does not allow heat to pass rapidly through it. Still there would be a constant flow of heat from the ball through the clay, and this heat when it reached the outside of the clay covering would pass away or be radiated into the air. In the end the ball would grow cold.

Now in the case of the earth, we know that we have an outside cold shell which corresponds to the clay coating. Whether the earth is hot all through like the cannon ball we are not certain, but we have found that a portion of it, an interior shell, is hotter than the outside crust. The heat from this hot part must be constantly flowing away through the outside shell and passing off into space, and unless there is something which constantly supplies fresh heat the inside hot shell would before this have grown as cold as the outside crust. This has not happened, so there must be something which keeps furnishing the shell with heat and makes it cool much more slowly than it otherwise would. Several possible ways of keeping up this supply of heat have been suggested; the most likely explanation is that the inside of the earth is very much hotter even than these warm depths we have been able to get down to.—Good Words.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Notwithstanding the recent frosts, the crops in the Northwest have been garnered in excellent condition, and they are the finest both in quality and yield, ever raised there. Now, if the farmers could only get a decent price for their grain, the country would be able, in a measure, to get out of the quagmire into which the misgovernment of the past half dozen years has landed it.

The Americans are getting tired of a protection tariff, and the probability is that there will be a speedy return to a straight revenue tariff. A prominent politician has been engaged during the entire summer in the preparation of a tariff bill, which he purposes introducing soon after the convening of congress. It is stated the measure will provide for a reduction of the revenue to such a sum as is necessary to cover government expenses. It is proposed that this revenue shall be derived in the main from that class of taxable articles known as luxuries, and that the taxation on the necessaries of life shall be reduced to the lowest possible sum.

An Elective Senate.

The Reform members in caucus before the elections of 1882 decided to support an elective Senate, and since the election the Reform representatives in the House of Commons adhere to this policy. Had it not been for the Government Franchise Bill, and for the difficulties connected with the North-West, the subject would have been brought before the House of Commons during the past session, and the views of the Reform representatives would have been formally submitted to Parliament, so as to make a distinct issue upon which they might obtain the opinion of the country. This, at all events, is one plank in the Reform platform, and it ought to be regarded as one of no small importance. Everyone will see that the Senate, as it is at present constituted, may form an insuperable barrier to Reform legislation. It is most desirable that this condition of things should not continue. Formerly, when the old Legislature of Upper and Lower Canada was reformed, the new constitution was engrafted upon the old. Those who had been nominated members were to continue for life. No such policy can again be adopted. The present Senate is almost exclusively Tory, and it would require an indefinite period of time, a quarter of a century at least, for parties fairly to adjust themselves upon an elective basis, if such a system were continued. It is therefore necessary that the old institution should be completely abolished and a new one should take its place. Readjustment of the tariff, restoration of the popular rights in connection with the franchise, reform of the Senate, and the restraint of the power of vetoing Provincial measures, present a very comprehensive and important part of the policy of the Reform party at the next general election.—London Advertiser.

Paying the Church Debt.

A witty deacon puts it thus:—"Now, brethren, let us get up a supper and eat ourselves rich. Buy your food; then give it to the church; then go and buy it back again; then eat it up and your church debt is paid."

A New Swindle.

We desire to warn farmers against a new swindle. Two strangers meet at a farmer's house to stay all night, and during the evening they get up a trade between themselves, which requires a witness, and the farmer is asked to sign the papers, simply to witness the trade. If he does so he soon finds that his name is signed to a note which he has to pay. The law does not appear to touch these cases, and farmers should hang the first man caught at it.

QUERETARO.

A Visit to the Scene of Maximilian's Execution.

Queretaro is seven thousand feet high. Its population is fifty thousand, and is built on a hill and is surrounded by hills. It was founded by the Aztecs, and was captured by the Spaniards in 1531. We went to the Hill of Bells, called "El Ceno de las Campanas," southwest of the city, where Maximilian was captured and shot. The view from the hill presents to the eye one of the loveliest panoramas outside the valley of Mexico. The valley is broad and full of verdure and large fields of wheat, barley, and alfalfa, and gardens of bright blooming flowers are on every side. Long hills skirt the valley all around, and off upon the hill sits the city, its glittering domes and white houses almost dazzling the eye. Near the brow of this hill we came to the three monuments marking the spot where Maximilian, Miramon, and Mejia were shot. The monuments once contained raised letters, in brass, reciting the names and particulars of the tragedy, but the ruthless hand of the relic seeker or fiend have left but few of them to tell the tale. An iron rail-

Mr. Bull took a fine sketch of it, and near by we cut a cane as a memento of our visit. We met an old soldier at the spot who was with the Mexicans under General Escobedo, and saw the emperor shot. He pointed out to us the place where he was captured, and gave us a pathetic account of his manly death. He confirmed in every particular the accepted accounts of his capture and death, and of the treachery that put him in the hands of the Mexicans. It was through the treachery of Col. Miguel Lopez that the emperor was taken and his forces subsequently surrendered to the liberals. Maximilian was tried before a court-martial and sentenced to be shot. Persistent efforts were made to save his life. The Princess Salm-Salm is said to have ridden to San Louis Potosi, the seat of the republican government, 160 miles distant, and begged President Juarez to pardon the adventurer from Miramar. The government of the United States was appealed to in vain. None of the European potentates ventured to intercede and Maximilian, together with his comrades in arms, Gens. Miramon and Mejia, was shot on June 19, 1867. His body was subsequently taken to Vienna for interment. The night before the emperor's execution he wrote the following letter to his wife, who was then a maniac, confined in one of the palaces of her father, the king of the Belgians:

"To My Beloved Carlotta: If God ever permits you to recover and read these lines, you will learn the cruelty of my fate which has not ceased to pursue me since your departure for Europe. You carried with you my soul and my happiness. Why did I not listen to you? So many events, alas! so many unexpected and unmerited catastrophies have overwhelmed me that I have no more hope in my heart, and I await death as a delivering angel. I die without agony. I shall fall with glory, like a soldier, like a conquering king. If you have not the power to bear so much suffering, if God soon reunites us, I shall bless the Divine and paternal hand which has so rudely stricken us. Adieu! adieu! Thy poor MAX."

Alas, poor Maximilian! As we stood on the spot where he was shot, we could not resist the temptation to pity his sad fate, in spite of the fact that he was a usurper. We had seen the gilded coach in which he and his beloved Carlotta had driven in triumph over the wide paseos of the City of Cortez; we had paced up and down the marble portico of the grand palace of Chapultepec, where the eye of the emperor could take in the grandest and most magnificent panorama in the western world; we had seen his medals and decorations, his plate and his portrait, now on exhibition in a Mexican museum; and we stood on the spot watered by his blood, and where his last expiring breath had gone up to the Great Judge of all men I repeat again: We pitied him, and we pitied the man who had power to save him and send him back to his dear Carlotta, and would not do it. In the language of our Dr. Richard McSherry: "He died like a hero. He had done his best to redeem a fallen country, but had failed." We left the hill-top and descended into the valley, and as we took a last look at the three mute monuments near the brow of the hill, we could not but think: He was a usurper, but had he lived, he might have done much for Mexico. But God knows best, and he alone can evolve good from evil.—Mexico Cor. Baltimore American.

A Finland Girl's Ordeal.

When a Finland girl wishes to leave the country she has to go first to her clergyman and partake of the sacrament and procure a letter of recommendation from him; next to a physician and obtain from him, after an examination, a certificate to remain absent a certain specified number of years. This certificate costs her about $20. If she returns promptly at the end of the time prescribed, all is well; but if not her name is erased from the book in which it has been entered, and she is considered as having violated her contract with the government and loses her citizenship forever."

Bishop Beckwith of Georgia, says that the greatest drawback to the progress of the Southern negroes is whisky. He believes that high taxation of liquor is more effective as a temperance measure than prohibitory legislation.

A prominent Philadelphia insurance man said to a reporter: "It is surprising how few people would insure their lives unless induced to do so by agents or brokers. I do not think one-fifth of the number of policies annually issued by life insurance companies are unsolicited. In consequence a large proportion of the year's premiums have to be paid by way of commissions to the agents—a very hard-working body of men, by the way. It seems strange, however, that we can not buy real estate, or dabble in stocks, or insure our lives, or do a hundred other things without employing and paying somebody else to do it for us."

The Old Printer.

A printer stood at his case one night,
In his office dark and drear,
And his weary sight was dim as the light
Of the moldy lamp hung near;
The wintry winds were howling without,
And the snow falling thick and fast:
But the printer, I trow, shook his locks of snow,
And laughed at the shrieking blast;
He watched the hands of the clock creep round,
Keeping time with its snail-like tick,
As he gathered the type, with a weary click,
In his old rust-eaten stick.

His hair was as white as the falling snow,
And silently, day by day,
He beheld them with grief, like the autumn leaf,
One by one passing away.
Time had cut with his plow furrows deep in his brow;
His cheek was fevered and thin,
And his long Roman nose could almost repose
Its head on his gray-bearded chin;
And with fingers long, as the hours stole on,
Keeping time with the clock's dull tick,
He gathered the type, with a weary click,
In his old rust-eaten stick.

For many long years, through joys and through tears,
That old printer's time-battered face,
So ghostly and lean, night and morn has been seen
Earnestly bent o'er his case.
In a few years more death will look up his form
And put it to press in the mold,
And a stone o'er the spot where they lay him to rot,
Will tell us his name and how old;
And his comrades will light up his lamp by his case,
And list to the clock's dull tick,
As they set up his death, with solemn click,
In his old rust-eaten stick.

—Printer's Circular.

A ROD OF IRON.

If it had not been for Bluffkin's dog and Bluffkin's daughter, this story would never have been written. Bluffkins loved his dog enthusiastically; he loved his daughter moderately.

Bluffkins was what is usually designated as "a tough case." There was nothing soft, or winning, or childlike about Bluffkins. He was not of lofty stature, but like the "holy city of Jerusalem, he was compactly built together."

Nobody ever contradicted Bluffkins—they didn't dream of such a thing. You wouldn't yourself.

Bluffkins dwelt in an old tumble-down house on the outskirts of a New England town. He was rich, though he didn't look it—it wasn't his style. His raiment was exceedingly shabby; his hair was like a buffalo-robe that had braved the "battle and the breeze," shaggy and careworn. His nose was crimson as a summer sunset, while his voice scared children, and made big people wish that they were safe home in bed.

Bluffkins was the last man to have a pretty daughter, but he had one, all the same. Her name was Bertha, and she was the admiration of a whole tribe of young men who dwelt in the region round about Bluffkin's.

Not that they ever dared to say so—no, indeed! It would have been as much as their lives were worth to do more than raise their eyes to her fair young face as she entered the sacred portals of the village church, which she attended alone, for Bluffkins was not a church-going man by a great deal.

As to coming within the jurisdiction of Bluffkins's stick and Bluffkins's dog, they would not do that if the Lord spared them their sober senses.

So Bertha wasted her sweetness on the desert air, and was bullied and hectored from morning till night, not only by the dog and Bluffkins, but also by Bluffkins's right-hand man—Hodges by name—a seaman who had, in the dusty annals of the past, deserted from the English navy.

Rumors were current through the village that if ever the British Navy laid hands on Hodges, he would be hunted, and branded, and played the dickens with generally; for he had insulted the British lion by walking off so unceremoniously, and the British lion's revenge would be a terrible one.

He was made on the same model as a humming-top was Hodges, and his face looked like the style of cheese known as the Dutchman's head, if that cheese had been left around till it had been gnawed by the rats.

He was not fresh, or elegant or tempting—no way you could fix him. If you dressed him in ancient armor, he would be the same old sixpence; and if you put a black velvet doublet slashed with old-gold on him, he would not look a bit better.

As a thing of beauty, Hodges was a dead failure.

When the dog, whose name was Boxer, and Bluffkins himself, got tired of bullying Bertha, Hodges chipped in and bullied her himself.

She had a handmaid of Hibernian extraction, and if it had not been for Biddy, Bertha would certainly have given up the ghost.

Biddy was a highly original specimen, red haired and buxom, full of wit, and given to scathing repartee.

She quarreled with Hodges on an average seventeen times a day, and always came off victorious, leaving Hodges worn and dismantled by the fray.

"Bad luck to your sowl, you worthless desertin' thief of the world! it's little I'd trouble myself with you only for your impudence to Miss Bertha, the swate crature! Sure anybody else would glorify the saints to have such a daughter only an owld dirty miser like your beautiful masther. The devil a cent does he give her to dress herself like other ladies, and him rowling in riches. May the devil sweep him!"

This was the style of conversation that went on between Biddy and Hodges, which was duly reported by that faithful henchman to his august master.

Bluffkins, when he next encountered the girl, would formally disband her from his service amid a great flow of scriptural language, which action on his part produced not the slightest effect on Biddy, who continued on in the same even tenor of her way, remarking to her young mistress:

"Arrah, why should I spare them? wid them crazy devils? Sure they ought to be excommunicated wid a candle and a bell. The horrible owld haythens! Never a foot do they put in a church, or do anything that's dacent—— Oh, sure its a mighty hot corner that's getting ready for the pair of them!"

"Hush, Biddy! You must not speak in that way of my father. He would not be so disagreeable if it were not for that horrid brandy and Hodges. I think I remember that he was once very different. Oh dear, how unhappy I am! I wish it was not a sin to pray for death!"

"Death, is it, Miss Bertha, me jewell! Sure its weddings, not wakes, your sweet mind should be running on, only for them worthless wretches downstairs. Oh, they are the useless devils—God help them!"

Bertha's life had flowed on like a turbulent stream till she reached her eighteenth year, in spite of the blows and buffets of an outrageous fortune.

She was a very pretty and interesting girl. She had but few friends, but those she had loved and pitied her sincerely

"I need a stroll, Tilly; I will escor Miss Bluffkins home."

Men are stupid creatures, it is useless to deny it, or George Humphreys must have seen the winks and blinks his sister so freely bestowed upon him—he did not see them, and he marched out of the house followed by a large liver-colored dog.

Bertha's heart fluttered like a newly-caught bird between happiness and apprehension.

George Humphreys and Bertha did not fall in love like other people; they tumbled into it, a perfect abyss of love—head over heels. Before they reached the door of Bluffkins's castle, George came very near asking Bertha to be his wife; and if he had done so she would have said "Yes," there is not the slightest doubt about it.

When they drew near they espied Bluffkins sitting on the front steps watching Hodges watering the flowers, for Bluffkins was very proud of his garden, and he was not above superintending Hodge's operations therein.

He had a large dutch pipe in his mouth, and when he saw his daughter approaching with a young man, he took it out to give room for the overflow of oaths that instantly rushed up his throat.

Bertha could not hear the flowery language of her ancestor, but she guessed pretty well what style of conversation would greet her as soon as the stranger had taken his departure.

"Papa," she said in a shaky voice, "this is Captain Humphreys, Mrs. Morgan's brother."

"Good-day, sir," growled Bluffkins, looking like the pictures used to illustrate "Jack and the Beanstalk," the pictures of the giant.

"Good-day, sir. Very pretty garden you——"

What else he was going to say no one will ever know, for at that moment an ominous growl was heard, and Bluffkin's dog tumbled down the front steps on "hospitable thoughts intent," and grasped the captain's dog by the ear.

For a short time the whole atmosphere was full of yelps, oaths, and water-cans, hurled at the contending parties, but it was no use. Bluffkin's dog was one of the John Bull species, and when he once took hold, did not know how to let go; but the captain's dog was a Cuban bloodhound, with a terrible depth of jaw, and he had Bluffkin's dog by the throat, and in spite of buckets of water thrown over them, they did not relax their grip till Boxer passed to that "bourne from whence no traveller returns."

Then you ought to have heard Bluffkins! It was well worth while—he vied with Hodges, who burst into a torrent of adjuration. They viewed the dead body of their priceless favorite and danced a war-dance around his mangled remains—they stopped the clocks in the neighborhood by the force and beauty of their allusions to events past and present. Two maiden sisters of uncertain age went and notified their landlord that they would move out next May, and crowds of small boys assembled around the gate waiting for the murder to take place.

The captain took it rather coolly, he expressed his sorrow, but nobody heard it. Bertha fled the scene, locked herself in her chamber, and stuffed her ears with cotton. Biddy ran out and began to express unlimited satisfaction over the death of the canine favorite, but the untimely joy was cut short by a box on the ear, administered by Hodges, which nearly knocked her brains out.

This assault and battery was promptly followed up by Hodges receiving a pair of elegant black eyes from the captain.

The little boys' spirits rose, and they cheered vociferously, and clung to the palings in raptures of anticipation.

"I suppose it is no use to remain here," said the captain, striking a match on the porch and lighting his cigar. "I may as well take my departure for the present till the old man has a lucid interval. I'll call tomorrow and offer to get a decent dog for him to swear and curse over; if he took such stock in that mangy cur, he would fall down and worship any respectable animal."

So saying the captain walked off, followed by his victorious dog, which was eyed with admiration by the small boys, who felt disposed to offer testimonial to the casule of Boxer's demise, for the laudable attempts to "hook old Bluffkin's apples" had always been frustrated by his obtrusive presence.

Many a little boy in that village had gone without a seat to his pants for the entire summer, and Boxer was popularly supposed to have a large and varied assortment of these portions of the village wardrobe hid away under his kennel in the same hole where he buried his bones.

Bertha had an interview with her father that afternoon, during which he forbade her, under penalty of death, to ever go outside the garden-gate again as long as she lived.

She wept and sobbed in vain. Bluffkins was inexorable.

Ten days passed and poor Bertha lingered and languished. Melancholy was beginning to give way to despair, when one day Biddy brought her a letter. It was from Mrs. Morgan, and ran thus:

"DEAR BERTHA,—I am very ill—have been attacked with hemorrhage of the lungs. I know your father has forbidden you to come to me, but I think you are justified in disobeying him just this once.—Yours truly,
"LILY MORGAN."

That night, when all was still, Bertha crept out of the house with her heart in her mouth and flew to the house of her friend.

Mrs. Morgan was very ill and terribly weak, but she smiled on her friend, and told her how her brother was nearly wild because he could not see her.

Among those friends was a Mrs. Morgan, a young widow lady. She felt a strong sympathy for the motherless and worse than fatherless girl.

As often as Bertha could make her escape, she was with the widow, who always received her with the utmost kindness. Bertha did not dare to invite her friend to return those visits, for Bluffkins had ruthlessly forbidden her to have any callers.

One, day, during the leafy month of June, Bertha ran over to the pretty white cottage occupied by her friend.

She found the widow at home engaged in conversation with a tall, handsome man, whom she introduced as "My brother, Captain Humphreys."

Bertha felt shy and awkward, for she had never been in company with a fine-looking young man before, and the stranger kept his large blue eyes fixed on her face with an unmistakable expression of admiration that was very confusing.

When Bertha rose to go, the captain took up his hat, and remarked to his sister carelessly:

"He called on your father, but he insulted him and forbade him the house. How fearfully unreasonable he is! Poor Bertha! poor child!"

As the night wore on, Mrs. Morgan grew weaker, and fears were entertained that she would pass away before morning.

Captain Humphreys sat by his sister's side and held her hand, and Bertha sat on the other side of the bed fanning her.

Suddenly she opened her eyes and said:

"George, you love Bertha, do you not?"

"Yes, indeed I do!" he replied very earnestly.

"And you, Bertha?"

"Yes," whispered the girl, timidly, scarlet blushes dying her face.

"Will you marry him to-morrow, Bertha, and then you can remain with me? There can be no objection to the match, only your poor father's unhappy temper. Say yes, Bertha,"

Bertha stooped and kissed her friend affectionately on the cheek, and that was sufficient answer.

The following day they were united, and their lives proved the truth of the saying, "Happy is the wooing that's not long a doing."

Bluffkins refused to be reconciled to his daughter for a long time, and they went out west after Mrs. Morgan recoved her health; but by-and-by Bluffkins got old, and his heart softened, and he wrote to Bertha and blessed her, and forgave the captain; and so all went well.

Years passed, and one day Bluffkins was found asleep in his chair; and he could not be roused, for it was the sleep that "knows no waking."

His will was found in his desk, and he had left all he possessed to his "beloved daughter, Bertha."

Biddy is still her mistress's "right-hand woman," and Hodges still quarrels with her, for the captain has taken him into his service. So ends for the present the story of Bluffkins's Daughter.

Prices to suit the most economical.

No necessity now to take the children to inferior studios because of the price.

Nothing can surpass the beauty and delicacy of finish, artistic posing and effective lighting, for which prizes have been awarded us wherever exhibited.

The excellence and artistic character of our work has given us a wide reputation, and we receive orders from all parts.

Now is the time to order, especially coloured work, as time is required to finish such.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Scott Act.

The Scott Act ward committees are requested to meet this evening at the head-quarters at 8 o'clock.

This Season.

Fair, VanEvery & Co'y have opened a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps, in many styles, much below regular prices. Don't fail to see them.

Smallpox at Port Hope.

A despatch, dated Sept. 14th, from Port Hope to the Toronto Globe says:—

"It is learned on indisputable authority that a case of smallpox exists in the town, a direct importation from Montreal."

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office:—Fresh south-west and west winds; fine warm weather—continued to-morrow.

Gentlemen

will find at the "Golden Lion" an elegant stock of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, Over-coating, Rubber Over-coats, Furnishings, Underwear, &c. Tailoring a specialty—and a first-class cutter at your command.

Teams for Polling Day.

The Scott Act Association will be greatly obliged if any friends, either in town or country, who have teams or rigs available, will lend them for use on polling day. They should be at the head-quarters, Hunter street, as soon after eight o'clock as possible. Those who will help in this way are asked to send their names to the Secretary of the Scott Act Association.

Peterborough at Toronto.

Large numbers of Peterborough people visited the Industrial Exhibition at Toronto yesterday, and after viewing the fine exhibits made by the Ontario Canoe Company, the Wm. Hamilton M'f'g Company and Porter Bros., and the fine thoroughbred stock of Mr. Jos. Redmond, came home, feeling themselves townspeople of no mean town.

Central Exhibition.

Not a great deal is to be heard just now in Peterborough in regard to the Central Exhibition, but outsiders seem to be well apprised of it. The Brockville Recorder announces that an excursion will be run from that town to Peterborough during the show, and Toronto is posted up with advertisements of a similar cheap excursion over the G. T. R.

Spectacles.

Testimonial from the Rev. Father Boldue, Secretary to the Archbishop of Quebec:—

ARCHBISHOP'S PALACE, Aug. 11, 1883.

Mr. B. Laurance:

DEAR SIR,—I have made use of the excellent spectacles which you chose for me, with great care, to suit my sight. I find them superior to any I have made use of for a great many years. Several of my friends have visited your office and have admired, like myself, the great variety and perfection of your glasses.

Your obedient servant,
J. B. Z. BOLDUE.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught, and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

ATHLETICS.

Lacrosse.

PETERBOROUGH V. CANNINGTON.

The match for the Central District Championship between Peterborough and Cannington, will be played here, on Tuesday of next week. Flushed by recent success, and on their own grounds, the boys are not likely to have much difficulty in holding their own, and we don't much think the medal will go to Cannington.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF ONTARIO.

According to the rules of the Lacrosse Association, the clubs holding the Eastern, Western, Northern, and Central District Championships, should meet at some point early in October, and play for the championship of the Province. Peterboro has been proposed as the scene of the contest, and as there is no better gound in the Province, and Peterboro is centrally located, it is quite likely to be chosen.

The Rollers.

TWO HOURS' RACE AT THE LANSDOWNE.

The endurance race, two hours' go-as-you-please, at the Lansdowne Rink, last evening, brought to the front a field of six starters, among them being Shevlin, Scott, McFarlane, Coursey and Burdette. At the start McFarlane and Coursey went off at a high speed, endeavoring in this way to distance the field. They only succeeded in pumping themselves out, and at the end of the first hour McFarlane left the others who had been travelling at a more moderate pace, to roll along alone. Burdette, however, had struck too slow a pace and got hopelessly in rear of Scott and Shevlin between whom the contest then rested. At the expiration of the two hours Shevlin was eight laps ahead of Scott, the remainder being out of the race. A number of spectators witnessed the race with much interest. The distance covered by Shevlin was 22 miles and 15 laps, while Scott made 22 miles and 7 laps within the stipulated two hours.

To Subscribers.

Subscribers to the DAILY EVENING EXAMINER will greatly oblige us by reporting promptly any neglect in the delivery of their paper.

Fair, VanEvery & Co.

have imported this season a most complete assortment of Mourning Goods, ranging from the new Crepe Epingle, Jet Cashmeres, French Silk Crapes, &c., to the more artistic Black Crape Bonnets, Cape, &c.

Great Activity

in the Mantle and Dress Making Department at Fair, VanEvery & Co's. Ladies will appreciate the large assortment of handsome materials from which Rich and Elegant Mantles and Dresses are being turned out daily.

Vaccination in Ashburnham.

Yesterday afternoon and to-day Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer, held vaccination levees under the auspices of the Board of Health. He had a big rush of candidates on both occasions, to whom he devoted pointed attention.

Guns and Ammunition.

I would respectfully advise the public that I have Colt's Magazine Rifles in stock as well as Winchester; price $20. Cartridges to suit, 85c. per box. Discount for quantities as usual. Shells, Wads, Shot, Powder and Caps at very low prices George Stethem.

The Way the Weather Has.

Mr. G. W. Morgan, druggist, supplies the following memoranda of the variations of the thermometer and barometer:—

	Thermometer.	Barometer.
9 o'clock	69°	29.02°
1 o'clock	70°	29.02°
3 o'clock	67°	29.00°

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

Dumbletonian Decrees.

Michael Lavery, Mrs. Lavery, and a young man named Thomas Sanderson, made their appearance before the Police Magistrate this morning, charged with fighting in a public place on Friday last, the public place being a lane in rear of the Lansdowne Rink. Michael, who was first called upon to explain, stated that they were "not foightin', only scufflin', sorr;" Sanderson, the second defendant, admitted striking Lavery, but denied fighting; while Mrs. Lavery remarked, "Indade, thin, I dosnt undherstand it, at all, at all. Me man was just a bit boight and I was just thryin' to get him home, and sorra a bit of him would come, yer worrship; faith, indade, and that's all about it." The evidence of Messrs. T. Dunn and C. Stapleton, who witnessed the rumpus, showed Mrs. Lavery's story to be about correct. Mr. Lavery had been lushing, and his better half was trying to get him home. Sanderson lent a hand, and Lavery, resenting his interference, struck him, and got a punched nose for his pains. Neither Sanderson nor Mrs. Lavery were under the influence of liquor. Mr. Dumble discharged Sanderson and Mrs. Lavery, and inflicted a fine of $2 and costs on Michael Lavery. The requisite amount having been produced from the depths of Mrs. Lavery's dress pocket and paid over to the clerk, the trio departed, all well satisfied but Mrs. Lavery, who still failed to understand why her man should be fined.

What We May Expect.

A big run on vaccine.

Telephone message from Lakefield.

The "Professor" to pluck up his courage and hold a meeting at the Opera House.

And Rev. B. B. Keefer to "bob up serenely" at it.

Peterborough exhibitors to come home from Toronto laden with prizes.

Toronto hotel keepers to kill future exhibitions by the rates they are charging.

A visit from Chang.

Port Hope visitors to be viewed with suspicion.

And subjected to disinfection on arriving here.

What they are Saying.

"Mr. E. C. Hill, of the Peterborough Review."—Brockville Recorder.

What have I done to be slandered like this?—E. C. Hill.

Didn't my troop look scrumptious?—Col. Rogers.

The crack cavalry corps of the district.—Brevet-Sergeant Billings.

Park Directors.

You didn't mention my new boulevard on Stewart street.—W. B. Ferguson.

But I will now, and a foine one it is—and a nate little new house till the back of it.—Street Inspector Wilson.

If I hadn't been a high-toned thief the parson would have "pulled" me, you know.—The man who stole the melons.

What We Would Like to Know.

What will be the result of to-night's council meeting.

If Harry Calcutt isn't a better talker than the "Professor."

If it's true that small pox has appeared in Port Hope.

And whether they are prepared to cope with it.

If there is to be a fall meeting at the Driving Park.

If the exemption question will, for the present, be decently buried.

And exhumed in the sweet bye and bye.

How prohibition is succeeding at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition.

And what kind of temperance drink it was that made some of the returning excursionists so sleepy last night.

Personal.

Councillor Kendry has returned from a trip to New York.

Mr. E. C. Hill, who is travelling in the interest of the Peterborough Exhibition, has lately visited Brockville with his bundle of big posters.

Mr. Bernard Coyne, who was for some time in the employment of Mr. Harry Le Brun, left town yesterdy for Oscaloosa, Ia., where he enters the employ of Messrs. Bryen & Barnes, clothiers.

Mr. Sid. Henthorne, one of the old-time stars of the "Colleen Bawn," is in town reviving old memories. He is prosperous and carries a good deal more adipose tissue than in the good old days.

Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

TELEPHONE.

The workmen engaged stringing the telephone wires arrived in the village on Saturday, and in the afternoon made the connection with the office here, which is located in Mr. Bird's drug store. Several parties are taking instruments, and "talks" with Peterborough will be the order of the day for a time, until the novelty wears off and the owners use them only for business purposes.

NEW GRIST MILL.

Mr. Peter Baptie has secured the contract for the erection of R. & G. Strickland's new grist mill. He expects to have it finished early in November, so that the millwrights can get the machinery in, which will be of the latest and most approved kind.

ILLUMINATED CANOE PARADE.

The illuminated canoe parade, which had to be declared off the evening of the Civic Holiday, took place on Friday evening. The weather was all that could be desired, but a large quantity of floating wood in the river caused some trouble to the canoes. The island was beautifully decorated with Chinese lanterns and colored lights, while the moving canoes, many of them with beautiful and unique designs, formed a scene which was appreciated by the large crowd of people who had taken up their stations on the river banks. The following is the list of prizes awarded by the judges for the best illuminated canoes:—

SENIORS.—1st, George Cochrane; 2nd, Wm. Eastland; 3rd, Samuel Henderson.

BOYS UNDER 16.—1st, Alex. Strickland; 2nd, Clarie Bell.

The Franchise Act Nullified,

And an Expected List of 2,500,000 Voters Reduced to 500,000.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—It appears that under a stupidly worded or else an adroitly worded section of the Franchise Act the number of new voters will be reduced from the expected 2,500,000 to about 1,000,000 in the coming elections. The judges on the subject claim that not more than 500,000 new names will ultimately appear on the new lists. The section referred to prohibits persons who lodge on the premises of their employers from registering. This affects thousands of clerks. Among the classes excluded from registration are resident managers and attendants of all asylums. About six per cent of the applicants for registration are refused votes on account of technicalities.

The Hispano-German Trouble

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Daily News' Berlin despatch says the Carolines may be already regarded as German property. The entire affair can only terminate with the assertion of Germany's claim.

The Cholera.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—There were at Marseilles to-day eight deaths from cholera, and at Toulon three, a decided decrease.

MADRID, Sept. 14.—There were 1,016 new cases of cholera and 635 deaths from the disease in Spain yesterday.

Smokers!

Beware of cigars artificially flavored for the purpose of hiding the poor quality of tobacco used in flavored cigars. Insist upon having the old reliable brands—"CABLE" and "EL PADRE." 13d-25w-1y

The Anglo-Russian Protocol.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Standard publishes the Anglo-Russian protocol concerning the Afghan frontier. Every detail in connection with the frontier line has been settled, the only possible point of difference being the Oxus, which the English have been unable to minutely survey. M. Zelanoi, head of the original Russian Frontier Commission, has been deposed.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The boundary defined in the Anglo-Russian protocol coincides nearly with that proposed by M. Lessar. Russia gets the whole of the oasis of Pendjeh, including Aktepe, Akrobat and Puli-Katum. Afghanistan gets Meruchak and the whole Zulfikar Pass. Col. Kohlberg will be chief of the Russian commission, and M. Lessar next in command. Both commissions will be much smaller than those headed by Sir Peter Lumsden and Gen. Zelanoi. They will commence work within two months, and will probably finish their labors next August. The Russian Government has made a grant of £10,000 for a new house at Askabad for General Komaroff.

Town Council.

The Nicholls Hospital Transferred to the Town With an Endowment of $15,000.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held last evening for the purpose of considering a proposal from Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls in reference to the transferring to the town of the Nicholls hospital. The Mayor was in the chair and there were present the following councillors: Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNaughton, Green, Kelly, Rutherford, Menzies and Kendry.

On motion of Councillor Cahill, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with and the following letter from Mrs. Nicholls read:—

To the Council of the Town of Peterboro:—

SIRS,—On further consideration and in view of the difficulties which appear to surround the acceptance of the Nicholls hospital by the town and county jointly, I have determined to withdraw my original offer and to submit the following in its place. I now propose to transfer the hospital to trustees to be named by me, together with an endowment of $15,000, for the exclusive benefit of Protestants of the town of Peterborough, to be supported exclusively by Protestants of the town; and it is my desire that the necessary legislation shall be obtained for the purpose of enabling your body to impose a special tax for this object. I would suggest that in any legislation obtained, provision be made for the admission of the village of Ashburnham to the benefits of the hospital upon like terms. The hospital is now in order, ready for the reception of patients, and an efficient lady superintendent and staff of servants are already in charge. I hope that there will be as little delay as possible in placing the hospital in such a position that that it may be made available to those who are in need of it.

CHARLOTTE J. NICHOLLS.

Mr. Menzies, seconded by Mr. Kendry, moved "That the proposition of Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls be accepted upon the basis proposed by her, and that she name the trustees to manage the institution, and that the thanks of this council be tendered for her handsome offer."

The motion was carried and the council adjourned till the regular adjourned meeting.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

The Central Fair.

The preparations for the coming Fair at the new Agricultural Park have been making great headway under the careful superintendence of Mr. William Collins. The grounds have been cleared up and levelled off, and the fencing completed. On the east and south sides have been erected sheds, those on the east side being divided into 80 compartments and fitted up for neat stock, while on the south side 52 single and 40 double stalls have been provided for horses. The sheds are built in a very substantial manner, the doors of the horse boxes being divided in two parts, the upper one of which hooks up to the roof, while the lower half can be locked. This will enable the exhibitors to keep the stalls locked and give the visitors a chance to see the animals. At the gate, offices have been fitted up for the various officials and for ticket sellers, everything having been done in the strongest, most permanent and utilitarian way. It is intended to rent tents of large size in which to make the exhibits that usually go in a main building, it not having been deemed advisable to go on with the erection of a building this year.

Lakehurst.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A successful social and literary entertainment took place in the Presbyterian Church, Lakehurst, on Friday evening, the 11th inst., under the auspices of the singing class. The singing, which was furnished by the members of the class, was well executed and met with the due appreciation of the audience. Some of the pieces which were sung in the four parts were creditable to the young people of Lakehurst. Readings were given by the Misses Gray, Lizzie Chase and Mr. Stone. During the intermission the Sabbath School prizes were distributed. Miss Anna Smith, of the Bible Class, received, as first prize, a fine book, entitled "Buried Cities Recovered," which she well deserved, as she proved herself to be a diligent and clever student. The second prize was obtained by Miss Maggie Chase; the third by Miss Bella Renwick. Bibles and Testaments were distributed to the children, so that they would all have a copy of the Sacred Volume at Sabbath School. The standing of the scholars of the Bible class had been ascertained by a written examination, and the results were such as would give credit to any Bible class in the city. One of the most interesting features of the entertainment was a "Tableau Vivant," representing the execution of Mary Queen of Scotts. Miss Lizzie Chase, who personated the unfortunate Queen, did admirably well. Her pose was artistic and graceful. "Home Sweet Home" was then sung with expression and sweetness, by the Misses Chase, Elliott, Nettie Weir, and Messrs. Jones and Stone, after which an excellent address, accompanied with a valuable plush album, was presented to Mr. J. E. Duclos, by the Misses Maggie Renwick and Lizzie Chase, on behalf of the class. The evening, on a whole, was a pleasant one, and all present seemed to have enjoyed themselves. The young ladies of Harvey showed themselves capable of executing music in excellent harmony, and of displaying taste and ability in the art of composition and reading. Miss M. B. Brown, who presided at the organ, acquitted herself in a creditable manner. The chairman, Mr. James Hicks, expressed much joy in having the honor of presiding over such a large and fine a gathering, and highly complimented the proceedings of the evening. Messrs. J. W. Stone, Wm. Renwick, John Smith, J. Chase and J. Jones willingly assisted in preparing for the entertainment, and spared no time in making it a success. The meeting was closed by the benediction.

Mr. J. E. Duclos left Harvey on Tuesday for New York where he intends continuing his college course.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The regular meeting of the village council was held in the council chamber on Monday evening, September 14th.

Present, the Reeve in the chair, councillors Cox, McWilliams, Moore and Isbister.

Minutes of last regular and special meetings read and confirmed.

Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Cox, that the Reeve and Clerk be and are hereby authorized to sign the lease between Mr. A. P. Poussette and this council, of mill reserve No. 1, when Mr. S. Sherin or Mr. Dumble are satisfied that it is drawn out in accordance with the terms contained in Mr. Poussette's letter of Aug. 10th, 1885, accepted by this council.—Carried.

On motion of Councillor Isbister, seconded by Councillor McWilliams, the following accounts were paid:—

W. H. Casement, nails, &c	$ 6 00
Poussette & Roger, legal account	29 79
Alex. Bell, postage &c	3 31
David Smith, grates for drain	34 68
Isaac Watson, sr., drain across Queen street	8 00
Isaac Watson, sr., wages	14 85
Wm. Smith, wages	9 37½
John Rogers, horse hire	4 00
Christie Bell, wages	1 25
Wm. Leonard, boxes for drain	6 00
Total	$117 25½

A by-law to fix the rate and levy the taxes for the year 1885 received its several readings, was passed, sealed and signed by the Reeve and Clerk.

A by-law appointing Alex. Bell, M.D., medical health officer for the village of Lakefield received its several readings, was passed, sealed, and signed by the reeve and clerk.

Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Cox, that this Council do now adjourn to meet at the call of the reeve.—Carried.

TAXES FOR 1885.

At the meeting of the Council on Monday evening, the rate for the present year was struck at 9 mills on the dollar, a lower figure than it has been for many years, a fact which ought to afford satisfaction to the village ratepayers.

CHURCH DOOR LOAFING.

Great complaints are made by the church going public in regard to the number of young men who congregate around the church doors and on the sidewalk in front of the church, and disturb the minister and worshippers by passing in and out during service. More especially are complaints made by those who attend the Methodist church, and some action should be taken to lessen the evil. If the minister would call the attention of the people to every transgressor in that respect, the habit would soon come to an end.

STREET ROWDYISM.

For the last week or two, since the resignation of the village constable, a number of that class that are to be found in every town or village, have been indulging in various acts of blackguardism which has called forth the indignation of our peace and order loving citizens. On Monday night it was especially the case, one young man who has long since earned for himself a reputation in that character, made night hideous with his yells and foul language, as he roamed from one end of the village to the other, so that ladies were compelled to leave the streets or listen to his vile language. Our village council will have to take the matter in hand and put down all such characters with a strong arm. Now they have secured the mill property for village purposes, one of the first things is to have a lock-up built, and appoint a constable who will do his duty without fear or favor; then, and then only, may we expect to have such order as there should be in our village.

A BIG ROW.

The contractor for the Lakefield dam has had occasion to lower the water above the dam for the last day or two, so as to remove the remains of the old dam and the old piers above. The consequence is he has the boat owners and lumbermen all after him, and is receiving any amount of left-hand blessings from those parties. We understand the delay will be of short duration, as he is making every effort to get the obstructions removed and the stop logs in again as soon as possible, and then there will be no more cause for low water in future.

TO TORONTO.

Quite a number from the village and surrounding country have taken their departure to Toronto to take in the sights during the Exhibition, but the number going is not so large as in former years, since, owing to the wet, cold weather, work is so backward that many of our farmers cannot get away, while dull times prevent many in the village from securing sufficient of the needful to make the trip.

Belleville.

A young society lady of West Belleville, who considered her freckles the bane of her life, turned them to good account the other day. In the morning she covered her face with flour, which is said to be good for removing them, and while in this state a farmer arrived from the market with a quantity of produce. As he finished unloading, the [illegible] to show him where to empty his bags and baskets. She was greeted with:

"Why, Miss, what's the matter with you?"

Rather than confess her weakness she gave expression to the first thought that occurred to her and replied: "Nothing, only smallpox."

The man vanished, and in reply to the query if he did not want his bags and pay, yelled back' "No, I don't want anything."—Intelligencer.

Millbrook.

We learn by telephone that John Reynolds, of Millbrook, died very suddenly Sunday morning. Mr. Reynolds was in town Saturday, and was complaining of not feeling very well; he went home by afternoon train, but as he was getting out of the carriage at his own door he fell upon his head and was taken up unconscious. He rallied during the night, but died early in the morning. Mr. Reynolds was an old resident of Port Hope. Some 40 years ago he worked at his trade with the late Wm. Simson, who carried on an extensive tannery on his farm in Hope, now owned by the Wade Bros. Mr. Reynolds left Mr. Simson's employ, and commenced hotel business. He kept the old "Queen's Arms," where now stands the Lawrence Hall, then he moved out to Bletcher's Corners, where he kept a hotel for a number of years. He also ran the Queen's Hotel in Millbrook for a number of years, and was succeeded by his son, the well-known railroad man. Mr. Reynolds was 75 years old. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter to mourn his loss.—Guide.

About Walking.

Every healthy person, man or woman, should be a good walker, able at any time to walk six to twelve miles a day at least, and double that when gradually brought up to it. The points to be attended to are to see that the walk be brisk and vigorous, not of a loitering or dangling kind, that there be some object in the walk besides it being a routine constitutional (i. e., not like the staid promenade of the orthodox ladies' school), and, if possible, in pleasant company; that there be no tight clothing, whether for the feet or the body, which will constrain or impede the natural movements of the limbs and trunk; and that the walk be taken as far as possible in the fresh country air. In regard to the latter particular, although towns are increasing so rapidly as to make it almost a journey to get out of them on foot, still we have so many suburban tramways and railway lines that in a few minutes we can find ourselves in the country, where the air is fresh and pure. Whenever an opportunity presents itself for a little climbing in the course of a walk, it should be taken advantage of. We gain variety of muscular action, as well as increase in exertion, and we get into regions of purer air and fresher breeze at the same time. What may be considered as the weak point in walking as a mode of exercise is the comparatively small play which it gives to the muscles of the shoulders and chest, while it is still less for those of the arm. This should be compensated for by the use of light dumb-bells or Indian clubs, or some form of exercise which brings in play the arms and shoulders. One of the forms of exercise which requires the action of the arms and shoulders, as well as those of the trunk and legs, is swimming. This, however, for many reasons, cannot be used as a means of exercise except by a few, and at certain seasons of the year, but where possible it should always be practiced. The great pity is that boys and girls do not learn it while at school. Every large town should be well supplied with swimming baths, and if it could be made compulsory for scholars at a certain age, say 12, to learn to swim, it would be a great advantage to all, and also be the means of saving many lives.—Herald of Health.

Lincoln's Tenderness.

The late Isaac N. Arnold, in the biography of Abraham Lincoln, which he lived to complete, though not to see in print, gives these little touching proofs of the great man's tenderness of heart:

While Lincoln was serving as a captain in the Blackhawk war an old and half-starving Indian strayed into the camp of his company, all of whose members were exasperated by the barbarities lately perpetrated on the settlers, and some of whom—like Lincoln himself—had lost near relatives at the hands of the savages. In a frenzy of blind rage the soldiers refused to recognize the Indian's "safe conduct" and had cocked their muskets, determined to dispatch him, when Lincoln rushed forward, knocking up the pieces, and declared the man should not be killed. But the mob's passions were aflame and for some moments it seemed likely that Lincoln and his protege would both be shot down. After a pause the militia lowered their weapons and sullenly turned away. "I never," said an eye-witness, "in all my life saw Lincoln so roused before."

In the early days of his practice at the Springfield bar, Lincoln was coming home from a neighboring county seat with a party of lawyers, riding two by two along a country lane. Lincoln and a comrade brought up the rear, and when the rest stopped to water their horses his companion came up alone. "Where is Lincoln?" was the inquiry. "Oh," replied the comrade, "when I saw him last he had caught two young birds, which the wind had blown out of their nest, and he was hunting up the nest to put them back into it." In a short time Lincoln rode up, having found the nest and replaced its inmates.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

RIEL'S FATE.

Whatever Riel's fate may be, Sir John Macdonald has the power of deciding. The law is such that the sentence of death passed upon the arch rebel cannot be carried out without an order for its execution issued under the authority of the Dominion Government. Thus Sir John, as the head of that Government, has the matter in his own hands.

THE ONTARIO CROP PROSPECT.

The complete and generally correct reports of the Ontario Bureau of Industries are very valuable for the purpose of giving a correct estimate of the farmers' operations. According to the latest return the aggregate grain crop of this year will not come up to that of the last year by a considerable amount. The total aggregate crop of the different kinds of grain will amount to, in round numbers, one hundred and eighteen millions of bushels, as against one hundred and twenty-seven million bushels in the year 1884. The greatest falling off is in spring wheat, as was to be expected, the crop this year being five millions three hundred thousand short of last year. Barley falls short of last year's crop by almost three millions of bushels, while oats is short by about a million and a third bushels. Fall wheat goes far to make up the deficiency, the crop this year being five millions in advance of the yield of last year, while peas show an excess of seven hundred thousand bushels.

These figures are, it must be remembered, principally estimates, that is, for the current year's crops; when the actual results are reported to the Bureau they may be modified, and be increased or diminished. Indeed, some authorities think that the yield for the Central Ontario section has been over estimated. If good prices are realized farmers may not find the year's operations so unsatisfactory as was at one time feared. At present the latest reports show that the market for wheat is steady and firm, both in this country and England; if this condition holds there may be a fair price realized for the surplus wheat of this Province.

YOUNG LIBERALS.

A gathering of young men such as compose the Convention of Young Liberals in Toronto would have been an impossibility in the Conservative ranks, and it is one that would not be encouraged or tolerated by the Tory party, whose hereditary tenets prevent any departure upon the line of independent thought, discussion, or action. A Conservative must be thorough or nothing. His obedience must be unquestioning and his opinions must be those of his party. The least exhibition of an independent spirit subjects the rash man to the danger of being read out of the party. In the past any deviation for party allegiance has been thus rewarded. A recent case in point. Senator McInnes had the audacity to question the honesty of the administration of the Department of Railways and Canals and the official organ chopped off his political head at once, and from this moment the outspoken Senator ceases to be a member of the Conservative party. But the Liberal party, true to its name and instincts, allows the fullest and freest discussion of political subjects by its members. The Young Liberals in Toronto are not in any way curtailed or curbed. They have an interest in the Dominion and their aim, in studying means and modes of action that will restore honest government capable administration, and depose the king of corruption who at present misguides its destinies, are worthy of every encouragement. The meeting in Toronto, however, is not for mere talk; the primary object is for the purpose of securing Provincial organization, so that the good work that has been done by the Toronto organization may may be extended throughout the Province of Ontario. In no other sense than the political one is the truism more applicable that the young men are the hope of the country. Sir John Macdonald, by means that are familar to all, has succeeded in retaining his hold upon power, and has so firmly, by these means, secured the allegiance of the older members of his party, that all appeals to their patriotism will be unavailing. But younger men, who have more to look forward to and more interest in the future good government of the country, less saturated with political prejudice, less swayed by sordid self-interest, are more likely to place party before country, and to co-operate with those whose aim is to bring a system of governmental corruption to an end. No doubt the convention of the Young Liberals will produce important results. Even those who may oppose the methods they may propose, cannot but sympathise with their object, the promotion of the good of the country.

The Barley and Oats Crops.

The September crop bulletin of the Ontario Bureau of Industries has the following in reference to the

BARLEY CROP:

The condition of the barley crop, as indicated in the August bulletin, is verified in every particular by the later returns as now received. The growth of straw was unusually long, and except in one or two localities, the grain was a full average in plumpness and weight; but the bulk of the crop was permanently damaged by the storm of August 3rd, which extended pretty generally all over Ontario. To make matters still worse, the weather since that date has been broken and unfavourable, causing the barley harvest to be considerably delayed, and the crop in many cases to be housed in a damp and unmate that from two-thirds to four-fifths of the barley crop of the Province is discolored by the rains, and none of this will grade higher than No. 2 at the best. In consequence of the continued bad harvest weather the estimated aggregate product, by the last returns, is some 639,000 bushels, or an average of about one bushel per acre less than the estimate of last month.

THE OAT CROP.

The prospect for the oat crop is less favorable, according to the latest reports, than it was earlier in the season. Owing to the unusually rank growth of oats, the general lateness of the season, and the August storm, the ripening period was delayed considerably past the ordinary time. It is under such conditions that rust is usually developed; and the weather and temperature being likewise conducive to it, a large portion of the oat crop of the Province became speedily affected by this scourge. In Western Ontario only the earliest sown fields, or those in high situations, escaped and ripened to perfection. In the eastern part of the Province, in the Lake Ontario group, the prospect is slightly more encouraging, but throughout north-eastern Ontario the crop is so late that farmers do not expect it to ripen till frost comes to their assistance. The black varieties seem to be more susceptible to rust than the others. In the Lake Erie district, oats were seriously damaged by grass-hoppers during the growing season. The estimated average product of August is diminished by nearly two bushels per acre, owing to the later development of rust and the unfavorable harvest weather.

THE FALL WHEAT CROP.

The September bulletin of the Ontario Bureau of industries has the following report:—

As will be seen by the appended table, the yield of fall wheat throughout the Province is even better than appeared by the August report of the Bureau, the average being 24.3 bushels per acre as against an estimate of 23.3 bushels by the last report; or a total product according to the former of 21,280,543 bushels, as against 20,374,729 bushels by the latter. Many correspondents state that the result of threshing showed that the crops suffered far less than was expected by the rains which prevailed over large areas of the Province during the harvest season. Though the grain sprouted in some localities, and though, as mentioned in the August report, there are pretty general complaints of rust in low-lying fields, still as a whole the crop was harvested in surprisingly good condition, the result no doubt of the cool breezy weather which followed the rains of early harvest.

Sabbath School Association.

The Sabbath School Association of Canada, will hold its 12th annual provincial convention in the city of Stratford on October 20th, 21st and 22nd. Duly accredited delegates will be allowed to travel at one and a third fare rates.

Hastings.

The entries in blood cattle for the West Hastings Agricultural Fair far exceed any made here for a number of years, Mr. H. M. Williams having entered his entire herd of Holstein cattle. In Short Horns the entries exceed any former exhibit. There will also be a good display of Jersey cattle. It is expected, from present indications, that the exhibit in all grades of horses will be large.

RESCUED.

It was in the fall of the year that the circus tents were pitched in the beautiful flat meadows just outside the village, and after that time, as the teacher said, in despair, there was no getting a decent lesson studied.

John Johnson lived in an out-of-the way spot on the side of the mountain, where he took care of a charcoal-pit.

John Johnson had no family of his own, but he and his wife had adopted their two little orphan nephews, Sidney and Didcote Warren, commonly known as "Sid" and "Did," little urchins of nine and eleven years old.

The house was small, but it was very cosy and comfortable when once you got to it. And Sid and Did had their play-room in the garret, full of curiosities which they had collected on mountain-sides and in ravines.

They were too far away to go to school very regularly, so Aunt Elsie heard their lessons; and as she had once been a school-teacher herself, they got along very nicely indeed.

But one afternoon, down in the village, they heard of the circus.

"Wild ani-miles!" said breathless Joe Potter.

"And a zebra, all striped," said Willie Henderson, "and a buffalo, and a tiger."

"And a clown that tells the funniest stories you ever heard, and tumbles head over heels right under the horses' feet," stuttered Billy Jenkins, anxious to get in his word.

"Oh, and the performing ponies," squeaked Fanny B[illegible] "I do love that little speckled dar[illegible] with the two white feet? And——

"Ho!" said Beckford Bliss, "that's nothing. Ponies are ponies all the world over. You should see the Educated Leopard and Little Leonardo."

"Is Leonardo a wild beast, too?" asked Didcote, while Sidney stood by with wide-open mouth and eyes.

"He's a little boy, no bigger than you or me, in black velvet and spangles, and stunning pink boots," said Beckford. "He puts his hand into the leopard's mouth, and rides on his back with only a pink ribbon for a bridle. Fan won't look at him. She shuts her eyes when Little Leonardo comes on. She says it makes her blood feel like ice"

Sid and Did looked at each other.

"How I should like to see him," said Sid.

"Let's ask Uncle Jack to let us go," said Did.

"Everybody is going," said Beckford loftily. "I tell you it's fun."

And that was how it happened that Uncle Jack and the two boys came down to visit the circus that windy autumn evening.

All the show was very fine, and received plenty of applause, particularly Little Leonardo, who looked like a picture in his black velvet suit, long yellow curls, pink silk stockings, and kid boots, with a gilt crown perched on his curly head.

The leopard bounded, snarling, on to the stage, but Little Leonardo sprang lightly on his back, and evinced no fear when the savage beast crouched in one corner of the stage.

"Open," said the child, lifting up one finger, and stamping the pink kid foot on the floor. "Open!"

The keeper cracked his whip—the leopard sullenly opened his mouth, displaying [illegible] and two rows of sharp white teeth.

Leonardo thrust his hand in up to the wrist, and turned smiling to the audience.

"Look!" he said. "Look!"

And, followed by a burst of applause, he skipped off the stage.

The audience, however, was not satisfied.

Loud cheers, clappings, and whistles sounded shrilly on the air.

"Leonardo, Leonardo!" echoed from one end of the place to the other.

And then Mr. Johnson, sitting close to the dividing curtain, overheard a very remarkable dialogue.

"Oh, I can't! I can't!" wailed a shrill little voice. "Oh, master, don't ask me! Oh, please don't!"

"Hold your noise," spoke a low savage tone. "Get up this minute. Don't you hear 'em! What are you lying there for? Do you want another taste of the red hot iron?"

"But he snapped at me the last time. He'll kill me!" shrieked the little accents. "Oh, master, I am afraid of him."

"Hush-sh-sh!" hissed the stern voice. "Never let me hear that word again. Afraid! If ever they thought you were afraid of the creature, the business would be all up. Here! Jump quick, I say! I'll pull out another one of your teeth, if you make any more fuss."

At the same moment he stepped smilingly before the footlights.

"Good ladies and gentlemen," he said smoothly, "the Little Leonardo will be here instantly. He but stays to lace his boot. Pedro, bring the leopard!"

But the leopard did not wait to be brought. Either his savage instinct broke fully forth at that moment, or something in the audience terrified and displeased him.

At all events, he gave a sudden leap, snapping the chain, and sprang at the showman's throat!

For an instant there was a deadly grapple. Shrieks filled the air. Women fainted. Children screamed.

The keeper, who had momentarily seemed to lose his senses, recovered them again, and, drawing his revolver, shot the brute through the head, but not before its claws and teeth had so lacerated the showman's face that he fell insensible on the stage floor.

And when he had once more recovered, and the panic was over, the dead brute was dragged out by two men, and the performing ponies cantered on to the stage.

They looked around for Leonardo, who was to come next in his "Grand Act" of driving a pair of ostriches, harnessed to a tiny chariot.

But Leonardo was gone.

Nowhere could they find him. In fact, they never found him. All search, all the printed advertisements were in vain.

And when the circus company left Stone Ledge, Little Leonardo's place was vacant.

Where do you suppose he was? Well, of course you will all guess. You can easily imagine how at the instant when the showman stepped so smilingly on the stage, good John Johnson lifted the curtain and caught the poor little grovelling object off the floor:

"Here, said he, in a low voice, as he wrapped around the tiny form a coarse grey blanket-shawl which Aunt Elsie had given him for the boys in case it should be cold coming home. "Don't kick! It's a friend. Just keep quiet."

At that moment all the excitement about the leopard's spring was at its height. Did and Sid clung shrieking to their uncle's coat.

"Boys, this is no place for us," said Mr. Johnson. "Come!"

Fortunately their seat was near the side door, and in the general confusion they were unnoticed. One or two long strides took them safe out into the cool night air, and almost before it seemed possible, they were in the box-wagon with Ned, galloping over the hills as fast as he could go.

"Where are you going to take me?" said Leonardo with a startled face.

"Home!" said Uncle John.

And home it was. Aunt Elsie was considerably startled, as you may guess, by the appearance of three little boys instead of two, and one of them clad in such an extraordinary costume. But when she understood it all she said that Uncle John had done exactly right.

He had no friends or relatives—at least, so he said—and the good couple on the mountain adopted him for their own.

But he never likes to talk about his circus life. He only shudders and is silent when the conversation turns on such things.

THE CRUEL MARRIAGE.

Orthell Chandler lived in the beautiful brown-stone mansion on the corner of —— street and Fifth avenue. Standing at the head of the New York bar, with an already princely fortune accumulated, he not only held an enviable position in society, but exercised a powerful influence in the business world. In consequence of his close attention to business he had contracted the false habit of measuring men by dollars. Mrs. Chandler's proud nature conformed to the same principle in her choice of society. They had but one child, upon whom they lavished all the affection that could exist in their cold natures.

Eugenia Chandler, the beautiful, affectionate and warm-hearted girl of eighteen summers, would have never been taken for the child of Orthell Chandler, and, notwithstanding the teaching and influences around her, she retained a noble spirit of concession, being modest and retired.

Wilbur Lockwood, the corresponding clerk of the firm of Chandler & Corning, was a young man of prepossessing appearance and a high moral standing. The possession of a fine business talent had won the confidence and esteem of the firm.

His position necessarily brought him frequently to Mr. Chandler's house, where he became acquainted with Eugenia. Although these meetings were short, and at long intervals, yet the kindred natures of the two had kindled the spark of love deep in their souls. Wilbur Lockwood was aware of the gulf that lay between them in social standing, and his sense of honor would not allow him to take the advantage that his position gave him. Accordingly, after careful consideration, he concluded to lay before Mr. Chandler his hopes and gain his permission to seek the hand of his daughter.

Wilbur Lockwood was not the only one who aspired to the hand of the heiress.

Orthington, the wealthy old bachelor, had found his withered heart warmed by the quiet sparkle of Eugenia's eye, and Mr. and Mrs. Chandler saw the preference shown their child and were nourishing bright hopes for her future.

"What a grand match that will make," said Mrs. Chandler to her husband.

"Then to think that Mr. Orthington has really taken a liking to our child!"

"Can't I see?" replied Mrs. Chandler while a smile of triumph flitted across her cold, marble features.

"Have you spoken to Eugenia upon the subject?"

"Oh, no; she will of course see the advantage of the offer and overlook the difference in their ages."

"That is an advantage. Mature age gives stability to character."

Here the subject was dropped.

Wilbur Lockwood seized the first opportunity that presented itself of communicating his views to his employer. After the business of the day had been settled that had called him to Mr. Chandler's library, he broached the subject, and in an earnest, respectful manner asked Mr. Chandler's permission to win the hand of his daughter.

"Mr. Lockwood, are you not aware that your condition in life makes it impossible, yes, makes it presumption, to ask for the hand of my daughter? The position that Eugenia holds in society must not be lowered by an improper marriage."

"I am aware of the humble position I hold, but I am young, and there is a fair chance for me to gain eminence as others have done before me."

"Very possible, Mr. Lockwood, but success is very precarious at the best, and I could not for a moment think of risking my daughter's happiness. By the way, what right have you to assume that she reciprocates your affections?"

"By the invisible magnetism of love, which I believe to be deep-rooted in her heart."

"Invisible fiddlesticks! Rid yourself as soon as possible of this absurd notion. I will make a wager my daughter never once entertained a thought of the kind. I will dismiss the subject now," and without another word he turned to his desk.

Mr. Lockwood saw that future argument would be useless, and with bitter feelings of disappointment and wounded pride, he left the room. Only a few hours elapsed before Mr. Orthington's card was laid before the lawyer, asking a private interview.

"Mr. Chandler, my business here is to ask for the hand of your daughter. I command wealth and a position which I think will meet your requirements."

"Very true, Mr. Orthington, and I am happy to say you already have my consent, and I hope you will find a no less hearty response from my daughter."

At the table Mr. Chandler, glancing at his daughter, remarked:

"Eugenia, this day has been the most eventful of your life."

"How so, papa?"

"Two offers for your hand—one rejected, the other accepted."

"Who were they?" asked Eugenia, the crimson mantling her cheek.

"Be patient and I will tell you. This morning our corresponding clerk, Mr. Lockwood, laboring under the delusion of reciprocal affection, sought your hand, but I think I have effectually relieved him of the absurd notion. Again, this afternoon, Mr. Orthington called upon the same business, and of course I was pleased to give my approval, and I trust the day is not far distant when I shall see my daughter wear the title of Lady Orthington."

"Oh, papa, you could not do such a thing! I would never marry Mr. Orthington. No, never! You surely cannot have the heart to attempt to barter away your child's happiness for gold. Father, why did you encourage him?"

"My daughter," said Mr. Chandler, "I would never have believed you to be such an ungrateful child. Have you no confidence in your father's judgment?"

"I love papa too dearly to distrust his motives; but how can he know who I may love, and he does not, for this very act proves it."

"Then," said Mr. Chandler, sharply, "are you wasting your affections upon that penniless clerk?"

"Father, do not speak so of Mr. Lockwood; he is a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and because, as you have been pleased to remark, penniless, he is none the less a gentleman."

"Is it possible, Eugenia, that you could be induced to marry him?"

"Since he has made an acknowledgment to you, I will say in all earnestness that I love him, and shall consent to marry none other, and, dear father, if you wish your son-in-law to hold a high position in life, exert your influence in his behalf; with a fair chance, you need never be ashamed of Wilbur Lockwood."

Her pallid cheek betrayed the emotion of her heart.

"Eugenia, it is my wish that you become the wife of Mr. Orthington."

"Father, I have obeyed you in all things from my childhood, but when you ask me to sacrifice my happiness, and all that makes life worth living, for that it was given us, to obey is not my duty."

Without waiting for a reply Eugenia sought her own room, where the pent-up agony of her soul found vent in tears. Mr. Chandler's surprise and anger at his daughter's positive refusal, for the first time, to obey his commands, knew no bounds. His iron will could not be turned from its purpose, and time did not serve to relax his determination. Once again Eugenia had pleaded for Wilbur Lockwood for the last time; the stern parent had commanded her never again to breathe that name in his presence. Every artifice had been used to bring her to consent to marry Mr. Orthington, but to no avail.

Mr. Chandler, rather than lose what he thought to be a brilliant offer, resolved to bend her to his will. Consequently, the marriage contract was drawn and handed to Eugenia to sign.

"Father, I have used all the means in my power to avoid this, as well as to convince you that I can never love Mr. Orthington. This is my death warrant—the warrant that consigns me to an early grave. With this avowal from me, do you again command me?"

"It is my wish, Eugenia," replied Mr. Chandler, nervously turning the paper in his hands.

No tear moistens the eye when she signs the contract, and as Mr. Chandler refolded the papers he attempted to acknowledge his approbation.

But Eugenia cut him short.

"Father, spare me," said she, leaving the room.

"She will see the advantage in after years," said Mr. Chandler to himself, to quiet his unpleasant feelings.

Pale and downcast Eugenia stands before the altar.

"Will you love, cherish and obey?"

No answer passes her lips.

Again the minister repeats his question.

Scarcely above a breath the sound reaches his ear:

"I will obey."

He quickly passes through with the ceremony. He already reads the truth, and his kind, noble heart is moved with compassion.

One short month, and Mr. and Mrs. Chandler are called to the bedside of their dying child.

"Doctor," said Mr. Chandler, wringing his hands in agony, "save our child! Oh, save her!"

"Impossible!" he replied; "there is no cure for a broken heart."

Father, mother, you diverted the hand of Providence. Reap your reward in a life filled with sorrow and regret. Your repentance comes too late.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

To Subscribers.

Subscribers to the DAILY EVENING EXAMINER will greatly oblige us by reporting promptly any neglect in the delivery of their paper.

This Season.

Fair, VanEvery & Co'y have opened a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps, in many styles, much below regular prices. Don't fail to see them.

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office :—Winds mostly north-west and north ; fine, slightly cooler weather.

Gentlemen

will find at the "Golden Lion" an elegant stock of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, Over-coating, Rubber Over-coats, Furrishings, Underwear, &c. Tailoring a specialty—and a first-class cutter at your command.

Spectacles.

Testimonial from P. Lynch, Esq., Q.C.:—

HALIFAX, N. S., May 29, 1883.

I hereby certify that I have been using a pair of Mr. Laurance's spectacles for the last 18 years with great satisfaction and benefit to my eyes.

GEO. E. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

A Novel Arrest.

As. P. C. Adams was looking out of the window of the constables' room in the town hall this morning he noticed what he at first supposed to be a pigeon strutting around. A second look, however, convinced him that it was a partridge, and, going down, he gave chase and captured the bold little bird under some barrels in the arcade, where it took refuge. Like other prisoners made by the police it was taken before the Magistrate, who, instead of inflicting a fine, confiscated the prisoner.

A Spill.

About 10 o'clock this morning a waggon, drawn by two horses, and containing a farmer and his wife, who were bringing to market their eggs, butter, &c., collapsed near the crossing at the arcade. The two front wheels and tongue became detached from the remainder of the rig, the front part of which came down with a crash that boded ill for the frail freight that some of the baskets contained. The farmer's wife, a portly matron of about 200 pounds weight, who was sitting in the back seat of the waggon, received a jolt that made her teeth chatter, but held on until assisted out over the wheel, but her better half, holding on to the lines, alighted with more speed than gracefulness. A crowd gathered around the fallen waggon and it was not long before the fat lady had sold off all her load of produce, so that after all the accident was not without its good results.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

ATHLETICS.

The Rollers.

MATCH RACE BETWEEN SCOTT AND SHEVLIN.

In the two hours' endurance race at the Lansdowne rink on Monday night, Scott, who won second place, was badly handicapped by the skates he wore, having to stop frequently to tighten them up. Although he finished some eight laps behind Shevlin, he was quite fresh and strong, while his supporters believe that Shevlin was almost exhausted, and would have been beaten if the race had continued much longer. A race has accordingly been arranged between these two skaters, to take place at the Lansdowne on Friday evening. The time will be one hour, for a prize valued at $10. Scott will, on this occasion, wear a pair of skates of the most improved kind, and an exciting race may be looked forward to.

Baseball.

LINDSAYS V. PETERBOROUGHS.

To-morrow the Lindsays and Peterboroughs will meet in Riverside Park, and the long disputed question of their relative merits will stand a fair chance of being decisively settled. [illegible] ting on the strongest team they can get together, and if the Lindsays are content to play only their own local players, the contest should be a keen and exciting one. There are some rumours floating round that they will bring several Toronto men along, but it is to be hoped they will be sufficiently confident of their strength not to employ outside talent except in their battery. The following are the members of the home nine: —F. O'Neil, c.; P. J. Sullivan, p.; W. Dayman, s.s.; W. Metheral, 1b.; F. Billings, 2b.; H. Dunn, 3b.; E. Rogers, r.f.; A. Campbell, c.f.; C. Rutherford, l.f.; F. Cameron, s.m.

Fair, VanEvery & Co.

have imported this season a most complete assortment of Mourning Goods, ranging from the new Crepe Epingle, Jet Cashmeres, French Silk Crapes, &c., to the more artistic Black Crape Bonnets, Caps, &c.

Scott Act Campaign.

Another mass meeting will be held in the Opera House to-night, to be addressed by the Rev. W. A. McKay, of Woodstock. Mr. McKay has had large experience in Scott Act work and is a very effective speaker.

The Parlor Rink.

The comfortable and select little Parlour Rink is being well patronized these cool days. The carefulness of the management in maintaining order, and the select character of the rink patrons, make the Parlour Rink extremely popular among parents, who, while wishing their children to enjoy healthful exercise, are anxious to avoid any questionable surroundings.

Great Activity

in the Mantle and Dress Making Department at Fair, VanEvery & Co's. Ladies will appreciate the large assortment of handsome materials from which Rich and Elegant Mantles and Dresses are being turned out daily.

Organ Recital.

An organ recital will be given next Tuesday evening, September 22nd, in St. John's Church, by Mr. Charles C. Hampshire, assisted by the choirs of St. John's and St. Paul's Churches and Prof. J. Parker. The programme, which contains a large number of anthems and solos, in addition to eight organ pieces, has been carefully selected, and the known talent of those taking part in it is an assurance of an excellent and pleasing entertainment. Admission fifteen cents.

Peterborough Prize Winners.

Messrs. Porter Bros., who exhibited a number of their excellent carriage tops at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition, were successful in carrying off the second prize in competition with the most noted makers in the Dominion. The first prize was carried off by a Toronto firm, and it is altogether likely that if Porter Bros. had not had so far to transport their goods they would have stood at the head of the list. Another year we expect to hear of their taking first honors.

A Sporting Episode.

Not many mornings ago a young sportsman, who lives not far from Hilliard's mills, espied a flock of ducks on the river near Frog Island. Hurriedly returning to the house, he took down his double-barrelled blunderbuss and hastily loaded, as he supposed, both barrels with a heavy charge of powder and duck shot. Returning to the river and finding the game still there, he approached with stealthy step till well within range, when, bringing his fowling piece to his shoulder, he took a long and careful aim and pulled the trigger. Instead of the report, followed by a scattering among the ducks, which he expected, the hammer fell with a harmless click on the nipple, and the ducks quack! quacked on undisturbed. Determined not to be disappointed of his shot, he again took a steady aim with the second barrel and pulled the other trigger, half fearing a second miss-fire. In this, however, he was stupendously disappointed, for, with a roar like that of artillery, the piece went off, and so did the young sportsman, the recoil sending him spinning backwards many feet. When he recovered his senses, and his feet, he noticed that the ducks had gone off too, and were just disappearing over the horizon, sending back a few derisive quacks by way of a parting salute. The young sportsman avers that one of them was missing, but a search for it failed to bring it to light. On examination the sportsman found that in his haste he had put both charges in one barrel, and if the charge struck the missing duck with the same violence that the recoil struck the sportsman, it is quite likely that portions of duck and a shower of feathers will be heard of in some adjoining county.

Ontario's Young Liberals.

A Provincial Association Formed—Hon. Mr. Blake Honorary President—Resolutions Adopted.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—The most sanguine hopes of the young men who originated the idea of a Convention of Young Liberals from all parts of the Province, and who have for the past few months been working to promote the movement throughout the country, were far exceeded yesterday morning as groups after groups of members presented themselves at the doors of Shaftesbury Hall to attend the Convention. The observer could not fail to notice the alert, active bearing of the delegates, and their general look of keen intelligence. It may be said without offensiveness toward any other gathering that there never before has been in Toronto or probably in the Dominion an assemblage pervaded by a more thoroughly Canadian air. While there was plenty of life, there was little boisterousness, and while the utmost good humor and courtesy prevailed, there was manifested a most business-like intolerance of anything that seemed to tend toward sectionalism, hobby-riding, or the indulgence in fads of any kind. All appeared to fully realize that they were not here for mere amusement or child's play, but to discuss soberly and conscientiously the political situation of the country.

A provincial association was formed with Hon. Edward Blake, honorary president, A. F. McIntyre, Ottawa, president, and A. C. Robinette, B. A., Toronto, secretary.

A resolution denouncing the principles of the Dominion Franchise Act, proclaiming the principle that the Franchise is a civil right that should be dealt with by provinces, and pronouncing in favour of every young man 21 years of age, having a vote, was adopted after an amendment in favor of woman suffrage had been voted down.

A resolution in favor of the repeal of the Dominion Franchise Act of 1885, and pledging the Convention to vigilance in looking after the lists of voters to be prepared by the revising barristers, was carried. Another resolution was carried, asserting the right of Canada negotiating her own commercial treaties, and framing her own reciprocity treaties. The Convention adjourned till Wednesday.

What We May Expect.

Rain again some time to-night.

A jewel of a wedding before long.

Lindsay baseballers to-morrow—perhaps.

His worship to enjoy partridge for dinner this evening.

Rev. Mr. McKay to talk about temperance at the Opera House to-night.

What they are Saying.

We'll be with you to-morrow.—The Lindsay baseball team.

Don't play the "Dawson's" game.—The Peterboroughs.

We've the blue ticket on our carriage tops.—Porter Bros.

It's because they are tip top articles.—Industrial Exhibition judges.

I've got the town to accept my money at last.—Mrs. Nicholls.

We Would Like to Know.

If the Lindsays will really be on hand to-morrow.

And if they will bring any Toronto men with them.

What line of argument Mr. McKay will follow at the Opera House to-night.

And if there will be any opposition.

Why the C. P. R. trains are so much behind time this week.

A Munificent Gift.

The Hospital Presented to Peterborough by Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls—Description of the Building.

The acceptance by the Town Council on Monday evening of Mrs. Nicholls' munificent offer to transfer to trustees, to be named by her on behalf of the town, the Nicholls Hospital, together with an endowment of $15,000, has invested that institution with new interest, and a brief description of the property acquired by the town through Mrs. Nicholls' generosity cannot fail to be of interest.

The building, which in future will be known as the Nicholls' Hospital, is a comfortable and spacious looking mansion, standing in extensive grounds on the south side of the gravel road leading to Port Hope, but within the limits of North Monaghan township. It was built some ten years or so ago, for the late Mrs. Cottingham, who occupied it up to the time of her death, when it was sold by auction and passed into the hands of Mr. Geo. A. Cox, who at one time entertained the idea of utilizing it as a branch of the Dr. Barnardo home; for which purpose, however, it was found to be too small. After being occupied for some time by Rev. J. Shaw it again became vacant, and Mrs. Nicholls, having conceived the philanthropic idea of instituting and endowing became the purchaser of it. The house is a substantial building of red brick, with white facings, fronting the east, and is approached from the road by a driveway, at the gate of which stands a small porter's lodge, which will, when the fitting out of the Hospital is complete, be occupied by the janitor. This cottage and the gate has from disuse, fallen into a rather dilapidated condition, but the grounds, which are covered by apple trees, and ornamented by flower beds and fancy trees of various kinds, have evidently been well cared for and carefully kept. The house stands on a little plateau, commanding a pleasant view of the southern part of the town and is approached by a short flight of steps. On entering the massive doorway a broad hall is seen, from the centre of which ascends a wide stairway flanked by heavy oaken balusters, and leading to the second floor. To the right of the entry is the sitting room, a comfortable apartment furnished in modern style, and in the rear of this again is the dining room, a spacious and airy room, appropriately furnished, and lighted by two large windows facing the north. The room to the left of the main entrance has been furnished as the surgery and the floor is covered with oil cloth. Another apartment in rear of the surgery and having windows opening on to a verandah facing south, has not yet been fitted up, but will probably be utilized as a library. The accommodation in rear of the house, kitchen, pantries, store rooms, etc., is abundant, and well adapted to the purpose for which it is to be used. Upstairs the two front rooms have been fitted up as male and female wards, each being furnished with two iron bedsteads and the usual appurtenances of a hospital room. These are the only two wards at present fitted up, but there is between them at the front of the house another room that will likely be used as a ward. There are also numerous other sleeping rooms, store rooms and bath rooms in the house, in fact for any demands likely to be made on its capacity for some years to come.

The Nicholls Hospital is remarkably well adapted, from its situation and general plan, to the purposes for which it is to be used, and the people of Peterborough have reason to be extremely grateful to Mrs. Nicholls for her beneficence and philanthropy in presenting them with this much needed adjunct of every modern community.

The lady Superintendent, Mrs. Hannah Dalby, is at present away spending her holidays, but is expected home shortly, and on her return and the final completion of the transfer arrangements and for the reception of patients will be made.

The Scott Act.

Another Meeting at Bradburn's Opera House—Addresses by the Rev. W. A McKay.

Rev. W. A. McKay, B. A., of Woodstock, to whose efforts the carrying of the Scott Act in his own County was largely due, addressed a crowded meeting in Bradburn's Opera House last evening in favor of the Scott Act. The chair was taken by Rev. Mr. Bennett, and Mayor Cox, Rev. F. H. Wallace, Rev. E. F. Torrance and Rev. I. Tovell occupied seats on the platform. After a hymn had been sung Rev. F. H. Wallace opened the meeting by devotional exercises. After another hymn had been sung the collection was taken up. During that process Mayor Cox addressed the meeting, stating that funds would be provided, ample to carry the campaign to a successful issue, and more than that, he would himself become personally responsible for the statement that it would be rigidly enforced, and that a competent officer would be retained by the promoters of the Act for that purpose. He also referred to a scurrilous letter which had appeared in the Evening Review making attacks on himself. In regard to the reward bills referred to in that letter, he could only say that similar bills had been issued in every county in which the Act had been submitted. The letter referred to also said that the speaker did not say anything against Messrs. Gooderham and Worts, the Toronto distillers, with whom he held business relations. He wished to say that he had never said anything against anyone engaged in the traffic, but he always had, and always would do and say everything in his power

AGAINST THE TRAFFIC ITSELF.

The chairman, in a short address, introduced the speaker of the evening, who expressed his pleasure in being associated with so many old friends in a measure they all had so much at heart. After referring to the great progress made in the temperance cause during the last eight years, he proceeded to enlarge upon the great and many evils of the drinking habits of the present age. He remarked that reference had been made to Canon Farrar by the chairman; he hoped that good might come from the presence of that great man in this country. Both in England and in this country, he said, the minds of the greatest thinkers had been attracted to the great evil of drink, and it was recognized as the greatest question of the age. He then showed the great loss the country sustained by means of the liquor traffic, more, far more by millions, being spent on drink than on the necessities of life or education. We spent sixty-nine times as much money in this Dominion on strong drink as was raised by all the religious denominations for home and foreign missions. Could we, while doing this, say that we had not the means of spreading the Gospel among the heathen? And our neglect was repaid by fearful and frequently recurring tragedies incited by drink. Only yesterday a mother in Toronto had been driven by the demon drink to attempt to murder her own three innocent babes. Numerous other instances were quoted, in one of which a mother and daughter had been murdered by a husband and father under the influence of drink. If the opponents of the Act would show him in the bar room, he would pledge himself never to open his mouth against it again. He characterised the bar room as the widest gate to hell, and again reiterated that there was no redeeming feature in it that should make any Christian vote for its maintenance. No one could defend it, they might raise a false flag and call themselves Liberal temperance or what they would, but not one of them could defend the bar room on its own merits. He looked upon every bar room as a direct opposition to the church. He had been asked why he did not preach the Gospel and let the Scott Act alone. He knew no gospel but our duty to our fellow men and to our God, that was the gospel Paul preached. By preaching the Gospel some people meant preach about anything but their own sins. That, however, was not the Gospel, and any man who did not preach against the greatest evil of the age was not preaching the Gospel as he understood it.

ONE REDEEMING FEATURE

The question was how to deal with the evil. There were three ways; free traffic in it, which he supposed no one present would be in favor of, though if it were a legitimate industry that was the proper way to deal with it, like any other business; if it was a good business we should wish it success. But the fact that steps were taken to curtail it, showed that it was an evil.

The second way was by license, which was wrong in principle, because it was wrong to sanction evil, and no thinking man would deny that the bar-room was the cause of a great majority of the crimes committed in the land. No intelligent, moral man could vote for a law that and that was just what the license law did. Under the license system, he said, we licensed men to make their fellow men drunk, and then fined the victims for being what we had licensed others to make them. We prayed that intemperance might be removed from among us, and yet by voting for license sustained what we knew to be the cause of that evil. It was simply a question of right and wrong, and license was not only wrong in principle, but utterly inefficient in practice. A deputation, headed by Eugene O'Keefe, a leading Toronto brewer, had not long ago waited on Premier Mowat, and represented that in Toronto there were 1,000 houses selling liquor without license, under the Crooks Act. He charged that there were no hotel keepers who did not every day violate the provisions of the Crooks Act, and it could not be called a success, yet these men were all in favour of it.

The third way of dealing with the traffic was the one now proposed, prohibition. The question was, had the community a right to protect themselves. Where one man in the exercise of his rights interfered with the rights of another, the community had a right to interfere. A butcher's right to have a slaughter house in the town limits would not be admitted. But there were other slaughter houses within our limits, he said, the saloons were slaughter houses, and we had as much right to say you must go outside the limits to them as to the other butchers. A man could do to himself as he pleased, but in what he did to others the law had a right to interfere. The law regulated all our relationships to each other. If a man opened a bar on a certain corner, and we knew it would be and drunkeness, we had a right to prevent it; and that was the principle of prohibition. All kinds of concessions had been made to the traffic, and no good had come of it, and it was now time that it was finally put an end to. There were objections to the Scott Act, and he wished some of the opponents were there to advance them, for it would give him a rest, but as they were not, he must bring them forward and answer them too. He then brought up the objection that the Dunkin Act had been a failure, and showed that it was entirely dissimilar to the Scott Act, which had been framed specially to overcome its defects. He then went on to illustrate the difference between the workings of the two acts by comparison of the fines and penalties inflicted by them, by the length of time in which they could be repealed, and their comparative legal status. The Dunkin Act, he said, had never been thoroughly established as constitutional, but the Scott Act had been declared so by the highest legal tribunal in the empire, and there was no appeal from the decision of a magistrate under its provisions. Another objection raised was that the Scott Act was not a success. Now the best judges of its success must be the people who had lived under it, and whenever a repeal vote had been brought up, the Act had been sustained, often with increased majorities. That did not look as if the people who knew how the Act worked thought it a failure. The County of Halton, where the greatest efforts of all had been made to repeal the Act, had actually doubled their majority in its favour The fact that the Scott Act was being so strenuously opposed, was in itself a sign that it was successful in accomplishing its object; if it had proved the failure some would have people believe there would have been no opposition to it. It was said the Scott Act could not be enforced, but he knew it could be, and he did not say there was no drinking in counties where it was in force, but he had evidence in abundance to prove that drinking was greatly decreased in them. He read letters from the Mayors of Woodstock and Ingersoll, in which it stated that the Act was a success in those towns and that business did not suffer, and also from the Conservative and Liberal members for the County of Halton, who said that the Act was successful and did not injure any business but the liquor traffic. And even if the Scott Act was not a complete success, he argued, it was not to be regarded as the final measure, but only a stepping stone to final total prohibition. One word as to the statement that it would increase the taxes. A sober people would never have difficulty in paying their taxes, and a wealthy people would never be made by spending money in strong drink. The speaker finished his address with an earnest appeal to his audience as parents, husbands and Christians, to vote for the Act and aid the movement in every way.

WAS BEING ENFORCED;

At the conclusion of Mr. McKay's address the question was asked whether it was true, as stated by opponents of the Act, that there was a man in the County of Halton who could not be convicted under the Act because he had been already fined three times.

Mr. McKay replied that it was not. The Act said that for the "third and every subsequent offence, etc.," so that for each offence subsequent to the third he could be punished the same as for that infringement.

The meeting was then closed by Rev. E. F. Torrance, who pronounced the benediction.

"Progress" Replies.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Excuse my re-appearance, but I am dragged into it this time. I notice that your contemporary, the Review, accuses me, with its usual intemperance of speech, of being an "anonymous slanderer" in saying that Mr. Carnegie, M. P. P., devotes a large share of his attention to the improvement of stock, and that he is opposed to "industrial developement." I have yet to learn that stating the truth and nothing but the truth can be properly called slander. I should, in relation to the "doing" be pleased if the Review would specify in what way Mr. Carnegie "has done, at least, as much to promote local industries as some who make louder pretensions. Did we not have, at one time, an agricultural establishment on Simcoe street, and who was it that, ignoring both local industries and agricultural interests, in an overwhelming anxiety to rake in the shekels, squeezed it so that it collapsed? Is this one instance in which Mr. Carnegie "has done, at least, as much as some, etc?" Did we not have, at one time, another industrial establishment of which Mr. Carnegie was the head? It was not to say very flourishing, but when it, too, collapsed under the management of the gentleman, that "has done at least as much," there was not a very comforting lookout, for the parties unfortunate enough to be in the relation of creditors. These are about the most striking instances, in addition to his wet-blanket attitude towards the exemption question, that I can recollect. If the Review has better sources of information, it might amplify the very creditable list.

I have no objection, whatever, to Mr. Carnegie dabbling in stock raising. It is creditable to him as the one aim of his life of which he need not be ashamed. But I do object, in the name of progress, when he sallies out from his bucolic retreat and impertinently interferes with the prosecution of a scheme calculated to aid in promoting the industrial interests of the town. If he honestly desires to advance the interests of the town, he should devote a portion of his abundant spare time and means to raising a smoke in his "tall chimney." It would be more to the point than tall talk. The "tall chimney" has been idle for years, and in its present condition it is only a monument to its manager's inconsistency, when he does his best to act the part of the dog in the manger, by preventing wide-awake citizens from doing what he has not public spirit enough to do himself.

Yours truly,
"PROGRESS."

Young Liberals.

Closing Day of the Great Convention.

TORONTO, Sept. 16th.—The Young Liberals Convention resumed session at 9 o'clock this morning, the newely elected President, Mr, A. F. McInyre, in the chair. The convention spent a busy day, and additional resolutions defining the platform were adopted, including.

Senate Reform.

Abolition of Superannuation and Pensions.

Economical Administration of Goverment.

Provincial legislation within the competence of the legislature not to be subject to veto except by the voice of the people as expressed at the polls.

The restoration to the Dominion of the power enjoyed by the old Province of Canada to alter or amend the contitution of the country.

Complete civil service reform and abolition of dual offices and duplication of salaries.

Each province to collect and expend its own revenues.

Reciprocity with the United States.

Full recognition of the titles of holders of land acquired by occupation, and of Indian titles vested in Half-breeds in the North-West.

Judges of Provincial Courts to be appointed by Provincial Governments.

Resolutions were also adopted, enthusiastically endorsing the course of Hon. Messrs. Blake and Mowat, and also a resolution in favour of settling the prohibition question by a plebiscite.

A well-attended mass meeting in the evening, at which addresses were delivered, and at which many prominent men were present, closed the convention.

A CONSIDERABLE CONTRAST.

The finances of Ontario under Reform rule are in a state of exhilarating prosperity, compared to the bankrupt condition of Quebec, under a Conservative regime. Bleu ruin is the name for Quebec's condition. Yet the comparison would have stood much higher in favour of this Province, if the aggressive policy of Sir John Macdonald had not put Ontario to vast expense to defend her rights and territory against his attacks. He tried to rob us of a small continent of valuable territory: it cost large sums to resist and defeat that attempt. An attempt was made to over-ride provincial legislation, on a subject entirely within its province; it cost money to resist the attack and make good our right before the highest tribunal of the Empire. An attempt was made to rob this province of the revenue derived from the management of the provincial license system and cost money to defeat this scheme. In all his attacks on Ontario Sir John has been disastrously defeated. Yet his hostility has made it necessary for Ontario Ministers of the Crown to devote their attention to repelling his attacks instead of devoting their whole time and energies to the development of the resources of the province and the management of its affairs. In spite of all this opposition that they have succeeded in governing the country so well, is a wonder. They have had to fight foes without, who were assisted by traitorous foes within the Province. Inspite of all this the present Reform administrators of Ontario have so managed affairs, that the province is prosperous, and a surplus of some four or five millions bears testimony to their honesty and economy. Quebec has been cosetted, petted and subsidised with vast sums of public money, yet Quebec, under Conservative rule, is floundering in fifteen million dollars of debt. The Conservative organs are loud in their assertions that the Reform party has no policy. A "no policy" that results in financial prosperity and substantial progress is to be preferred to a Conservative policy that consists of ruinous extravagance, corrupt methods, and ends in debt, demeralization and disaster.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

Years ago the Indians and half-breeds in the Canadian Northwest were happy, contented and well-behaved, and their condition, contrasted with the turbulent and rebellious attitude of the American Indians, was often employed to point a moral. Our Indians were well treated and honourably dealt with and the inference in relation to their co-aborigines across the border need not be expressed. But under Conservative misrule and mismanagement, deceit and mala fides, everything is changed. If the Indians and half-breeds in the North-West had been properly treated, no one believes that there would have been a rebellion costing some eight or ten millions of dollars and hundreds of lives. Those facts become every day more clear. Important testimony from a disinterested party, with exceptionally good means of observation and collection of facts, is given. The testimony of an eye-witness, especially if he be an educated, honorable and intelligent man, is always the best. At a recent meeting of the Presbytery of Brandon, Rev. J. H. Cameron, of the Synod of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, makes the following statements, as furnished in a report of the proceedings of the Presbytery, published in the official organ of the Presbyterian Church, the Canada Presbyterian.

Rev. Mr. Cameron, formerly of Battleford, gave an account of his work there. He described in graphic terms the Indian uprising and the terrible depredations committed by them in the neighborhood—the best part of the settlement having been totally destroyed, only the barracks and the new part of the town having been spared. He contended that the Indian uprising was in a great measure due to the character of the instructors and agents appointed by Government. If the Government officials had been the right kind of men the uprising would never have taken place. In many cases their treatment of the Indians was calculated to have a most injurious effect—some of them treating the Indians like dogs—never speaking to them without an oath and paying no regard whatever to their word. The rev. gentleman remarked that it would spoil good Indians to make them like some of the Indian Department officials who are over them and supposed to be civilising them.

Not another word need be added to show where the blame for the recent miserable outbreak, lies.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Port Hope Times alleges that the correct estimate of the cost of the recent rebellion is between two and three millions of dollars. The idea is preposterous. Why, the stolen supplies, and the transport bungles will nearly foot up that amount.

The Times says that the assertion that "ten thousand or even ten dollars was spent by the Conservatives in purchasing votes in the recent election contest in East Durham, is a lie—the person who makes such an assertion is a liar, and he knows it." Nothing like being exact. The "lie" and "liar" probably, consist in not saying the amount was $9,500 or $9.50.

The Mail's pet panacea for Canada's ills, the N. P., is such an admitted failure that that organ virtually declares that annexation is the next resort. High taxation has failed to produce perennial prosperity, a revenue tariff, of course, won't work, and "argal" annexation stares us in the face. Suppose the next month advocate [illegible] ernment, just for a change if for no other reason.

The Prohibitionists are down on the Senate. They hold, correctly too, that a body which has no responsibilty to the people, which can't be called to account for any iniquity it perpetrates, has no place among representative institutions. The Senate must be made elective and responsible to the people, whose laws it can make or mar, whose money it can spend judiciously or waste iniquitously, or the Senate must go. A life Senate is as much out of place in Canada to-day, as the feudal system of the dark ages.

The young Liberals of Ontario were guilty of what is considered heresy by the Conservative majority of the House of Commons. In pronouncing in favor of manhood suffrage at the Toronto Convention, they have declared that an intelligent young white man, 21 years of age, is as good as an Indian, something that Sir John's Franchise Act denies. The law does not consider an Indian, capable of performing civil duties—of sitting on a jury—of doing statute labor, or fit to be trusted where whisky is going. Yet the law (Sir John's) gives the Indian a vote, and denies it to thousands of intelligent white men.

A Very Unfortunate Man.

A venerable old tramp entered an Austin business house, and said to the proprietor:
"I am the most unfortunate man in the world. Please do something for me."
"I don't know who you are," replied the merchant. "You may be an imposter."
"Here is a certificate from Parson Jordan, of Galveston, that I am a hard working, honest man, who has been unfortunate."
"A certificate from Parson Jordan, of Galveston?" asked the merchant.
"Yes, sir; here it is," replied the mendicant, handing the merchant a paper. The merchant looked at the paper and said:
"Parson Jordan of Galveston is my brother. I know his signature very well, and his signature on that certificate is forged."
"Just as I expected," whined the mendicant. "I told you I was the most unfortunate man in the world. Just think of me coming to the brother of Parson Jordan, of all the people in the town, and showing him that forged certificate, when there is not another man in Austin who knows his signature.

A Puzzle to the Student.

Mexico is a puzzle to the student. With the most liberal institutions and the freest democracy provided for on paper, the real methods of the government are more autocratic than those of any European country outside of Russia. Sometimes it seems like a grand burlesque of republicanism, and yet almost every Mexican is a sincere and enthusiastic republican, and a monarchy could never be tolerated here. But many Americans here seem inspired by a wild desire for the United States to interfere, break up the whole business, and institute a better order of things, as if the American government were a missionary concern for the propagation of the republican gospel, and had no political problems of its own to attend to. After all, how much worse are political methods in Mexico than in some parts of the United States?

There is really a decided improvement in the political condition of Mexico steadily manifest, and the country is many steps nearer the desirable end of a well-organized nation than it was 10 years ago. It has seen a longer period of peace than ever before. Interests are strong against seeing this peace disturbed, and are growing stronger daily. Were it not so, recent events would have provoked an outbreak. Elections were formerly carried entirely by bayonets. The present peaceful method is unquestionably an advance, and from that to the ballot is only a question of time. School-houses are to be found in hundreds of Indian villages, nestling in remote mountain valleys all over the land, and with the better wages brought by the railways, and the increased activity of national life which will inevitably be imparted by contact with the outer world from which Mexico until now has been shut out, nine million ignorant peasants and one million of an indifferent middle and upper class will eventually be educated into a self-governing people. Amid the seeming chaos there is fine material, which is gradually taking shape under the slow processes of political evolution and crystallizing into a true republic.—Cor. New York Sun.

MIDNIGHT IN A DEAD-HOUSE

We were sitting alone in the twilight leisurely puffing at our cigars when one of the hospital nurses came out and whispered to the doctor that Sailor John was 'agoin.' The passing away of a mortal is an event about which there is always something of the mysterious, and so we walked down the long corridor and entered Ward 12. The nurse was right. John was "agoin." Like an alto relievo, out of the crumpled pillow rose a face that was Roman in its rugged outline, and even the pinched nose, sunken eyes and compressed lips did not obliterate the likeness to some of those historic busts dug up among the ruins of early Italy. A student said it looked like Seneca, and truly there was much to recall the old philosopher in the wrinkled features.

The man in bed 27, restless with fever, turned over so as to face the couch of the dying man, and with wild staring eyes watched every sinking respiration of the old sailor.

An awkward plethoric beetle buzzed around the gas jet in an irregular orbit, its hum being the only sound to break the silence which the faint breathings of the sufferer softly punctuated. The doctor lifted the sheet and felt the pulse of the patient. "It's about over," he remarked, and he laid down the helpless arm.

There was a rattle in the throat, a long-drawn sigh, as if all the sorrows of a lifetime were relieved as it died away, and then the eyes opened. They looked into the doctor's, and seeming to find comfort in the returning glance of compassion, they closed slowly. Then there was a twitching of the muscles around the mouth, and in a supremo climax of effort the lips moved and faintly came forth, "Hard a port it is, sir." A slight tremor shook his frame, and all was over.

John had reached harbor.

Then there was a tread of feet in the corridor and the carriers of the dead came in, and John was taken out to the dead-house and laid beside other storm-tossed barks that had that day found a last mooring-place, whither the whole armada of humanity drift at last. The hospital bell gave one stroke to announce the departure of another soul, and then the nurses looked over the ward book to see who next should receive his dose of medicine, and hospital life resumed its quiet current.

We went back to the portico and resumed our cigars. "A curious fellow, that," said the doctor; this is his fifth visit here, and he knew it would be his last. He was always begging me to be at his side when the end came, and by good luck I chanced here to-night.

"Strange as it may seem to you, this same man was once a king. You smile, but, nevertheless, it is true. He was cast away in the Pacific and reached one of the small islands out there, where he lived and became the ruler of a little kingdom. He longed for white society and abdicated and went back to the sea.

"But that is not what I wanted to speak about," the doctor went on, lighting a fresh cigar. "It's his curious ideas of his ability to come back from the other world. He has talked to me by the hour on this subject until I put him down as a spiritualist of the most orthodox kind. He has promised me to make his presence known on the night of his nativity, June 30, and has excited my curiosity not a little."

"If he could only do that," said I, "it would be the solving of all our doubts."

"Yes," replied the doctor, "no message ever came from beyond the Styx, and good sailor as John was, he cannot, I believe, recross that inky flood."

The above little episode happened in the Charity hospital about the middle of May, 1869, and the doctor spoken of was one known and beloved throughout the city and state. It is but a little over a year since he, too, crossed the Lethean stream, but before his death he told the writer the facts given below, speaking of them as a curious coincidence, and not for a moment looking at them in a superstitious light.

He was a man of remarkable nerve, was as brave as Cœur de Leon and would be as little daunted by the appearance of a simon-pure ghost as he would by the approach of an old friend. It was but a short time before his death and whilst Canal street was a pandemonium of sound, and horns and firecrackers were making Christmas Eve hideous, that, seated in his office, the conversation turned on things supernatural. The trepidations of youth over spooks and the fears of the superstitious of older growth were laughed at, and it was not till after the subject drifted to hospital life that the doctor exclaimed:

"That's a fact; I don't believe I ever told you my experience in the dead-house of the hospital after Sailor John's death. I never cared about saying anything regarding it, for if I have to confess it, for the first time in my life I was a little weak.

"You know the dead-house at Charity hospital and its interior? Well, I had had a case of aneurism that puzzled all of us, and, being a young physician then, I had a natural pride in my diagnosis, which did not agree with that of the other surgeons. So I determined that when the patient died, as he was sure to do, I would hold an autopsy myself. Well, the poor fellow succumbed at last, and, as I had been busy all day, I could not get back to the hospital until 11 o'clock on the night of June 30. I remember the date well. Illuminating the inside room of the dead-house, there was but a single gas burner alight. Rigid on one of the dissecting tables was my subject, awaiting me.

"I needn't tell you that, after all of my student life at the hospital, going out there alone at that time of night produced not the slightest impression upon me. We were too used to such things to notice them. In fact, so great was my desire to prove my diagnosis correct as against that of other physicians, I thought only of the case, and nothing else.

"It was anything but a pleasant night. I may say that I cannot remember a more disagreeable one. A blustering norther was blowing and a heavy rain falling. The wind moaned around the eaves of the hospital as if hundreds of sufferers were in agony, and the gurgle of water in the gutters leading to the cistern was anything but musical. Once in a while a flash of lightning threw out in relief the bodies lying on other tables awaiting burial. Certainly it was a night of nights for a visit to a dead-house.

"Well, I took off my oil-cloth coat, opened my dissecting case, and started to work. The wind stole in through crevices and flared the gas so that I was delayed in my investigation considerably. But after an hour's labor reached the solution of the problem which I had so long studied. Of anxiety was I my hand trembling seeing this I stopped and lighted my pipe, and began smoking to conquer my eagerness.

"The face of the dead man was ashen in its paleness, and his flesh was as cold as marble. Looking back at the picture now, I don't think I ever saw a more spectral corpse than that. The eyes were open, and in the agony of death the muscles of the mouth had contracted, so that in the rigor mortis he had a sardonic grin that was horrible in its leer.

"The patter of the rain on the roof was incessant, but it sounded pleasant, for it seemed company to one. Still it did not drown all other sounds, for now and again above the storm there came from the female ward a wail of anguish from a poor sufferer in delirium.

"It took but a few minutes' smoking to recover my steadiness of hand, and I resumed the work.

"While bending over the body, and just at a moment when the greatest delicacy of operation was required, a curious noise from one corner of the dead-house startled me. It was not like a foot-step, but was somewhat like a shuffling of feet.

"Instinctively I looked in that direction, and noticed for the first time some four or five skulls on the floor in a partial state of preparation. The younger students had been at work preparing them for their cabinets. The grinning faces looked as if to chide me for working on such a night, but then I was too anxious about my case to miss my opportunity.

"Applying myself again to my subject, I was soon lost in the peculiar developments my eye discovered each moment, when I was again annoyed by a distinct sound from the corner.

"Glancing in that direction, it must be confessed I was not a little surprised to see one of the skulls moving slowly toward me along the flagging of the floor. I rubbed my eyes and looked again. There it was—the fleshless sockets of the eyes gazing at me, the uneven, jagged teeth giving a ghastly grin to the mouth.

"It is a little difficult for me to tell exactly what were my feelings. That they were peculiar I frankly admit. I fell to studying about the cause of this motion on the part of the skull, and examined closely to see whether or not there was a string attached and student playing one of his pranks.

"But no. In the light I could plainly discern that there was nothing attached to this relic of humanity. Then what moved it?

"Still engrossed with my endeavors to solve this mystery, I did not take my eyes off this skull.

"Slowly, stealthily and steadily it came on directly towards where I was sitting on a high stool. The motion produced a dull, grating sound, as some sharp protuberances of bone scratched on the marble slabs.

"After it had advanced about three feet it stopped.

"I laid down my pipe, still keeping my eyes on the unpleasant object and tried to laugh away the morbid sentiments that had now began to rise within me. I whispered to myself how much I would have railed at any brother physician should he have told me of experiencing the slightest feeling of nervousness under similar circumstances. Even the students would have retailed the affair as an indication of my effeminacy had they known it. Surely there were mechanical causes to produce these results. I knew that the unsubstantial could not give motion to the substantial. My natural philosophy told me that there must be a force at work to impel that grim fragment of a human frame toward me. Yet what force was it?

"I determined not to leave my seat to attempt a close inspection, fearing to be rewarded by the laughter of those who were endeavoring to astonish me.

"The dreary monotone of the rain and the unearthly sobbing of the wind turned my reflections to a more sombre color, and some things came back to me I had read in Robert Dale Owen's 'Footprints on the Boundaries of Another World'—curious things, authenticased by affidavits and all the solemnity of oaths of remarkable revisitants from the grave. While dwelling on these subjects I recalled the many conversations I had had with my patient, now dead and buried some three weeks, Sailor John, and his persistent asseverations of the possibilities of the intellectual spirit returning to this world of the flesh.

"There! The skull moved again. On it came, still sliding along in a direct line toward me.

"Do what I would I could not shake off a feeling of uneasiness and disquiet. I did not like the situation—that about expressed it.

"E—e—e—eks," grated the skull's bony points on the floor, the sound tingling my nerves as when one scratches the finger-nail on brick or a rough surface.

"My pulse grew more frequent. I experienced a chilly sensation down my back, and a cold perspiration dampened my forehead.

"Around me the corpses lay, the gas-light making them saffron yellow.

"They at least did not move.

"I could stand this strain no longer. It was unbearable. I was becoming the victim of a weakness for which I would have reprimanded a child. I felt pale, if that is possible, for it seemed as if all my blood had rushed to my heart.

"With a bound I sprang toward the skull, and stooping, grasped it with my hands. I lifted it from the floor.

"Out jumped a large rat and ran scampering away. I cannot describe my feelings when I saw the cause of all my discomfiture. At first I laughed, and then became angry with myself for, even for a moment, allowing such an incident to disturb my equilibrium.

"Examining the skull I saw how it had occurred. The rat had entered the cavity at which the brain had been through the foramen magnum or aperture through which the nerve matter of the spinal column communicates with the brain. The skull turned over, imprisoning the body of the creature, and permitted the use of his feet only through this foramen. He could move the skull, but while it was on the floor he could not get his body out.

"Pasted across the whitened brow was a slip of paper, and on it a student's name—'Henry J. Stubbs'—and below 'Skull of Sailor John, a King of one of the Polynesian islands; died May 12, 1869. Charity Hospital.'

"In an instant I remembered the day of the month. It was June 30, the night of John's birthday. His promise came back to me. He had said he would make himself known to me on that night.

"I regretted the intervention of the rat. Had that animal never have been discovered by me there would have been an excellent foundation for ghost stories on which I could have made affidavit and thus swelled the authenticated cases of remarkable spiritual manifestations. But the rat spoiled it all.

"Even with the full explanation of the skull's movements the nervous feeling did not pass off for some time, and even now when June 30 comes around I think of Sailor John and his promise, which, however, he has never fulfilled."

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

EXAMINER V. REVIEW.

The return game between the printers of these offices has been indefinitely postponed, the printers being too busily engaged to spare time for practice. Consequently the return match may not be played this season, but the printers are determined at the commencement of next season to go in for all they are worth (which is considerable) at the game, and will organize a team that is likely to prove a hard nut to crack.

Lacrosse.

CANTINGTON V. PETERBOROUGH.

The Cannington Club not being able to come here to play for the championship on [illegible] ranged, Wednesday has been fixed as the day of the contest. An effort is being made to secure the grounds of the Athletic Association at Ashburnham on which to play the match.

MEETING.

A meeting of the Lacrosse Club is to be held at the Little Windsor Hotel to-morrow evening. Important business will be transacted and a full attendance is requested.

What We May Expect.

A game of baseball between the bankers and merchants.

The "Professor" to pluck up courage now that reinforcements have arrived.

Smokers!

Beware of cigars artificially flavored for the purpose of hiding the poor quality of tobacco used in flavored cigars. Insist upon having the old reliable brands—"CABLE" and "EL PADRE." 13d-25w-1y

Smiths Market.

Peaches, Plums, Pears, Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Apples, Cherries, Garden Raspberries, Melons, Currants, Gooseberries, and all kinds of green vegetables. Ripe Tomatoes one dollar per box, twenty pounds in the box. Fresh Fish, Hams and Bacon.

Gentlemen

will find at the "Golden Lion" an elegant stock of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, Over-coating, Rubber Over-coats, Furnishings, Underwear, &c. Tailoring a specialty—and a first-class cutter at your command.

Manvers.

At the Manvers agricultural show, special prizes of $3, $2 and $1 will be given by Messrs. Johnston and Wilson for best colts of 1885, sired by their own horses. This show promises to be the best held for years.

Campbellford.

On Sunday morning last, in the Baptist Church, in this village, Rev. W. Peer, the pastor, accepted five persons into his congregation by administering to them the sacred rite of baptism. Three of the number were gentlemen and two were ladies.

On Sunday and Tuesday of the previous week, the same gentleman baptised nine converts in the church in Cramahe township.

In about ten months, since November, 1884, Rev. Mr. Peer has baptised forty-five persons. Many of these have enrolled their names in the membership of the church in Campbellford.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Camping Comforts.

How the Lads of "Lansdowne Camp" Revel in Luxuries.

In a recent issue we noted the departure for the lake country of a camping party composed of Felix Brownscombe and several others. The party is now in camp on Hurricane Bay, Stony Lake. They arrived there from Deer Bay on Monday, having made four portages to reach that point. The boys are having "lots of fun"—fish and duck without number and weather that could not be better. Starvation is not a contigency to be feared, as may be seen from the following bill of fare for the "Lansdowne Camping Party" now at Deer Bay.

Meats,
Boiled ham, boiled corn beef.
Roasts,
Roast partridge, roast duck.
Vetetables,
Mashed potatoes, green corn, (cabbaged).
Pastry,
Apple pie, plum cake, English plum pudding with brandy sauce.
Dessert,
Bartlett pears, Crawford peaches, Concord grapes, red plums, apples, butternuts, raisins, mixed candy, tea, coffee and cheese.

Piano Tuning.

As Mr. F. C. Hyde will be leaving town shortly for a trip through the Western States, and will be absent about a month, parties requiring their pianos well tuned should leave their orders at Mr. D. Smart's music store without any delay, to ensure their being promptly attended to before his departure.

Scott Act Campaign.

The following meetings have been arranged:—

Sept. 18, Braely's School House, North Monaghan, Rev. F. H. Wallace and Rev. I. Tovell.

Sept. 18, School House, 2nd Line, Smith, B. Sawyer.

Sept. 20, Smith Baptist Church (morning), Rev. I. Tovell.

Sept. 21, Zion Methodist Church, Otonabee, Rev. A. E. De St. Dalmas, B. Sawyer.

A large number of meetings are being arranged for by the local committees all over the County.

A Talented Trio.

The widely known weather prophet and apostle of Liberal Temperance Union doctrines, Moses Oates, or J. Gordon Mowat, is billed to address a meeting in North Monaghan Town Hall this evening, and small dodgers have been circulated, annoucing that Professor Goldwin Smith and the other "Professor," will address a meeting at Lakefield. This looks as if the Union were concentrating their forces, and if the Liberal temperance triumvirate are really all in the county, a meeting under their auspices may shortly be expected in town. Considerable light may then be expected to be shed on the "historical, scientific and billio-economical objections to the Scott Act," and a strong plea set forth in behalf of beer and Burgundy as assuagers of the national thirst. A discussion of the Scott Act from the opposition point of view could not fail to be interesting, and if these gentlemen visit Peterborough they will attract a large audience.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The Annual Meeting Held—Review of the Year's Work—A Clear Balance Sheet Election of Officers.

The members of the Young Men's Christian Association held their annual meeting in their Hall on Thursday evening, Mr. D. B. Gardner, acting president, occupying the chair. The meeting was opened with the devotional exercises, after which reports of were called for. The Devotional Committee's report showed that 257 meetings had been conducted during the year, with an attendance of 6,396. It give particulars of the various meetings held by the Association, which at the present time are young men's Bible class, two young men's meetings, song service, training class, boy's meeting and service at Auburn. The report was prepared by J. Richardson, chairman.

The report of the Lecture and Entertainment Committee was read by its chairman, Dr. Fife. It stated that during the year nine lectures had been given on literary and scientific subjects, three members' socials arranged for, and a New Year's day reception very successfully carried out. It recommended that the new committee continue to work along this line.

THE REPORT OF THE BOYS' BRANCH was prepared by its secretary, and showed that the membership had increased from 38 to 62; the weekly meetings had been well attended, and that three entertainments had been given with good success.

The Finance Committee's report gave a statement of receipts and expenditures during the year, the receipts being $929.96 and expenditures $877.65. A statement of affairs of the Association on 16th Sept., 1885, showed that there were liabilities amounting to $467.32 against which the Association held good subscriptions to the amount of $482.85, thus leaving a balance to the credit of the Association. The committee expressed the hope that the subscriptions would shortly be paid in, thus enabling them to have a clean sheet on both sides. As there was a deficit last year of nearly $200, this showing is all the more satisfactory.

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The General Secretary, Mr. G. E. Williams, presented his report for the year, covering every department of the work, and giving instances of good that had been done through the Association. During the year 74 new members had been added, and 27 names taken from the roll through death or removal from town, leaving a membership at the present time of 165. Much personal work had been done among young men, especially with strangers, many of whom came to the rooms for information, help in getting work and seeking boarding houses. All young men, whose names are handed or sent to the Secretary, are visited and offered a cordial welcome. The report closed with thanks to those who had assisted the Association in any way during the past year.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS and committee was then proceeded with, the ballot resulting as follows:—

PRESIDENT.—J. W. Flavelle.

FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT.—Dr. Fife.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT.—W. W. Johnston.

TREASURER.—J. C. Turnbull.

GENERAL SECRETARY.—Geo. E. Williams.

COMMITTEE.—M. Cumming, I. Richardson, H. Rossiter, A. W. Jones, Bannell Sawyer, D. B. Gardner, Jno. S. Hall, J. W. Bennett, W. F. Hilliard, Geo. M. Roger.

Omemee.

A new High School building in the village of Omemee is an accomplished fact. On Tuesday night the formal opening of the completed building took place, and it was a fitting opportunity, well handled, for Omemee to cover herself with glory. The school has cost in round figures about $3,000. It is a substantial structure of wood, tastefully painted, and of handsome appearance, 40 x80 feet, and two full stories high. Separate entrances for the boys and girls are provided in opposite sides of a tower 12x18, which is built in front. The lower floor gives large anp commodious class rooms for the junior departments.—Post.

Harvest Home.

Annual Festival and Thanksgiving Service at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham.

The annual harvest home tea meeting and thanksgiving service in connection with St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, was held yesterday afternoon and evening. These services are held at a somewhat earlier date than that appointed as a general thanksgiving, because at that later period it has been found impossible to decorate the church suitably, The usual holy communion service was held at 10 o'clock in the morning by the rector, Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, and in the afternoon a tea meeting was held in Ashburnham town hall, commencing at 5 o'clock. Large numbers of visitors partook of the excellent tea provided by the ladies of the church upon whose hands this duty devolved. At 8 o'clock in the evening a thanksgiving service, which was numerously attended, was held in the church. The always attractive interior of this pretty little building presented an unusually beautiful appearance, being decorated with the flowers and fruits of the season. The choir stalls were beautifully ornamented with wreaths of flowers, and the altar, on which rested an offering of grapes and wheat, symbolical of used in the holy sacrament, was adorned on either side with the texts. "The harvest is the judgment," and "The reapers are the angels," worked with ears of grain. The pulpit and reading desk were also freely decorated with flowers, while at the foot of the fount was a grouping of fruits and vegetables. The windows of the church and the screen at the entry were also suitably ornamented. The thanksgiving prayers were read by the rector, Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, and Rev. J. W. Burke, rector of Belleville, preached the thanksgiving sermon, taking his text from Leviticus, 23rd chapter and part of the 39th verse:—"When ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the Lord." The proceeds of the offertory will be devoted to the erection of the new school room, which is about to be commenced. There will be a special thanksgiving service on Sunday next, at which the rector will officiate.

THE BREAD AND WINE

Liberal Temperance Meetings.

A meeting, under the auspices of the Liberal Temperance Union, was held last evening in Lakefield. Prof. Goldwin Smith spoke for 40 minutes in support of the views of the Union, and Rev. B. B. Keefer occupied three-quarters of an hour in reply. Mr. C. Gordon Richardson then occupied two hours in arguments against the Scott Act and in favor of the platform of the Liberal Temperance Union.

Mr. J. Gordon Mowat addressed a meeting at North Monaghan. Rev. I. Tovell, who was present on behalf of the Scott Act, was allowed half an hour to reply. Mr. Mowat's address lasted almost two hours.

Dynamite.

Nervous citizens were alarmed last night to hear that a large consignment of dynamite contained in two cars had arrived here per the C.P.R. from the Tweed Powder Works. The explosive, like that which caused the terrible Lakefield tragedy, is destined for the Trent Valley Canal works, and will have to be teamed from the C. P. station to Burleigh. The proprietors were last night seeking some one to draw it, and Mr. Robt. White accepted the contract. Two loads of it passed up George street at an early hour this morning, and as the fact of the dynamite having arrived in town was pretty well known last night, the character of the load was surmised even before the mark "dangerous explosive" was discerned on the packages. Most of the people on the street at the time suddenly remembered they had engagements to keep at a distance and hurried off without displaying any great curiosity. Mr. White seems to think there is very little danger in handling the explosive so long as proper care is exercised, and as the managers of the factory are personally superintending the transportation of this cargo there is no doubt that due caution will be observed. Still, it is not reassuring to know that the load passing one's door is liable without a moment's warning to bring half the town in ruins about people's ears and hurl some score of people into eternity. The police have received orders to see that the next load removed is taken round by the outskirts of the town and not brought through the main street. The EXAMINER's advice to this effect, given recently, has been wisely observed.

Port Hope.

We regret to have to chronicle the death of Mr. John Cheer, which sad event took place rather suddenly at his son's residence on Sunday. The deceased was a resident of this town for several years, and was held in high esteem and respect by his numerous friends. He had been ailing for some time past, but was able to keep about, and his friends thought his ill-health was due principally to old age. Deceased was a native of England, and came to Canada some thirty years ago. He first settled in Peterborough, where he lived until some eight years ago. He then removed to Port Hope, and resided with his son, Mr. John A. Cheer, roadmaster of the Midland division of the G. T. R., Smith street, until his death. Deceased was eighty-two years and eight months old, and leaves a widow, who is over eighty-two, and two son's and a daughter to mourn his loss. The funeral, which was largely attended by relatives and friends, took place on Tuesday afternoon.—Times.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

The Riel Appeal Case.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—Mr. Donald MacMaster, Q. C., has been requested by the friends of Riel, resident in Ottawa, to give a written legal opinion on the question of the constitutionality of the Court which passed sentence on the rebel leader. It is not improbable that his services will be secured to argue the case before the Imperial Privy council.

Mr. Chamberlain's Triumphal Tour.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Mr. Chamberlain is making a triumphant tour in Scotland. He delivers an address at every stopping place. The villages which he is announced to visit are decorated in his honor and addresses are presented to him everywhere. The people greet him with the greatest enthusiasm and cheers are given for "England's future Premier." In one of his speeches he announced that Mr. Gladstone had been restored to health and would assume the leadership in the electoral campaign.

British General Elections.

The Campaign Opened—Speeches by the Party Leaders.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Sir William Vernon Harcourt, speaking at Plymouth to-day, said the late government were prepared to abolish coercion in Ireland, retaining only those provisions aimed against boycotting. He was unable to give the programme of the Liberals, but said Mr. Gladstone had returned in first rate health, and prepared for the fight. The speaker shared Mr. Chamberlain's opinions as to free education, and thought that the traffic in drink also required attention.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, speaking at Gloucester to-day commented upon the striking absence in the speeches of the Liberal leaders of any reference to the past deeds of the late Government, especially regarding Gen. Gordon and the Soudan. The chancellor was strongly opposed to disestablishment. [illegible] reform. He approved Mr. Chamberlain's attitude toward Mr. Parnell as the "right thing." Conservatives, he said, also favored local government for Scotland and England, but it was inexpedient to propound their views on the subject at the present time.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 17.—Lord Lansdowne and party paid a visit to Stony Mountain this morning to see the Indian and half-breed prisoners. On his return he visited the educational institutions. To-morrow he will go over the line of the Manitoba and North-Western Railway.

A Panic in the Silver Market.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A panic prevailed in the silver market yesterday, and prices dropped to the lowest point touched in the present century. The Indian banks refuse to give more than 47 and Indian exchanges are falling to 1-6 per rupee. The uncertainties of trade with India are paralysing the exportation of Lancashire goods.

Irate Ireland.

"United Ireland's" Outbreak.

DUBLIN, Sept. 17.—United Ireland, commenting on Mr. Chamberlain's recent speech says; Twenty-seven Invincibles murdered Government officials, attacked judges and jurors, and held this great city and state chattering with terror until the band was finally broken up, because some of its members failed to remember their oath of refusal to open their lips, when, if they had kept their mouths sealed, the Castle Star Chamber enquiry would have merely involved a week in prison. Similar organizations would be started in every city, town and village throughout Ireland if Mr. Chamberlain's argument of Irish weakness is pushed to extremities. The paper then discusses the probable result of England following the policy indicated by Mr. Chamberlain's speeches, and says such a course would probably result in a French army landing at Limerick, simultaneously with an Irish uprising, in all the principal cities in England, and well planned attacks on various palaces and banks in London.

An Incident of the War.

Among the Chicago commercial travelers who visit Chillicothe are two gentlemen, now good friends, whose first meeting was under circumstances just the reverse of friendship. Mr. P—— is a Virginian and Mr. B—— is a New Yorker by birth, and both were soldiers during the civil war—the former a captain in the famous confederate troopers commanded by the celebrated Gen. John S. Mosby, and the latter a private in a New York regiment. In one of the many skirmishes in the vicinity of Warrentown, Va., Capt P—— was captured by B——'s regiment, the commander of which, in pursuance of a previous order from his superiors, to "shoot Mosby's men whenever caught," ordered the immediate execution of the unfortunate captive. He was led out a short distance from the command, and a detail of seven men, of whom B—— was one, was ordered to execute the drumhead sentence. At the word "Fire" the squad discharged their weapons straight at the victim, and poor B—— fell riddled with six minnie balls. He was left for dead as food for vultures, and his executioners mounted their horses and followed their regiment in pursuit of Mosby. The victim was unconscious for twenty-four hours, and when he awoke and feebly called for help there was no response. With six ghastly wounds in his chest and covered with blood, he dragged himself a mile to a negro cabin, where he was kindly received and nursed for a week until Mosby's forces had rallied and driven the federals from the vicinity. Then for the first time his wounds were dressed by a surgeon, and in about six months he rejoined his command and fought to the final surrender at Appomattox. His health has ever since been delicate, but he is energetic and pushing, and is a very popular and successful salesman, and has no warmer personal friend than B——, who was one of his executioners, or thought he was.—Chillicothe (Mo.) Constitution.

Joe Jefferson says the effect that playing one part a great number of times has on an actor is forgetfulness of his line. "A story is told," he adds, "of an English actor, who, after playing one part for a very long time, forgot his lines one night: 'It's very strange,' said the stage manager, when the actor came off, 'that you are not perfect in that part by this time. You have been playing it for 200 nights.' "Well,' said the actor, 'do you expect me to remember it forever?' I think one part cannot be played too often if the actor does not lose his interest in it. It is just as it is with age. We are only old according to our feelings, not our years."

FRIDAY, SEPT. 18, 1885.

AN UNPREJUDICED OPINION.

In yesterday's impression, we submitted the testimony of a politically independent witness—an eye-witness, too—as to the causes of the Indian rising in the Northwest, in which the Government were shown to be responsible for the Indian part of the outbreak, at least. Now, we have the chain of evidence complete. President Grant, of Queen's College, Kingston, down in Halifax, a few days ago, put himself in the witness box, and volunteered this testimony; in a speech delivered in that city, speaking of Northwest affairs, he said:

"The Government had failed to recognize the rights of the half-breeds in the Territories. They did not feel secure in their possessions. Very few of them could read or write, or were capable of laying their claims and grievances before the Government. In their difficulty they sent for Riel. If the Government had made an authoritative declaration that the same treatment that had been given to the half-breeds in Manitoba would be given to those in the Territories, there would have been no difficulty. It was idle to say that half-breeds in Manitoba had sold their lands and gone into the Territories to take up new lots. It would not take a very astute judge to detect the fraudulent claims, which, after all, were not very numerous. It was just as idle to say that none of them had been dispossessed by colonization companies. The fact that these had power to dispossess them was sufficient to create the greatest amount of uneasiness and discontent among the half-breeds, and they did just what white people would do under such circumstances—they rebelled. They felt that they were fighting for their lands, for the defence of their homes and altars."

Considering the source of these remarks, it must be confessed that the language is strong, but no stronger than the facts and indignation aroused by the contemplation of injustice and oppression, would warrant. It was no "Grit," anxious "to make political capital against the Government," that uttered these words; it was a good faithful Tory, but a Tory too honest to witness the perpetration of injustice and oppression unreproved. Principal Grant is so good a Tory that he even proposed to found a chair in Queen's University in honor of the fortieth anniversary of Sir John's political career, yet he condemns the Government unsparingly. The Globe was severely taken to task as unpatriotic and seditious, when it said that if any Ontario farmer had been treated as the Saskatchewan half-breeds had been treated, he would have taken up arms. Principal Grant, a good Tory, however, is of the same opinion—"they did just what white men would have done under the circumstances—they rebelled." It seems there that, according to his thinking, then is a provocation that will justify rebellion and that that provocation was furnished by the monstrous oppression of the Half-breeds by the Dominion Government. Jezebel, the Israelitish demirep, literally went to the dogs, because she formed and caused to be carried out a plot to dispossess an honest landholder, who was unwilling to sell, and give his heritage to another. The Ottawa analogues of Ahab's wife formed a plot and actually forced it upon a colonization company to dispossess half-breeds of their lands and give them to political pets and hirelings, and their day of reckoning will come, too; when all the facts come out other Tories than Principal Grant will raise the voice of condemnation. The infatuation that impelled the Government to force the lands of St. Louis de Langevin upon the Prince Albert colonization company is past comprehension. The latter has sense enough to see that the dispossession and eviction of the halfbreeds would lead to trouble but the government said in effect:—"Go ahead, take these lands or none; never mind the consequences." When the government took this attitude, the halfbreeds took alarm. They loved their homes, their families and their firesides, and they resisted tyranny and fell fighting for their dearest rights, and, when overcome, they were found lying dead across their thresholds with their widowed wives and orphaned children wailing over their corpses. Let any farmer in Peterborough put himself in the Saskatchewan halfbreeds' place. Let him know that an authority that had the power, had given his farm to a company of speculators. Would he go on tilling and improving his holding and when the time came, meet the speculator at the front gate of his farm and stand hat in hand waiting meekly to be kicked off? Or would he do what Principal Grant says "any white man would do under such circumstances"—would he rebel? The burden of guilt for the North-West rebellion does not lie alone at Duck Lake and Batoche; its origin is at Ottawa.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Finding it can do no better, the Canadian Pacific Railway will now take over the North Shore Railway between Montreal and Quebec. The terms will be the same as those agreed to at last session of Parliament.

Why did not Sir John give Riel a fair show? There were certain documents found on Riel's person at the time of his arrest. The production of them in court, it is claimed, would have been in Riel's favour; but at the same time they were hard on the Government, and they were suppressed. It was not because the Government loved Riel less, but because they loved the Government better.

The Review tries to create the impression that the Queen personally suggested the presentation of medals to the Canadian volunteers. As a matter of fact, Her Majesty did nothing of the kind. She took the advice of her advisers and they acted on the advice of Her Majesty's vice-regal representative, and he, in turn, acted on the advice of his advisers, and they, in turn, acted on the advice of Hon. Adolph Caron, who, however, before he thought of the poor volunteers, advised the Governor-General to ask Her Majesty to make him, Adolph Rene Far-nlente Caron, a Knight. Sir "Thomas" Macdonald can testify as to the personal knowledge Royalty enjoys of distinguished Canadians.

The Hamilton Times learns that Judge Dubuc, who was appointed to the Manitoba bench by Sir John Macdonald, refused to sit in the Court of Appeal when the Riel case came up. He excused his conduct by saying that he was an old personal friend and college mate of the half-breed leader, and that when Riel was appointed President of the Provincial Government in 1870—the time of the last rebellion—he was treated as a personal friend. "In 1863 and 1874," significantly remarks this nominee of Sir John Macdonald, "he was elected three times to the Commons. I alwas took an active part in his election, and may say that I elected him." Thus Judge Dubuc thought it would not be seemly for him to sit in a court that had the power to aid in sending Riel, his life-long friend, to the gallows, and he left the hearing of the appeal to the other Manitoba judges.

Ontario.

What the Governor-General said about Ontario and the London Fair is worth bearing in mind. He had been looking up the figures and found that out of the total number of horses in the Dominion, Ontario owned one-half; ont of the total number of horned cattle in the Dominion, Ontario owned nearly one-half; out of a total of forty-two million bushels of wheat grown in the Dominion, Ontario grew thirty-two millions; out of sixteen million bushels of barley grown in the Dominion, Ontario raised fourteen millions, and out of forty-eight bushels of roots, Ontario grew forty millions. He might have added that Ontario was also the milch cow of the Dominion, only that it would not have been politic for him to say so.

Educational Items.

Three township school trustees in Indiana have disappeared taking with them public money estimated at from $50,000 to $200,000. They are supposed to have taken up their abode in Canada.

The Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, opens on Thursday, October 1st. The examinations for admission take place on the following day. The course of instruction is specially adapted to the wants of farmers' sons.

Mr. J. S. Deacon, principal of the Woodstock Model School, has been appointed public school inspector for the county of Halton.

The Windsor school board has decided to enforce the regulations in regard to the vaccination of pupils.

There are 300 pupils now registered at Upper Canada College. The reputation of the institution will be more than sustained under Mr. Dixon's efficient management.

Dominion Doings.

Twenty-three new members were elected to the Toronto Board of Trade on Thursday.

Trenton has voted a bonus to a firm to build a dam and railway and general traffic bridge over the Trent, within the town limits.

A peddler, who did business with the employees of the C.P.R., sues the company for loss of trade caused by being ejected from one of the company's trains.

The contractors for the Tay Canal telegraph that the work on their contract has not been stopped, and that a large force will be employed so long as the weather permits.

The diplomas awarded by the Committee of the International Fisheries Exhibition, London, have been received by the Fisheries Department at Ottawa and forwarded to the successful exhibitors.

Seventy-five medals were secured by Canadian exhibitors at the Antwerp Exhibition.

The Fisheries Department has just secured at Owen Sound a site for an extensive hatchery to breed whitefish. The building will probably be completed in time to be stocked this fall.

Commander Maxwell, R.N., has been commissioned by the Admiralty to make a resurvey of the River St. Lawrence below Bic, in accordance with the application of the Montreal and Quebec Boards of Trade.

On Tuesday a little girl, aged 10 years, daughter of James Letford, of Port Dalhousie, was sent to the grocery. Not returning in a reasonable time a search was started, which resulted in the finding of the child's body in the pond near Muir's dry dock.

Special efforts are being made by the Dominion Government to secure an adequate representation of the literary and artistic development of the Dominion at the forthcoming Colonial and Indian Exhibition. It is intended, if they can be procured, to exhibit specimens of the work of every Canadian author, and a collection of the best specimens of Canadian art.

ONLY A GARDENER.

An evening in early spring, grey and clouded, a low-ceiled, plainly-furnished apartment in an out-of-the-way old house, and though the other rooms are the perfection of neatness, this one is in all the disarray and abandonment of art.

Two young girl-students are resting after their day's work—resting, each after her own manner. To one, Gertrude Trevelyan, the word implied utter repose; she, therefore, leaned back her regal-looking head in a comfortable old chair, as with half-closed eyes, the words dropped listlessly from her coral lips. But to Esther Forbes, rest was merely something less laborious, and seated on the hearth-rug, by the fitful glimmer of fire-light, she glanced over a daily paper, "to glean," as she said, "a little news for grandfather at supper-time."

"Oh, Gertie!" she cried, "listen to this: 'The Art Decorative Company is offering three prizes—first, second, and third class—for the best design for screen decorations. It is to be a yearly competition.' How I should like to compete for one of the prizes!"

"And should not I? Let us commence to-morrow." And so saying, Gertrude sat upright in her chair, and opened wide her great dark eyes.

"How delightful 'twould be," said she, "to awake some morning and find oneself famous—to read in a paragraph, 'Miss Gertrude Trevelyan has obtained the first prize and a gold medal for the most original design.'"

"I shall be content with the second," replied Esther; "for that fifty pounds is just what I shall want next summer."

"And what do you want so much money for, child?"

"Ah, Gertie! were I as rich as you, I, too, might work for fame; but you remember how my dear old grandfather suffered from last summer's heat, and yet refused to take from our little income the sum requisite for a two months' sojourn by the sea. If I could put this into his hand, and say, 'Let us go, dear grandpa, like two happy pilgrims and enjoy Old Ocean's breezes,' oh, how proud I should be!"

The girls were not relatives, but only neighbors, and the home of each was in that pleasant art-suburb of London that has grown up of recent years about that Cockney's paradise, Hampstead Heath.

But as Mrs. Trevelyan disliked the litter and untidiness of an artist's room, Gertrude frequently came and "worked," as she called it, in her friend's studio.

Esther did not name her aspirations to her grandfather, but she lay awake many a long hour, thinking out that proposed design.

The next morning, she found a note from her friend—she would be absent for a few days, as her mother had made some engagements for them both—and very glad was Esther to be alone with her unrealized thoughts.

In the visions of the night, a sister art, Poesy, had come to her aid, and the subject chosen was from Hood's idyllic poem, "The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies," where the little elves are entreating the pity of remorseless Time.

She designed it rapidly, and ere long the picture told its own story.

The old Mower could not be introduced—he would have demanded too much space—but one hand, portions of his grey, colorless raiment, and his scythe, to which clung fresh grass, were visible. And as Hood describes it:

"A shady and sequestered scene,
Like those famed gardens of Boccaccio—"

So the fairies were in half-shadow and in various attitudes—some kneeling imploringly, some bowed down with grief, others—"the loyal faye"—surrounding their queen, as though to protect her, while a few had, in despair, cast themselves upon the ground among the flowers.

One, that seemed to have stepped out from that bosky leafage to plead with "the dread King of years," pointed to a group of lilies in the picture's centre, upon which fell a broad ray of moonlight—as, with their stems folded in their large green leaves, those pale, pure lilies stood serene amid that desolation—and symbolic of the lines Esther had selected as her motto:

"And she that purifies the light,
The virgin Lily, faithful to her white,
Whereon Eve wept in Eden for her shame."

"But I must have some real lilies!" exclaimed Esther. "'Tis the most important part of the picture."

And away she went to a florist's, the most extensive in the entire neighborhood, and where she was well known.

But he had not even one, and declared, at that season, they could not be procured.

"You might see some at Mr. Montcalm's of Oakleigh House, Miss Forbes," said Mrs. Jourdain, the florist's wife; "for they have a fine conservatory, and a first-class gardener attends to it. You will find him quite a gentleman, and he will allow you to draw from anything you like."

Esther further learned that Mr. and Mrs. Montcalm had lately returned from the South of France, and that the lady was so fond of plants and flowers that he spared no expense to gratify her taste.

The next morning, armed with her sketch-book and portable color-box, she set forth, but could only ride a portion of the distance, for the way lay through lanes and roads leading to various residences.

But at length Oakleigh House was reached, and there the great gates so appalled poor Esther that, but for the hope of gaining that prize, she would have retreated in dismay.

In a few days Gertrude again visited the studio, but this time to watch her friend's progress only, having abandoned her own attempt.

"It is exquisite!" said she, after a careful survey. "But you have not related your interview, further than the door of the conservatory was opened—then you broke off to show me the picture."

"I had to wait so long, and feared the gardener would never come, so I found my way to the lilies alone. But, Gertie, I have fallen in love with that gardener! And as I don't know his [illegible] Melnotte.'"

"In love with a gardener, child? I hope not! But pray sketch for me in words thi paragon of Adam's calling."

"He is probably between twenty-five and thirty. Not exactly handsome, but a good face, expressive of great intelligence; a pleasant—indeed, melodious voice; and he has certainly some artistic taste, for when apparently wondering at my lily-craze, I described the design, he then made a few valuable suggestions. And he gave me such a basketful of ferns and flowers and greenery—sending it here to me—that I hope he won't get into trouble with Mr. Montcalm for so doing!"

"If you looked as you do now, Esther, with your waves of golden hair and rapt, brown eyes, like some peri that has lost her way, then I should not be surprised if he fell in love also. But only a gardener! Ah, well! Of course, you will go no more to Oakleigh House?"

"No, indeed, Gertie; but he asked permission to call and see my picture before I sent it away."

And one day he did come, bringing a magnificent bouquet, and this time gave his name, which was Bernard.

Ester Forbes' picture was considered very beautiful and highly poetic; but—ah, when does not a but, or an if, or some other stumbling-block exist?—it did not gain the first prize.

She was, however, awarded the second, and that, with the sale of later artistic work, amply sufficed for the accomplishment of her project—a trip to the Isle of Wight with her grandfather, Captain Forbes, who, having been a sailor nearly all his life, was, in that truly maritime little spot just as happy as the summer days were long.

But before their departure, Bernard was unfortunately the cause of a separation between the two girls.

He had come again and again to the little out-of-the-way house in Hampstead, had avowed his love, had asked Esther Forbes to be his wife, and finally had gained her grandfather's consent to their marriage.

"Mr. Bernard is not a common gardener," urged Esther to her friend. "He might have employment on the estate of some great nobleman; but I believe the Montcalms like him greatly, and he does not wish to leave Oakleigh."

"It is not the money, but the position, that I think of," answered Miss Trevelyan, with a fine look of scorn upon her proud, handsome features.

"But I am not ambitious. Neither can I look very nigh. You know that my grandfather has little besides his pension."

"Yet, an officer in the navy always holds a certain rank. However, have your own way, and blame no one but yourself, if some of your friends are less cordial than formerly."

"I consider Henry Bernard a most honorable man. He is kind-hearted, he is highly intelligent, and he loves me, and I would not give him up for every friend that I have. Therefore, Miss Trevelyan, you are at liberty to set the others an example."

They did not meet again until one day during the following winter, and that chance meeting was in the wondrous city of Rome, where so many, whether bent on pleasure, novelty, or study, and some from a yet higher motive, find their way.

Gertrude Trevelyan with a party of friends in one of the art galleries, when a lady whose face appeared familiar passed by.

She was richly dressed, and accompanied by a gentleman.

"If that is the Esther Forbes of olden days," she soliloquized, "then success to gardening!"

She went toward her, saying, as she held out a daintily-gloved little hand:

"Will you allow me to congratulate you, Mrs.——"

"I am rejoiced to meet you, Gertie," interrupted Esther, "and to present you to my husband, Mr. Montcalm. Henry, this is Miss Trevelyan of whom you have frequently heard me speak."

"I will leave you for awhile to talk over old times," said he, after expressing his pleasure at the introduction.

"My breath is taken away!" gasped Gertrude, when they were alone together. "Did the moonlight fairies bring about this romance?"

"I think they did," replied Esther, laughing—"through the agency of the lilies, and I will relate the story in Mr. Montcalm's own words.

"'On that eventful morning a message was brought to me that young lady requested to see the hothouse, and was, she said, permitted to use the name of Jourdain, the florist. Our gardener had gone to a sale of shrubs, but as his return was delayed, I went to explain matters, while collecting a few early violets from their frames. You'—for this was addressed to me—'evidently mistook my identity, and appearing rather embarrassed, I thought it better to leave you uninformed. Then the shyness wore off, melted away by the enthusiasm with which you described your proposed sketch.'"

"I must omit all the sweet nonsense, Gertie, but Henry always says that I carried away his heart that morning.

"I believe he once had a theory, through some youthful disappointment, that all womankind was self-interested, and here was an opportunity to test the sincerity of one, whom he alleges to have singled out from the rest of the world."

"And this revelation took place before your marriage?"

"Yes—for that he had always intended—and it was uttered to me and to the waves during one lovely twilight hour, when he had rushed down for a brief visit to our little sea-girt home."

"And Captain Forbes—what did he say?"

"It was some time before he could grasp the entire facts, being so much less poetic than practical."

"But oh, Esther!—how about the other Mrs. Montcalm?"

"She is Henry's mother, and the very kindest and dearest old lady. She also has had her little romance; for as Miss Bernard (my husband's second name) she gave up the lover of her youth to comply with her father's desire, and though a good and loyal wife, was never a very happy one, and henceforth resolved not to control the choice of her son."

"Have you had time to conclude your chat?" asked Mr. Montcalm, on returning to them.

[illegible] wife's reply.

"But Miss Trevelyan will pass the remainder of the day with us."

"No, Esther," said Gertrude; "you have generously overlooked my once unkind comments, but cannot have forgiven them."

"They are both forgiven and forgotten, dear. And now, Gertrude," she whispered, "Henry's cousin, Jack Ellery, is to dine with us. He admires brunettes above all others, and I can find some scarlet blossoms to wreathe in your dark hair. And as Jack, like yourself, is an amateur artist, scorning lucre but craving fame, you can enter into a partnership to design something for next competition, and then—who knows? for strange happenings surround us unexpectedly."

And as Gertrude was whirling along in her friend's carriage, away out to their Roman villa, within her own mind she partially repeated her friend's words:

"Truly, strange, very strange happenings do come to us—sometimes!"

Cheap Excursion to Chicago and Return.

A train of first-class coaches will leave the Grand Trunk station, Peterborough, on Friday and Saturday, the 25th and 26th of September, for Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukie and Cincinnatti. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukie and Cincinnatti and return only $12, to Detroit and return, only $6.00; good for 10 days. This excursion runs over the Wabash and Baltimore and Ohio Railways, being 26 miles shorter than any other line from Toronto to Chicago. Secure your tickets from the old reliable ticket agent, Mr. Thos. Mensies, Peterborough.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

ATHLETICS.

Baseball.

PETERBOROUGH V. LINDSAY.

It will be a relief to many to learn that the question of the relative superiority of these two clubs, anent which there has been so much verbal and literary controversy, has at last been temporarily settled. Lindsay came down yesterday morning, and left for home on the 5 o'clock train, carrying with them the proud consciousness that they had beaten their rivals in such a shape as to leave no doubt about the matter. The game attracted quite a concourse of spectators, a number of whom were Lindsayites, who had come down to see their men get their work in, to Riverside Park, and among those who witnessed the game were Moses Oates and the "Professor," who evinced a lively interest in foul tips, base hits, flies and errors.

Mr. C. Dennison, of Lindsay, was chosen as umpire, and Lindsay went first to the bat. Either Sullivan's pitching or the umpire's judgment must have been exceedingly erratic, for in the innings no less than four men took their base on balls, the side being at last retired for four runs. Peterborough went to and it was noticed that not a man of them got a base on called balls. Lindsay in the second innings again made 4, the pitching of Sullivan still being wild. Peterborough was retired in one, two, three order for a duck egg. In the third innings O'Neil went into the pitcher's box with Billings behind the bat, but the change did not avail much, two of the visitors making the circuit of the diamond. Again the home men went to bat and were retired in quick succession without results, Lindsay in their next innings following their example and failing to score. Peterborough once more went out for nought, and in the fifth innings Lindsay got one man home. Both teams had now got down to business, and had Peterborough played as well at first as from this point to the end of the game the visitors might not have left the field in such a happy humour. As it was, from the fifth innings on, neither side scored, and at the finish the game stood 11 to 4 in favour of Lindsay. The best feeling prevailed throughout the game, although some of the umpire's decisions did seem away off to disinterested eyes, but there was not a kick from beginning to end of the game. The following are the names of the players and the score by innings :—

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office :—Moderate west to south-west winds; fair, warm weather.

An Inkling.

Mr. A. Maddox, of Parkdale, Ont., manufacturer of writing fluids, is in town introducing his blue-black and scarlet inks. It has been generally thought that no home manufactured inks were equal to those made in England, but having used the blue-black inks of Mr. Maddox's manufacture, we find that they flow as freely and dry as black as Stephens' best. Mr. Maddox, for the purpose of introducing his inks, is giving away a double inkstand, in itself worth the full price charged, with every two bottles of his writing fluid.

Not a Professor.

Mr. C. Gordon Richardson, the Liberal Temperance advocate, at a meeting held in Bridgenorth on Wednesday evening, is reported to have disclaimed being a "professor," and to have stated that he was only a student of chemistry, and to have supplemented this confession by the flimsy excuse that he was not responsible for the mistakes of reporters. It is pleasing to learn that he has corrected a popular error, but it might not be impertinent to ask Mr. Charles Gordon Richardson, student of chemistry, whether it was owing to the mistake of a reporter that he was announced as Professor Richardson on the bills of a certain dioramic entertainment with which he was connected not long since. The average reporter has a more than sufficient burden of errors of omission and commission to bear, without fathering the fictitious pretensions of a professor who is only "a student in chemistry."

Is it a Vicious Dog.

Sidney Blade was charged at the police court this morning with keeping a vicious dog. The complainant was a young woman named Kate Hanlan whose infant while playing in the defendant's yard had been bitten by the dog complained of, which at the same time was chained up. Mrs. Barry was called as a witness and testified that she had been attacked and bitten by the same dog some time ago, and a little girl named Annie Green, in whose charge Mrs. Hanlan's baby was at the time it was bitten, also gave evidence. The defence was that the dog was chained up on defendant's premises and that the child had no business to be there, and even if so, had provoked the dog with a stick. Mrs. Blade flatly contradicted the evidence of Mrs. Barry regarding the attack the dog made on her, but admitted that he had bitten one of her own children. The magistrate thought it was already proved that the dog was vicious and expressed the opinion that a dog that would even spring out and bark at passers by should be killed. He reserved his judgment till Monday.

An Important Visit.

We learn from J. McKee, chemist and druggist, and agent for B. Laurance's celebrated Spectacles and Eye Glasses, that Mr. P. H. Morris, the veteran optician, late of the firm of Lazarus & Morris, will be in town and at his store for three days, on the 29th and 30th Sept., and October 1st. His visit will afford those needing spectacles an opportunity of being well-fitted with Laurance's Glasses by a skilled optician, as Mr. Morris is. His advice will be exceedingly valuable on the important subject of selecting suitable aid to sight. Remember the date—for the 3 days during Central Exhibition here.

New Passenger Coaches.

The C.P.R. received yesterday, per G T. R., three fine new passenger coaches from the Cobourg car works. They are elegantly finished throughout, and contain all the modern improvements that go with the palatial provisions modern railway enterprise supplies for the comfort and luxury of the travelling public.

Peterborough's Prime Cheese.

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held on Thursday afternoon. The same amount of cheese boarded at the last regular meeting was offered at this meeting, except the small amount sold at that time. The usual number of buyers were on hand, but they and the sellers were so far apart that the meeting lasted only a very short time. The best offer made was 7⅞ by Mr. B. Green, for the last half of August, but sellers did not feel disposed to separate that from the first half, which some of them still held; 8 cents for the round lot would probably have made transactions. The latest cable quotation was 39 shillings. The next regular meeting will be held on Thursday, Oct. 1st.

The Powell and Jones Stove Works

Ready for Running.

Beautiful Buildings yet Solidly Constructed.

The Plant and How it is Placed.

An Important Industrial Establishment.

"Rustlers" is the word. It is not a very elegant apellation, but it is very expressive, and exactly characterizes the business push and go that distinguish the Powell & Jones Stove Company. Thirty-five days ago the spectator standing on Wolfe street west of Bethune, and looking southward across a waste of low-lying land, beheld a few cottages; to-day a stately and substantial pile, the buildings of the Peterborough stove-works, closes the view. This pile, which contains four hundred thousand bricks, is now completed, roofed and ready that will wake the echoes of its walls on Monday next. The structure consists, generally speaking, of the main building, 42x82 feet, and three stories in height, facing Rink street. This portion is covered with a felt in gravel roof. Extending northward and continuous with the western end wall is an annex 45x60 feet, two stories high and roofed with galvanized iron plate. In rear of this runs the moulding room, 65x65 feet, one story in height, with an attic story, furnished on either side with attic windows hung on hinges, to meet the urgent demand for ventilation required in the moulding shop. The roof of the moulding shop is what is called a "car" roof, and was designed by Mr. J. E. Belcher, C.E., and erected under the directions of Mr. N. Shaw, the veteran millwright. This style of roof gives an exceedingly airy and suitable moulding room, the distance from the floor to the peak of the roof being 34 feet. Great care has been taken in the construction of this department. The foundation walls are exceedingly solid and substantial, as well as the foundations under the entire block of buildings. It was found necessary to go eleven feet deep to get a solid foundation for the north-west corner of the moulding room, and for the other parts, varying depths, according to the nature of the soil. The result of this thoroughness carried out is a pile of buildings of a most solid, substantial and enduring nature, a type in brick, stone and wood of the character and standing of the company.

The situation of these buildings in reference to the railways, gives the company the most complete and convenient railway facilities of any stove company in Canada. They stand close to the western side of the track of the Midland branch of the G. T. R. and in an angle formed by that line and the C. P. R., lying a few rods south. The diamond crossing of the two roads is only a stone cast from the front of the buildings, and from both roads as they go by passengers have a full view of these fine structures. An interchange switch connects the two roads at this point, and work has been begun on a short branch line, which taps the the Midland line and runs upon the premises of the Company. From this track at the proper point, a tramway leads directly to

of the works, 20 x 20 feet, two stories in height, and situated midway on the western side of the moulding room. The second floor of this is on a level, or nearly so, with the mouth of the cupola. At the door of this second floor the tramway ends. This arrangement admits of the pig iron, etc., being unloaded directly from the railway cars, upon the tram-cars, which, operated by steam power, carry their heavy freight directly to the mouth of the cupola. This is a typical instance of the manner in which mechanical appliances are made, throughout the entire system, to save labor and facilitate work. The arrangement of the buildings is of a progressive character—in this sense—they are so arranged that there is a forward movement of the various parts of stoves in the different forms they assume from the crude chaos of the pig iron to the glittering beauty of the finished stove ready for sitting room or parlor. The cupola is built against the wall of the moulding room with the spout opening into the latter, where, when a melt is ready, five hundred and fifty flasks are filled with the molten metal. A cast is made every day. This room gives constant employment to twenty moulders, who are specially skilled in this class of work, in fact they have to serve a regular apprenticeship so it is to be considered to work at the sand used, a special quality of loam, entirely free from grit, is imported from Albany, from which every stove foundry, aiming to produce first class plates, on the continent, derives its supply. The "facing" used is brought from Cincinnatti. Through the middle of the moulding room runs the "mash," an alley six feet wide, into which the castings are piled when the "cast" is over. All the arrangements of the moulding room are of the first-rate order. The floor is made as level as the face of a fish pond, and at suitable positions small hydrants are placed, for the purpose of moistening the sand, and the over-flow, running into a tank, furnishes a lavatory for the moulders.

From the moulding room, workmen with barrows, wheel the castings to

THE CLEANING ROOM,

22 x 24 feet, where the pieces are culled; the rejected parts are thrown into a box and charged against the moulders, who work exclusively by the piece. The slightest defect or blemish condemns the piece to the waste box. The good castings are then placed in the rumblers—hollow iron cylenders, hung horizontally—in which they are revolved till they are thoroughly cleaned. The finer parts, however, are placed on a bench and cleaned by hand with wire brushes. Adjoining is

THE GRINDING ROOM,

16 x 24 feet, in which an adjustable table, capable of being placed instantly at any angle the shape of the piece being ground may require, in the centre of which runs a rapidly revolving emery wheel, also adjustable. Here the "fins" are all ground off, and the edges of the plates smoothed. From this the pieces are advanced a stage—sent forward to the mounting room along a six feet passage. On the left side of this passage is

THE BOILER ROOM,

16 x 24 feet, containing a steel plate boiler 4 x 12 feet, built at the Wm. Hamilton Company's works. In one corner of this room is a tank, supplied with water from an artesian well, by a double acting pump, one side of which fills the tank and the other the boiler. The fuel used is soft coal screenings, and the exhaust steam is utilized to heat the entire building. Opposite this is also 16 x 24, containing a 50 horse-power engine, built by Goldie & McCullough, Galt. It is variable cut off, which admits of the engine running at a uniform speed, whether it is doing one horse-power work or working to its full capacity. It is a beautiful piece of work, nickel-plated in parts, and rests on a cut stone foundation; these in turn lying on pieces of solid stone masonry eight feet deep, so that the only vibration possible will have to be stirred up by an earthquake.

The six feet wide passage leading from the grinding room and flanked by the engine and boiler rooms, ends in

THE MOUNTING ROOM,

42 x 82 feet in area. Here the ground castings are stored on ample shelves till they are wanted to be used in mounting, or putting together the stoves. The parts to be nickel-plated are, however, elevated to the second storey, when they will be met with later on. After the stoves are mounted, they are conveyed, by means of a steam elevator, to the second storey to be black-leaded, fitted with the nickel-plated parts and packed ready for shipment. The elevator, which was designed and constructed by Mr. N. N Shaw, has a platform six feet square. A workman can place four stoves on it, mount it himself, start the elevator, and ascend to the second floor with its cargo, discharge it and return by the same route ready for another.

Part of this floor is also used at present for a pattern room, and in the southwest corner are of the manufacturing and shipping departments, 17 x 17 feet. The general offices of the company will be located up town on George street, in the Cox block.

ON THE SECOND FLOOR

is a flat 42 x 82 feet, to be used as a store room, and a similar store room of corresponding size is found on the third storey of this building.

After the stoves are put together in the mounting room, they are elevated to the second floor and run into

THE BLACK-LEADING ROOM,

22 x 24 feet, where the graphite polish is put on with a rapidity and effect that would turn a kitchen maid green with envy. Adjoining this is the general store room, where are kept the miscellaneous supplies, such as bolts, nuts, screws, nickel plates, mica, etc., etc.

All the parts to be nickel-plated are taken to

where bins are placed to receive each set of the different parts, of which on some stoves there are 24 of nickel (there being 104 parts in a base burner stove). In this room there are two machines, to which are fitted solid paper disks, revolving vertically, the edges moulded to correspond with the shape of the piece to be polished, and some parts are of such varied shape that they have to be handled as many as eighteen times. These edges of the wheels are, to render them fit for use, covered with the polishing material, emery paste. After the parts are polished in this way, they are removed to the adjoining, 15x24 feet. Here they are passed through vats containing six different solutions and baths. Then they are ready for the nickel bath, which contains the nickel solution. Across this vat are extended two copper rods. On one of these is suspended the nickel "anodes," flat slabs of solid nickel metal, and on the other the article to be plated. To the former is attached a copper wire leading from the positive pole of the dynamo electric machine, and to the latter a wire connecting with the negative pole. The dynamo machine is set in motion, and the electricity developed sets up a chemical action in the bath, and the metal is detached in atomic portions from the anodes, and deposited upon the article. The process requires from fifteen minutes to half an hour, according to the result sought. This vat has a capacity of five hundred pieces per day. The electricity is supplied by a splendid dynamo machine, costing $500. The nickle-plating appliances of this department are the most complete to be found in connection with any similar business in Canada. After the parts leave the nickle-plating vat, they are returned to the polishing room, where they are "buffed," thus receiving the silvery burnish that characterizes this class of work. The parts are then wrapped in tissue paper and placed on the store-room shelves ready for use.

The rooms through which the reader has just been conducted, would seem ample for the business, but other buildings are needed. These will consist of an extension to the eastward of the present main building, 65x65 feet and four stories in height, to contain the shipping room, office and sample, pattern and designing rooms. When these are built, next season the shipping room will adjoin the company's private railway track, and stoves can be shipped directly from the store rooms upon the cars.

THE STAFF EMPLOYED

will consist of about 70 skilled workmen, divided as follows:—2 in the cupola room, 20 in the moulding room, 3 in the cleaning room, 4 in the grinding room, engineer and stoker 2, 8 in the mounting room, 3 in the wood pattern room, 4 in the iron pattern room, 6 in the polishing room, 3 in the buffing room, 3 foremen for different departments, besides clerks and laborers. This staff would be small in any other establishment less thoroughly equipped with labour-saving machinery and appliances. In constructing these buildings Messrs. Powell & Jones had an eye to the requirements of the business, which they have learned by experience were most necessary for carrying it on economically and expeditiously.

To-day (Saturday) fire was put under the boiler for the first time, and on Monday work will be begun in the manufacture of stoves.

THE WORK DONE.

The stove repertoire, so to speak, of this company embraces about twenty different varieties of stoves.

The "Rideau," in two sizes, a complete two-flue coal heater, has many points of peculiar excellence. The whole base is a flue, the heating capacity of the stove is phenomenal; it has, besides many other original features. It is handsomely finished and furnished, and is altogether a rarely good stove. This stove is also made in two sizes with oven attachment. The "Happy Cook," square, for coal or wood, is a most handsome piece of kitchen furniture, well and solidly constructed, and burns either coal or wood. This stove is also made in an extended form, with oven 20x20 and 12 inches high, and also in another form, with an elevated oven and direct draught. The "Happy Cook" is made in two other forms, for wood only. The "Grand Imperial" cooking stove is made in two forms as well as the "Enterprise" and "Comet" cooking stoves.

A fine set of box heating stoves for wood is also on the programme as well as farmers' boilers in several sizes.

"GO" IS THE WORD.

The enterprise already shown by the Company is a good guarantee that the business hereafter will be pushed with the same energy and strict regard to substantial and elegant work that has characterized the construction of their superior and elegant buildings. With abundant capital at the back of the concern, the future of the Peterborough stove works, which is an extension on Peterborough soil of the Powell & Jones stove works, formerly located at Smith's Falls. This firm started with eight hands, in very modest premises, and in the fall of 1883 put their first samples on the market. So satisfactory was their work that a market was speedily created, resulting in necessity for increased room and increased working staff.

The first definite proposal for the removal of the works to Peterborough was made by Mr. Geo. A. Cox last April, and so vigorously did he push the matter that in July the Smith Falls works ceased operations and preparations we made for the removal of the plant to Peterborough. The foundation walls of the new buildings were put down, and thirty-five days ago the first brick was laid. On Monday the works will be in operation and turning out stoves during the week.

NOTES.

There are ten carloads of freight consisting of pig iron, coal sand, etc., at the diamond crossing waiting to be unloaded for the use of the works.

All the pig iron is rigorously inspected and tested, and any not coming up to the high standard required is rejected, and sent back to the shippers.

Work began to-day on the construction of the branch railway line connecting the company's premises with the Midland.

The coal sheds built along side of this track are 20 x 60 feet in size.

The works will turn out over 3,500 stoves in a year.

Mr. J. J. Hartly was the contractor for the brick work of the buildings, and Mr. Jas. McClelland superintended the carpentry work.

Mr. D. Breese did the galvanised iron roofing, and the Canada plate roofing on the moulding room.

The [illegible] in the hands of Mr. H. W. Watson; over 2,500 pains of glass were used in the windows.

The name of the works is to be painted on the attic roof of the moulding shop for the benefit of the farmers, and a huge sign will extend along the front of the main building, so that railway passengers on both roads may recognise and admire the finest and most complete stove works premises in the Dominion, for which we wish a long prosperous career.

A Vision Verified.

During the siege of Vicksburg the wife of a confederate soldier was living with her parents in the interior of Mississippi. One night she had a vision, in which she saw the fortifications in which her husband was on duty. In front was an earthwork where the men were protected from the fire of the enemy, but in the rear was a rise of ground which was exposed to bullets. She saw her husband attempt to pass over this small eminence, saw him fall, and saw his companions carry him to an unexposed position, and there he died. She saw the preparations for his burial, the coffin in which he was laid, distinctly noticed the knots and marks on the unplaned lid, and all the sad duties connected with the burial.

The vision made such an impression upon her mind that she related the story to her family, and her father wrote down all the particulars as she saw them. She had not been in Vicksburg since it was invested, and consequently knew nothing of the situation of the works, and had received no letter from her husband from the time the federals closed around it. Several weeks afterwards Vicksburg surrendered and the confederates were paroled and returned to their homes. A young soldier, a friend of the other soldier, came home and brought the news of his death, and every incident connected with his taking off, the situation of the works, the manner in which he was shot, the circumstances of his interment to the minutest detail, corresponded to the vision of his wife as recorded by her father.—St. Louis Republican.

Jewish Longevity.

In enumerating the causes which have made the Jewish people so strong and vigorous, particular mention must be made of their observance of the Sabbath. This day was appointed for the double purpose of securing a set portion of time for the worship of God and affording rest to the body wearied with its six day's labors. Obedience to this primeval law is held by the Jews to be as strictly binding on them as any other religious obligation. In Christain countries where the Sunday is kept sacred or observed as a holiday, another day of rest in addition to their own Sabbath is obtained, thus fortifying them against the crushing toil and nervous strain of modern life. The loss accruing from this enforced abstinence from business worries is more than counterbalanced by the gain in nerve power with which periodical cessation from any harassing employment is compensated. This is doubtless one of the factors which have helped to invigorate both mind and body, and to develop in them those high qualities for which they are justly distinguished.

To sum up: the longevity of the Jew is an acknowledged fact. In his surroundings he is on a par with his Christian neighbor. If the locality in which he dwells is unhealthy he also suffers, but to a less degree. If the climate is ungenial, its influence tells on him, too, but with less injurious effect. His vigorous health enables him to resist the onset of disease to which others succumb. These advantages are for the most part owing to his food, his temperate habits, and the care taken of him in sickness and poverty. No doubt he is specially fortunate in inheriting a constitution which has been built up by attention, for many centuries, to hygienic details. His meat is drained of blood, so that by that means morbid germs are not likely to be conveyed into his system. It is also most carefully inspected so as to prevent the consumption of what is unsound, hence his comparative immunity from scrofulous and tuberculous forms of disease.

The bible is regarded by some scientists as an old-fashioned book; but its teaching in relation to hygiene, even they will confess, has not become antiquated. It must be credited with having anticipated and recorded for our instruction and profit doctrines which are accepted as beyond dispute in this department of knowledge. In the Mosaic law are preserved sanitary rules, the habitual observance of which by the Jew, from generation to generation, has made him superior to all other races in respect of health and longevity. —Leisure Hour.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Exemption.

An Influential Meeting of Citizens Pronounce in its Favor—A Sweeping Resolution.

Early in the week the following invitation was sent to a number of leading townspeople;

PETERBOROUGH, Sept. 14th 1885.

SIR,—In view of the conviction in the minds of the people generally, that this is an important era in the history of the town, and one that calls for prompt action in determining the course to be pursued, in order most effectually to secure the continued prosperity of the town, by offering increased encouragement to manufacturing industries, you are requested to meet on Friday next, at 3 p.m., at the Council Chamber, to confer with others as to conditions of proposed By-laws to be submitted to the Council.

Your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE.

In response a number of leading citizens assembled yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber, when, on motion of Mr. D. W. Dumble, Geo. Hilliard, Esq., M.P., took the chair.

Mr. Dumble addressed the meeting, saying that all present had a common interest in the prosperity and progress of the town, and pointed out that most, if not all, of the causes which had induced and developed the growth of the town in the past, had now ceased to exist, and that in future some new source of growth must be sought. All towns were now looking to manufacturing industries for their future growth, and though many small towns could not reasonably hope to become manufacturing centres, yet, with the splendid water power and excellent railway facilities Peterborough possessed, we had a great advantage, and on the development of that advantage rested

THE FUTURE OF THE TOWN.

Many failures had been met with in attempting to establish manufacturing industries, and the consequence was that men of capital were slow in investing it without some promise of return. He thought the time had come when some plan should be devised to bring about the result all desired. He pointed out the advantage of being able to promptly meet the wants of persons seeking a location for manufactures, and expressed his belief that this matter needed to be dealt with in a broad and liberal spirit. The by-law recently passed, exempting improvements on the Dickson Race, did not convey the meaning of the parties to it; and was worded in such a way that it might be misconstrued; he therefore disapproved of it. He recited the various objections that had been urged against exempting the Dickson property in the manner proposed, which he said were actuated by small personal interests, while the legislation wanted was for the benefit of the whole community. Every man had a stake in that general welfare, and should try to increase its value. He believed a proper course of action would double the town's population. He admitted every man's right to do as he pleased in investing his money, but held the belief that a man who risked his capital in an enterprise that conduced to the general benefit was entitled to credit, even though he had his own interest first in view. The principle of exemption was already recognized and acted on in making assessments, and he had nothing to say against it. After explaining the difference between his own and Mr. Carnegie's resolutions at the recent meeting, he expressed the opinion that the more liberal policy would in the end pay best.

The question was, could we not get a start in industries, and RETAIN OUR ADVANTAGE.

If we did not, he believed it would be our own fault. There was not to-day in Peterborough a monument of the pluck and far seeing abilities of its people. The manufacturing centres of a great country were now in their infancy, and if Peterborough could get a name as one of them, it would attract other enterprise here.

The chairman then asked for an expression of opinion from some other of the gentlemen present, and after some minutes' hesitation, Mr. Denne said that he believed in extending equal rights to every one. He did not believe that the value of the taxes would either bring or keep any one away from the town, but at the same time believed in doing everything that could be done to assist a new industry.

Mr. Yelland remarked that though Mr. Dumble had made some reflections on the enterprise of the people of Peterborough, the town was one of the most prosperous in the country. He was quite willing to exempt any industries, provided they did not interfere with the old.

Mr. James Stevenson was fully in accord with the views of Mr Dumble, and did not believe in sticking at trifles. Mr. Yelland had said the town was prosperous, but he believed that it was more owing to natural and accidental advantages than to concerted enterprise on the part of the townspeople. He feared too many dwelling houses were going up, for there were many people who had been attracted here by the railway building and other completed works, who would soon become a public charge, unless employment was found for them. He believed of future prosperity consisted in attracting hither manufactures. This was what had induced him to give the lockworks building free of rent for five years. Large sums of money had been expended here during the past five years that would be discontinued now; the railways were completed, and it was a question how the town was to be supported. He would be in favor of exempting all the water power in town if industries could be located on it. It was useless to expect manufacturers to locate here without offering them inducements. An American gentleman from Cleveland had recently remarked to him that he had never seen a finer water power, and expressed surprise to see so much of it running to waste. He believed that if it was generally known it would attract manufacturers here. It would not do in this matter to let narrow views prevail; it would be hard to avoid treading on someone's corns, but he did not for a moment believe that any industry attracted here by the Dickson Company would injure the interests of any existing industry.

Mr. McClelland said the Council were desirous and had expressed their desire to aid new industries and he failed to see that anything new had been brought before the meeting. Exemptions had been given to the lock factory and stove works, and they had shown no objection whatever to fostering new industries.

Mr. Dumble submitted a resolution recommending the Council to repeal the Dickson by-law and to substitute one granting exemption to any manufactory, steam or water power, employing 20 hands that might be started in any part of the town.

Mr. Kendry thought it would be unwise to stipulate the number of hands at a high figure, as there might come times of depression when a manufacturer would not be able to employ the full number, and yet at such a time would be more in need of exemption than at any other. He agreed with the sentiments of Messrs. Dumble and Stevenson that if we did not wake up we should be LEFT BEHIND IN THE RACE.

Mr. Yelland remarked that he could not understand how it was. At the big meeting Mr. Dumble had moved for the repeal of the by-law, and Mr. Carnegie had done the same, and here to-day it was being recommended, yet he and Mr. McClelland were accused of being narrow-minded because they had been opposed to the same by-law.

Mr. Flavelle pointed out that the meeting was not called to say whether the Dickson by-law was right or wrong, but to define some plan of action, and they were wasting time by discussing the doings of the Council.

Mr. Poussette thought the town backward in view of its capabilities. The Dickson estate he thought deserved credit for extending their property and erecting several factories without asking for exemption. They spent $2,000 a week for wages and carried on one of the most important and beneficial businesses in Peterborough. He concurred in Mr. Dumble's ideas. He thought it was a mistake for manufacturers already in town to think they would be injured by any industry that would start on the Dickson race, because they would only be looking for an export trade.

Mr. Kelly believed some measures should be taken to prevent manufacturers exempted from doing a local trade.

Messrs. Denne and Lech spoke for some minutes, but their opinions, especially Mr. Lech's, were not relevant to the subject under consideration.

Mr. Hazlitt pointed out that though Messrs. McClelland and Yelland now thought the by-law exempting the Dickson property such the resolution upon which it was based, and upon which the by-law exempting the stove works and lock works was founded, was moved in the Council by Mr. McClelland, and it was not till after these two concerns had been exempted and the same principle applied to the Dickson estate that a new light dawned in on that gentleman. After the stove and lock works were exempted and the Dickson property was exempted on the same basis, Mr. McClelland began to see how "broad and sweeping" the measure was, and could not rest until it was repealed. Now, he had never asked for that by law, for the Dickson company or any other company, for he did not believe in the principle, but he protested against their property being placed in a worse position than any other. It was unfair to the Dickson company to exempt without conditions the man who came to the west, south, or any part but the Dickson race, but to burden with conditions the man who came there. All he asked on behalf of the Dickson company was fair play. He pointed out the folly of driving away a waggon factory that would turn out five waggons a day because it would clash with the builder who made only twice that many in a year, or a big boot and shoe factory because it might not please a local maker.

A MONSTROUS AND INIQUITOUS MEASURE,

Mr. Kendry inquired if Mr. Hazlitt would feel satisfied with a by-law exempting every building put up for the next ten years.

Mr. Hazlitt replied that he would be satisfied with whatever the townsmen and Council thought best. He had not come to the meeting to discuss the Dickson exemption and agreed with Mr. Flavelle that it was not the question before the meeting.

Mr. Hilliard left the chair and addressed the meeting at some length, in the necessity and desirability of inducing the location of manufactures, by granting exemption, but at the same time did not personally believe in the principle, although we would be compelled to follow the lead of other towns who did the same. But he thought the council would have to deal with each case as it arose, and believed the exemption should be granted on the express conditions that all their manufactures should be exported. There was no doubt the water power was one of the finest in the country, and should be developed, but he believed that the interests of people already here should be studied.

FULLY CONCURRING

The following resolution, moved by Mr. Dumble, and seconded by Mr. Stevenson, was then read:

"That, in the opinion of this meeting, it would be in the interests of this town to exempt from municipal taxation every new manufacturing establishment established in the town during the next ten years, such exemption to apply to the lands, buildings and machinery, when such machinery is run by not less than ten hands, in and in connection with the business, to be exempted, and we respectfully request the council to pass a by-law in the terms above set out."

Mr. Carnegie spoke in opposition to the resolution, but on the question being put it was carried by a large majority, and the meeting dispersed.

THE LAST STRAW.

"It is the last straw that breaks the camel's back," said Lucy, bursting into tears.

The pleasant June sunbeams came peeping into the cool, stone-paved dairy, where pans of milk and cream were ranged in orderly array; great stone pots stood under the shelves, and a blue-painted churn was already placed on the table for service.

Mr. Bellenden was justly proud of his dairy. Not a chance guest came to the house but was invited down to see it; not a housekeeper in the neighborhood but secretly envied its many conveniences and exquisite neatness.

"And it isn't the dairy alone," triumphantly remarked Matthew Bellenden. "And you may go through the house from garret to cellar, and you'll never find a speck of dust or a stain of rust. There never was such a housekeeper as my wife!"

Mrs. Bellenden was young, too, scarcely three-and-twenty. She had been delicately reared and quite ignorant of all the machinery of domestic life, until she married Matthew Bellenden.

"It's very strange," Lucy had written to her father. "The farm is beautiful. You never saw such monstrous old elm-trees, nor such superb roses, and the meadows are full of red clover, and the strawberries shine like jewels on the sunny hillsides. But nobody sketches or reads. I don't think there is a copy of Tennyson in the whole neighborhood, and no one ever heard of Dore or Millais. All they think of is how many dozens of eggs the hens lay, and how many cheeses they can make in a year. And the woman who has a new receipt for home-made wine, or a new pattern for patchwork quilts, is the leader of society."

But presently young Mrs. Bellenden herself caught the fever, and became a model housewife. Example is all-powerful, and Lucy began to believe that the whole end and aim of life was domestic thrift, money-saving, and the treadmill of work.

"My dear," said Matthew, "if you thought you could get along without a servant this year, I might be able to afford that new reaper before the oat-crop comes in."

"I'll try," said Lucy.

And after that she rose before daybreak, and worked later in the night than ever.

"What is the matter with your hands, Lucy?" her husband asked, one day. They are not so white and beautiful as they used to be."

Lucy colored as she glanced down at the members in question.

"I suppose it is making fires," she said.

And then she took to wearing kid gloves at her sweeping and dusting and digging out of ashes.

"My coat is getting shabby," Matthew one day remarked.

"Why don't you buy another one?" asked his wife.

Matthew laughed a short laugh.

"What do you think Mrs. Higgins has done?" said he. "She ripped up her husband's old suit and cut a pattern by it, and made a new one and saved him two pounds."

"I could do that," said Lucy, with sparkling eyes. "I will try it."

"You can do anything, my dear!" said Mr. Bellenden, admiringly.

And Lucy felt that she had her rich reward.

Company began to come as soon as nice weather set in.

All the affectionate relations of Mr. Bellenden soon discovered that the farm-house was cool and shady, that Lucy's cooking was excellent, and that the bedrooms were neatness itself.

Some of them were even good enough to invite their relations as well; and so the house was full from April to December with visitors who brought their carpet-bags and valises with that faith in human hospitality which is one of life's best gifts.

Mrs. Bellenden's fame went abroad among the Dorcases of the neighborhood in the matter of butter and cheese; she took prizes in the domestic departments of all the agricultural fairs, and the adjoining housewives took no trouble to make things that they could borrow of Mrs. Bellenden, "just as well as not."

And one day, when poor Lucy, under the blighting influence of a horrible sick headache, was endeavoring to strain three or four gallons of milk into the shining pans, the news arrived that her husband's Uncle Paul was coming to the farm.

"Another guest!" said Lucy, despairingly.

And then she uttered the proverb that heads our sketch.

"Oh, it's only Uncle Paul!" said Mr. Bellenden. "Don't fret, Lucy! He's the most peaceable old gentleman in the world. He'll make no more trouble than a cricket. John's wife thought she couldn't have him because she has no servant just now——"

"Neither have I!" said Lucy, rebelliously.

"And Sarah don't like company."

"I am supposed to be fond of it!" observed Lucy, bitterly.

"And Reuben's girls don't want old folks staying there. It's too much trouble, they say," added Matthew.

Lucy bit her lip to keep back the words she might have uttered, and said, instead:

"Where is he to sleep? The Belfords have the front bed-room, and your Cousin Susan occupies the back, and the four Miss Pattersons's sleep in the two garrets."

She might have added that she and her husband, and the baby had slept in a hot little den opening from the kitchen for four weeks, vainly expecting Mr. and Mrs. Belford to depart; and that she had never yet had a chance to invite her father to the farm in pleasant weather.

But she was magnanimous, and held her peace.

"Oh, you can find some place for him!" said her husband, lightly. "There's that little room at the end of the hall where the spinning-wheel is."

"But it isn't furnished!" pleaded Lucy.

"You can easily sew a carpet together out of those old pieces from the Belford's room; and it's no trouble to put up a muslin curtain to the window and lift in a..."

...just tack together a mattress and whitewash the ceiling, and—What's that, Lucy? The cows in the turnip field! Dear me! everything goes wrong if I step into the house for a moment. And really, Lucy, these things are your business, not mine!" he added, irritably.

Lucy could not help laughing, all by herself, as her husband ran up the steps.

But it was a very sad little laugh, and soon changed into a sigh.

"I wonder," said she, in a whisper, "...my own dried-out shell would haunt these stone pavements and scrubbed shelves if I were to die? I never heard of a ghost in a dairy before, but I should think that it might very easily be."

But the little bed-room was fitted up, for all that, as fresh as a rose, and Uncle Paul arrived, a dried-up, yellow-complexioned old man, with an old-fashioned cravat tied in many folds around his neck, and a broad-brimmed, low-crowned hat and fine, gold-headed cane.

He had the polite way of half a century ago, and Lucy thought she should like him very much, if only she had time to get acquainted with him.

But she was churning ten pounds of butter a day, and there was the baby, and the company, and the young chickens, and the baking to do.

She was almost too busy to clean. But Uncle Paul was watching her quietly all the time.

He came out, one day, to the barn, where his nephew was putting a new handle on a sickle-blade.

"Pretty busy times—eh, Uncle Paul?" said the farmer, scarcely taking the leisure to look up.

"Aye," absently answered the old man. "Did I tell you, nephew Matthew, about the reason I left your Cousin Joseph's?"

"Not that I remember," said Matthew, breathing on the blade, and polishing it with his silk handkerchief.

"Dorothy died—his wife!"

"Oh, yes," said Matthew. "Low fever, wasn't it?"

"No!" bluntly answered Uncle Paul. "It was hard work. That woman, nephew Matthew, did the housework for eight persons. Joe didn't even let her have a woman to help with the washing and the ironing!"

"Must have been a regular-going brute," said Matthew, tightening the handle a little.

"All the sewing, too," added Uncle Paul—"the mending and making. She never went anywhere except to church. Joe didn't believe in women gadding about."

"The old savage!" said Matthew.

"She was fond of reading, but she never got any time for it," said Uncle Paul. "She rose before sundawn, and never lay down until eleven o'clock. It was hard work that killed that woman, and Joseph coolly declared that it was sheer laziness when she couldn't drag herself about any longer. And when she died he rolled up his eyes and called it the visitation of Providence."

"Why didn't the neighbors lynch him?" cried Matthew, fairly aroused to indignation at last.

Uncle Paul took off his glasses, wiped them vigorously, and looked his nephew hard in the face.

"Why don't the neighbors lynch you?" said he.

Matthew dropped the sickle, and stared.

"Nephew Matthew," said Uncle Paul, impressively, "thou art the man! Are you not doing the very same thing?"

"I?" gasped Matthew.

"Your wife is doing the work of a household of sixteen people," said Uncle Paul. "She is drudging as you could get no stranger to drudge. She is rising early, and lying down late; she is offering up her life on the shrine of your farm and its requirements. I have seen her grow thin and pale even during the few days I have been here. I have seen her carry up Mrs. Belford's breakfast daily to her room, because Mrs. Belford preferred to lie in bed; and cooking dainty dishes for Helen Patterson, because Helen wouldn't eat what the rest like. No galley-slave ever worked as she does. And you, with your farm hands—whose board only adds to her cares, and your array of labor-saving machinery, stand coolly by and see her commit slow suicide. Yes, nephew Matthew, I think it is a case for lynching!"

Matthew had grown pale.

"I—I never thought of this," said he. Why didn't some one tell me?"

"Where were your eyes?" said Uncle Paul. Matthew Bellendon rolled down his shirt sleeves, put on his coat and went into the house.

He told the Belfords and Pattersons that it was inconvenient to keep them any longer. He gave Cousin Susan to understand that her room was needed. He made arrangements to board out the farm hands, and engaged a stout dairy maid, and a house-servant to wait on Lucy. And he telegraphed to her father to come to Silvan Bridge at once.

"She deserves a treat," he said. "He shall spend the summer with us."

And then he went to tell Lucy.

She had fainted among the buttercups, picking strawberries for tea. Poor little Lucy! The machinery had utterly refused to revolve any longer.

His heart grew cold within him.

"She will die," he thought, "and I shall have murdered her."

But she did not die. She recovered her strength by degrees.

"It is better than any medicine," she said, "to know that Matthew is thinking of me and for me."

And Uncle Paul—"the last straw," as she had called him—had proved her salvation.

"I didn't want her to go as Joe's wife did," said Uncle Paul.

Cheap Excursion to Chicago and Return.

A train of first-class coaches will leave the Grand Trunk station, Peterborough, on Friday and Saturday, the 25th and 26th of September, for Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukie and Cincinnatti. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukie and Cincinnatti and return only $12, to Detroit and return, only $8.00; good for 10 days. This excursion runs over the Wabash and Baltimore and Ohio Railways, being 26 miles shorter than any other line from Toronto to Chicago. Secure your tickets from the old reliable ticket agent, Mr. Thos. Menzies, Peterborough.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, &c., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

Smiths Market.

Peaches, Plums, Pears, Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Apples, Cherries, Garden Raspberries, Melons, Currants, Gooseberries, and all kinds of green vegetables. Ripe Tomatoes one dollar per box, twenty pounds in the box. Fresh Fish, Hams and Bacon.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The usual Saturday night and Sunday meetings will be held at the young men's rooms. All young men are invited to attend the one to-night.

The Bible class will be resumed early in October.

The St. Paul's Church choir are preparing for the anniversary of the Association on Oct. 1st.

St. Luke's Sunday School.

Owing to the fact that St. Luke's Sunday School room has been pulled down preparatory to the erection of large and more commodious premises, the Town Hall, Ashburnham has been secured for Sunday School purposes for the next few weeks. Teachers and scholars are therefore notified that the Bible and other classes will meet at the Town Hall to-morrow at 3 o'clock.

Carswell, Monday.

Edward Carswell, the Canadian Gough, is coming. Popular and inimitable. Crowded houses greet him everywhere, and the Scott Act Association have great pleasure in announcing a lecture by him in the Opera House on Monday evening. Young and old are charmed by his pathos and convulsed by his humour. The doors will be open at 7:30, and those who fail to come early will have to take a back seat. Mr. Carswell is too well and favorably known in this vicinity to need encomiums. A treat is in store in this visit. Free to all.

The Churches.

The morning service at Charlotte street Methodist Church to-morrow will be conducted by Rev. B. B. Keefer. In the evening the pastor, Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., will preach a Scott Act sermon, taking as his text the words, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Rev. F. H. Wallace will preach at George street Methodist Church in the morning, and in the evening Rev. I. Tovell will take for his theme "A sad man, a mad man, and a glad people."

At the Baptist Church, Rev. A. H. Munro, having returned from his holidays, will occupy the pulpit morning and evening.

The Rev. B. B. Keefer, of Toronto, will conduct the service in the Charlotte street Methodist Church in the morning, and in the Ashburnham Methodist Church in the evening.

The Rev. W. A. McKay, B.A., of Woodstock, will preach in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church both morning and evening to-morrow. The pastor of the church, Rev. E. F. Torrance, M. A., will preach at Westwood and Norwood. In the latter place a union meeting of all the churches will be held, in connection with the temperance question.

Personal.

Judge Benson of Port Hope, was registered at the Oriental Hotel, last evening.

Professor Reid, a famous swordsman, formerly of the 1st Royal Dragoons, and lately instructor of the Toronto and Montreal fencing clubs, is in town, and stopping at the Oriental.

Mr. Barton Earle is out of town, attending the funeral of his sister.

Mr. A. Waldie, representing the Sun Life Insurance Company at Kingston, and formerly of Peterborough, gave us call this morning.

Mr. J. A. Richardson, Canadian Travelling Agent for the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway, is in town to day, advertising the cheap excursion to Chicago over this line.

EL PADRE" and "CABLE" CIGARS, for sale, at G. W. REBIDOR'S. 27-3mos

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Special Meeting.

All the Ward Committees meet at the Scott Act headquarters, Hunter street, to-night. Every Scott Act supporter is urged to be present.

Town Committees.

A special meeting of the Scott Act town committees will be held at the Committee Rooms this evening.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will run an excursion from Peterborough to points west on the 25th and 26th September. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Cincinnati, and Milwaukee and return, $12; Grand Rapids and return, $10; Saginaw City and Bay City and return, $9; Detroit and return, $6. This is the shortest and most comfortable route, as the company's cars are all new. Passengers leaving in the morning arrive in Detroit the same afternoon, crossing the line in daylight; arriving in Chicago next morning. For reliable information apply to Alex. Elliott, C. P. R. ticket agent, who can supply you with through coupon tickets.

This Season.

Fair, VanEvery & Co'y have opened a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps, in many styles, much below regular prices. Don't fail to see them.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks, among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

The Fun of an Advertisement.

My son, there is nothing on earth so mysteriously funny as a newspaper advertisement. The prime, first, last, and all the time, object of an advertisement is to draw custom. It is not, was not, and never will be, designed for any other purpose. So the merchant waits till the busy season comes and the store is so full of custom that he can't get his hat off, and then he rushes to the newspapers and puts in his advertisement. When the season gets along and there is no trade, and he wants to sell goods so bad he can't pay his rent, he takes out his advertisement. That is, some of them do, but occasionally a level headed merchant puts in a bigger one and scoops in all the business, while his neighbors are making mortgages to pay the gas bill.

There are times when you couldn't stop people from buying everything in the store if you planted a cannon behind the door, and that's the time the advertisement is sent out on its holy mission. It makes light work for the advertisement, for a chalk sign on the sidewalk could do all that was needed and have a holiday six days in the week, but who wants to favor an advertisement. They are built to do hard work, and should be sent out in the dull days when a customer has to be knocked down with hard facts, and kicked insensible with bankrupt reductions and dragged in with irresistible slaughter of prices before he will spend a cent.

That's the aim and end of an advertisement, my son, and if you ever open a store don't try to get them to come when they are already sticking out of the windows, but give them your advertisement right between the eyes in the dull season, and you will wax rich and own a fast horse, and perhaps be able to smoke a cigar once or twice a year. Write this down where you'll fall over it every day. The time to draw business is when you want business, and not when you have more business than you can attend to already.—Bridgeport Post.

This is the season when the hatches out his fish yarn or his story of the sea serpent. One of the local papers has been doing itself proud by publishing a column or so of these yarns, but not one of them has assumed the proportions of a good healthy lie. The writers don't seem to have acquired that ease and grace essential to the success of a leviathan fish story. They seem to be hampered by the bonds of truth and a too close adherence to facts.—Baltimore Every [illegible]

Phil Sheridan.

I saw the general of the army, P. H. Sheridan, come into the Ebbitt house the other evening, to make a call, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York World. He stopped a moment in the rotunda to talk to some friends. A group of military officers immediately gathered around him. A stranger would never have selected him as their commander-in-chief. A more unmilitary-looking man never lived, in civilian's dress. He needs his uniform. Most of the officers about him were in civilian's dress also, but there was hardly one of them who did not wear some outward sign of his military character. Sheridan is very short and each year seems to add to the rotundity of his pudgy figure. When I saw him in the lobby he wore upon the back of his round, bullet head a very slim, high, old-fashioned silk hat of a style that was very popular about the time of the close of the war. It was about two sizes too small. His short, iron-gray hair stood out from under the rim of his hat at nearly right angles with it. His red, weather-beaten face does not show any new lines of advancing age, but his grizzly, iron-gray mustache and imperial are whitening very fast. He wore a short, light, yellow-gray overcoat which had only five buttons, and they were nearly ready to fly off from the undue strain of Sheridan's round figure. The coat, like the hat, appeared to have been long outgrown. The trousers were a gray plaid and fitted very snugly to the General's fat legs. His boots were thick-soled and unblacked. He wore no gloves. The side and rear views of the General suggested a low-comedy man who had walked off the stage all made up for a funny part, but when you came to look at the General square in the face, its stern, solemn, composed lines were enough to make one forget his grotesque figure and careless dress. He is very popular in Washington, but he is not as popular as was Gen. Sherman with the ladies. He is fonder of staying at home than he is of going about in society. He takes more pleasure in paying attention to his own wife than to other men's wives. Until he reforms in this particular he will never acquire what might be called great popularity in society. It will be ten years before Sheridan can be retired. As the time is so far ahead, it is not worth while to speculate as to his successor. When he goes out, the rank of lieutenant-general will go with him. The highest rank after this will be that of major-general.

He Wanted "a Lift."

A geezy, dilapidated looking old bum with dusty shoes wrung over at the heel, trousers freely fringed at the bottoms, coat all tattered, torn, and faded to a dingy green by the sunshine and storm of many a day's tramping, was wearily tramping along the road to Burleigh Falls the other day, cursing his luck and the hard-hearted farmers who refused all his requests for "a lift." Presently he was overtaken by a good-natured, portly looking individual who, seated on top of a load of boxes in a light waggon drawn by two powerful horses, was merrily whistling as he jogged along. Encouraged by his good natured appearance, the traveller thought he would make one more attempt and sung out, "Say, boss, can't you give a poor fellow a lift?" The jolly teamster gave a pitying glance at him, reining in his horses, replied, "Well, I've got a pretty heavy load here, but Bob White never refused to give a poor man a ride; fire your turkey up here and clamber up. The tramp tossed up his satchel and stick and followed them with an alacrity of which a few moments before he seemed incapable, and was soon comfortably seated alongside the portly driver, and the wagon resumed its way. After a few questions had been put and answered on each side the tramp inquired, "What kind of a load hev yer got here, boss; eggs?" "Dynamite," laconally answered the driver, in a careless manner. "Hey! what der yer soy?" excitedly inquired the bum, his hair standing upright and raising his hat about two inches from his head, "here, lemme get down, I guess them hosses aren't fit to draw sich a heavy load." "Oh! yes, they're all right," said the jolly driver, whipping up the team and starting at a round trot. The affrighted tramp cast a glance behind him and spied the mark on the packages, "Dynamite; dangerous explosive." The effect was as instantaneous as if the whole load had exploded. The satchel flew off one way, and the tramp rolled down another, and when Bob White, recovering his suprise, looked to see what had become of his late companion, all he could see was a fleeting vision of tatters, rags and satchel plunging madly through the woods that skirted the road, with the speed of a steeplechaser. Bob says he never saw a tramp hustle so lively before in his life, and it is safe to say that that particular bum will never accept a lift again without first acertaining the nature of the load he is to ride on. He wanted a "lift," but not a lift so far as the dynnamite was likely to send him.

An Oriental Maladay.

The employees of the Oriental Hotel have got the baseball fever and unless they get it worked off by defeating the employees of the Grand Central or some other hotel, Mac will have either to shut up house, or get a new set of hands complete. The infection first made itself apparent among the bell-boys, who, while every bell in the house is whirring, and Dick Smith yelling "front!" at the top of his voice, may be seen out on the sidewalk tossing back and forth a ball composed of knotted dusters, well hardened up with mud, totally regardless of everything else. The disorder next manifested among the waiters in the dining room, who now fire high balls at the astonished guests, as if intent on getting them out on strikes, and are getting in lots of practice making runs between the tables and the "home plate," which is apparently located in the kitchen. Nor have other parts of the house escaped. Billy McGregor, in the bar, cannot make up a matitutinal cocktail without tossing up and catching the bottle two or three times during the operation. Ned Crowe, instead of yelling "All aboo-oo-rd!" as usual, has been noticed of late to forget himself, and when about to announce the departure of the C.P.R. west to sing out "Three stri-i-ikes!" and "oou-u-u-t." The latest report says that even the chambermaids have got the fever, and are practising the game upstairs, using a broomstick for a club, and a feather pillow for a ball. Dick Smith is putting in all his spare time reading Spalding's Baseball Guide, and practising fielding with Percy Myles' dog Punch, who has got the disease as bad as the rest of the household. In the meantime the unfortunate guests look on askance, and wonder when it is all going to end, which as before hinted, will probably be when the Orientals' have succeeded in cleaning out the employees of some other baseball-stricken hostelry.

That Hose.

The Agent of the Canadian Rubber Company Disagrees with Mr. Humphries—And Reports our Hose to be in good Condition.

Mr. Charles R. Gray, agent of the Canadian Rubber Company of Montreal, having heard of the statements recently made by Mr. Humphrey, agent for the Maltese Cross brand of hose, with reference to the state of the hose of the Peterborough Fire Department, has been spending a few days in town, inquiring into the facts of the case in the interest of his company, from whom a considerable portion of the hose owned by the town was purchased. After making a careful and searching investigation, in the course of which no effort has been spared to get at the bottom facts, Mr. Gray reports as follows:—I found in Peterborough 500 feet of Eureka Hose, purchased of Mr. Dickenson eight years ago, and five hundred feet of cable hose, which I believe was purchased from Mr. Bertram about five years ago, made by the Cable Hose Company, of New York. There were also about five hundred feet of Eureka Hose, purchased from our company about two years ago. The first lot, which has exceeded the time for which it was guaranteed by five years, has stood the wear and tear of all the fires in that time, having been used to save the rubber hose, and in spite of this it is still good for two or three years further service, and any inspector of hose cannot but pronounce it PERFECTLY RELIABLE.

As for the cable hose, it has the same fault it had when it came here, it leaks, and had it not been well cared for would now be totally unfit for service. I cannot account for the statements that have been made in regard to our hose, for it is as good as it is possible for hose that has been in use eight years to be. The 500 feet supplied here two years ago is guaranteed by the company and if any defect exists in it the corporation of Peterborough need have no trouble about it, for the company are able and willing to carry out their obligations. The guarantee has two years to run; if the hose was not good at the time of delivery the authorities should not have received it, but if, having done so, they now think it is bad, it is their duty to prove that it is not what we represented it to be, and call upon us to make it good. This they cannot do. With regard to a statement made in the Council by Councillor Rutherford that there is not five hundred feet of good hose in the place, I can only say that he must have been much misinformed or have some ulterior object in view. Mr. Humphrey, agent for the Maltese Cross Hose Co., made the statement that one hose was two ply instead of three ply and that it was rotten. I was sent to ascertain what truth there might be in his assertions. With that object I made a full investigation and can confidently say that the hose is beyond all question three ply, and that there is nothing at all wrong with it. There is no mark of wear or tear on it, and instead of being rotten, as stated by Mr. Humphrey, it was as much as I could do to cut through it with a sharp knife. There is not a foot of hose in Peterborough that I could say was rotten, though the 500 feet of cable hose, as I said before, is

NOT VERY GOOD.

One of the principal reasons of my coming here was that the Chief of the Trenton Fire Brigade told me that he had been informed that the hose here was only two ply instead of three ply and that a quantity of it was going to be discarded on account of its being unreliable and rubber hose substituted. He also said that Chief Rutherford's name was being used as a reference. In conclusion, I can only say that part of the hose supplied by our company had been in use four years beyond the time it is guaranteed for and is still serviceable, and for the remainder the town has our guarantee, and if the hose is not good, can make the company replace it. I cannot help believing that the whole agitation in regard to this question has been raised by a few officials incited by interested outside parties. Some clue as to who these parties are may perhaps be gleaned from the fact that thirty new hydrants being erected are being "threaded" to fit the Maltese Cross brand of fire hose.

A Matter of Luck.

A gutter band consisting of five Germans was tooting an excruciating tune in front of a beer saloon on Druid Hill avenue yesterday morning. The musicians were incased in thick clothing, and three of the cornetists wore mittens, making it impossible for them to sound one note without closing all the valves on their instruments. The larger instruments were incased in bags to prevent the cold weather and the vigorous blowing of the players from splitting the brass.

"Say, Jim, give them fellers a nickel!" shouted a potato fakir to his partner, who was passing the band. The vender immediately went down in his pocket and gave a coin to the little stout fellow who was lustily blowing the cornet with icicles.

"Is it customary for arabs to give money to gutter bands?" asked a reporter.

"Oh, yes," replied the peddler of vegetables, as he changed five huge potatoes from one hand to another. "You see, we have to do it for luck. I'll bet a dollar we sell out before noon, an' if we had let that darned band pass we'd a ben kept peddling all day."—Boston Herald.

A Voter's Voice on the Scott Act.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—I heard a man recently say that the passage of the Scott Act in this county would be an injury to the town. I thought this a strange statement and I have asked myself how this can be? Of course, the object in passing the Scott Act is to stop the drinking of whiskey and I would like to know if making men sober is going to injure the town. I have always thought what a man spent in drink was spent for something which could give him no return except broken down health and waste of his substance. I never supposed that a drunken man was as good and useful as a sober man, and if the passage of the Scott Act is going to work injury, then to remove that incumbrance and idleness are better and more profitable to a community than sobriety and industry. I know that the person who made the remark above referred to, would not employ a drinking man. I know that he would not have anyone to do his work who was not sober and steady.

I believe that there is spent in this town every year on strong drink well on to sixty thousand dollars, and I presume that every one will admit that those sixty thousand dollars are worse than wasted. The whisky is drunk and can give no return except in the form of quarrels and fights and ruined homes. A drunkard must of necessity be an idle man, and not only idle, but a poor man. If the town or the county either will grow and improve better and faster if inhabited by drunken and idle men than it would do if inhabited by strong, sober and industrious men, then by all means let us defeat the Scott Act, and let us have drunkenness and idleness. If the men who waste their money and their time in using strong drink are more likely to build up the town and add to its wealth and prosperity than sober and industrious men, who spend their money in acquiring property and improving it, then give us the whiskey drinkers, and expect the town to grow and prosper. If drunkenness will produce more domestic comfort and happiness than temperance can do, let us have drunkenness. If temperance makes men quarrel and fight and waste their energies and their means, and if temperance brings domestic misery and poverty then do away with temperance and give us plenty of strong drink. The anti-Scott Act men say it does, and they would have people believe that they are unselfish in all this and that they are their best and only friends. They want people to believe that ten dollars spent in a bar room is better than if laid out in buying tea and sugar and wood and clothing. And they would have people believe that the man who neglects and abuses his wife and children and who squanders his house and home in strong drink is doing more good to his wife and children, more good to himself and to his country than the man who makes his home comfortable and happy and who makes and saves two dollars where he had but one before.

Set these things to the test in voting for or against the Scott Act. On the same principle, I suppose those Anti-Scott Act men will contend that the man who spends his week's wages in strong drink, and who, on Saturday night, carries home a bottle of whisky instead of some beef and bread, is a better man than he who saves his earnings to clothe and feed his family and provide things comfortable at home. If we have to keep an expensive staff of policemen to protect us against those bad temperance men, then do away with temperance and give us plenty of whisky. And if the bar-room is such a good place, then by all means invite our families to avail themselves of the privileges thus afforded them, and let them not forget at the same time to take a glass of wine or whisky, for what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander; and if it is good for the man to go there and drink, it must be good for his family also, and we cannot have too much of a really good thing.

If the Scott Act is bad and the drink is good, by all means let us have plenty of the drink. For those reasons and many others the Scott Act should be voted down. And then when our boys take courage by our example and become drunkards and criminals also, we can say, "well done." And when those brothers come home crazed by drink, and turn their wives and children out of doors into the street, our fellow citizens can say the defeat of the Scott Act did it all, and we voted to defeat it. I am but a humble person, and do not lay claim to much knowledge, but I am a free man living in a free country, and I claim the right to my opinion and to use it in a good cause at the polls on Thursday next.

Yours truly,
VOTER.

The Scott Act.

From a Financial and Non-Enforcement Standpoint.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—As the day for voting on the Scott Act is close at hand it would be well for ratepayers to consider how they should cast their ballots on that day. Consider first how much they will burden themselves with if it carries and what good they will receive in return for that burden.

I believe that the amount now received by the town from licenses is something like six thousand dollars, which, of course, will be lost to the town if the Act passes. We had recently imposed upon us $3,000 per annum for water works, and I believe I am within the mark in saying that the loss in taxes on personal property, &c., if the Act passes, will be another thousand dollars. This makes the additional amount to be raised by direct tax on the people $10,000 a year, an addition to our present taxes of nearly one-third.

Are we prepared to burden ourselves with this large amount, and for what? Simply to satisfy a sentiment, for it is well known to any person who inquires honestly for himself that the Act is a failure where it has been passed and that instead of diminishing drunkenness it has increased, both in our own country and in other countries where similar acts have been tried.

Hear what the Rev. Bishop Manto Eastburn, D. D., says:—"I am decided in favor of a license law and against a prohibitory law. I speak from observations I have made, and from reports brought to me by those who have visited the poor at my suggestion."

Rev. George E. Ellis, D.D., a clergyman of Charleston for 27 years, thus explains:

"All efforts to coerce men in their private habits only tend to make them worse. The existence of the prohibitory law for fifteen years shows that it met with the approbation of he legislators, but the open defiance of it in the community shows that it has not its effect upon the majority of the people."

Rev. E. M. P. Wells, clergyman of the Episcopal church, Boston, thus declares about the increase of shebeen shops:—

"I have been a strong friend of temperance all my life, and if I could, sir, would make any sacrifice to put an end to the horrible traffic among the poor. Within six months after the government refused licenses and people were told that they could not sell, you could observe places springing up here and there, perhaps five or six right along together. The sale of liquor has been on the increase, both in the number of drinking places and the number of persons obtaining drink."

Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D. D., pastor of Essex street church, Boston, for 33 years, says:

"My conviction has been, and is, that it (prohibition) is a failure. A law restricting and regulating the sale of ardent spirits I believe to be the true way of preventing intemperance—so far as legislation can do it."

Rev. Edward T. Taylor, a minister in Boston for 45 years, says:

"I am opposed to the present prohibitory law, which opens the door everywhere to the most worthless beings to sell liquor; and it seems to me that the more worthless the being the more liberty he has. The rum houses are scarcely out of sight one from the other."

Rev. Thomas Sheahan, priest of the Catholic church of Taunton, say:

"In Salem, where I passed fifteen years, I endeavoured, so far as lay in my power, to put down rum-selling, making use of rather arbitrary means, perhaps. I was quite successful until the passage of the prohibitory law. I found that the prohibitory law increased drinking greatly. I most decidedly say the prohibitory law weakened the influence and moral power of the clergy over the people."

Rev. George Ide, D.D., of the Baptist church, Springfield, Mass., says:—

"For more than forty years I have been a total abstinence man from all that can intoxicate. By personal endeavor and moral suasion we have accomplished great results. Under the prohibitory law intemperance has increased ever since. Every effort has been made to enforce the law. I can only say that in Springfield the prohibitory law does not stop intemperance, does not suppress the sale of liquor; that under every effort to enforce it the sale of liquor is increasing; and intemperance among our young men is much more prevalent than formerly."

Rev. J. A. Bolles, D.D., of the Protestant Episcopal church, Boston, says:—

"I think it (license) is a greater deal better for the end to be accomplished. I mean to say that prohibition only increases the evil; it leads to more drinking, and demoralises the community on the question of drunkenness as a sin."

Now, sir, these are the opinions of well-known temperance men and expressed after many years of experience. The Government returns for Prince Edward Island for 1878, the year before the passing of the Scott Act there, show a consumption of 10,924 gallons of whiskey. In 1882, under the Scott Act, according to the same returns, the consumption was 19,366 gallons, and in 1883 it increased to 22,606 gallons, or more than double what it was under the license system.

The Stratford Times says:—"We make the assertion boldly, from knowledge and facts in our possession, that to-day there is more whiskey drunk in Huron, Bruce, Simcoe and Oxford, where the Act is in force, than there was previous to its adoption. Ale, beer and lager cannot be had, but as a Scotch friend from Exeter told us on Saturday last, 'Ye can hae a bath in whiskey any day or nicht in the week.'"

Now, sir, I lay these facts before the ratepayers for their calm and unprejudiced consideration, being, myself, one of those who supported the Dunkin Act when it was submitted here. We all know what a miserable failure that Act was, and I am convinced, after having made honest inquiry from reliable persons, as to the effect of the Scott Act where it is in force, that the cause of temperance will not be promoted by its adoption here. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

I am yours,

ONE WHO SUPPORTED THE DUNKIN ACT.
Peterborough, Sept. 21st, 1885.

The Big Things of America.

An English characteristic, strongly developed and even grotesquely caricatured in America, is the love of big things, which is, after all, a failing akin to virtue, and which will guide America into fair pastures after adversity and Mr. Matthew Arnold shall have chastened and purified Philistia. At present Americans are satisfied with things because they are large, and if not large they must have cost a great deal of money. * * * If a stranger were to ask an intelligent and well informed American what, in his opinion, was best worth seeing in the United States, he would probably say the pork packing establishments at Chicago. To this loathsome favor, like Yorick's skull, all must come. The young beauty on her honeymoon tour, the statesman and tourist, are all drawn by some mysterious fascination to the shambles. They watch the unfortunate swine hurry up the broad way which leads to destruction; in absorbing horror, they see the throats of the victims cut and the descent of the victim, living or dead, it matters little which, into the boiling sea below, the scraping, disemboweling, and all the revolting details of the toilet of the dead. Few are permitted to escape the spectacle. Lord Coleridge, carried to the shambles by his friends of the Chicago bar, after having witnessed a few executions, begged to be allowed to retire, as otherwise he should be unable to eat sausage again. Whether Matthew Arnold saw and reflected on the mystery I know not, but we will hope that the apostle of culture refused to follow this worse than Ashantee custom. When I declined absolutely to witness the pig-killing my Chicago acquaintances were distinctly ruffled.—Sir Lepel Henry Griffin.

Washington is a remarkably religious city. Statistics show 180 churches, with 49,351 members. Of this total membership, however, about 21,000 are in the colored churches.

A little Indian girl named Lucy-Afraid-of-the-Soldiers is attending the Government Indian school at Hampton, Va. When Lucy grows up she will probably not be so "afraid of the soldiers" as her name would imply.

WHAT ABOUT VACCINATION?

Whether the task be a pleasant one or not, the time has come when the town authorities should turn their attention to the matter of vaccination. The example of Ashburnham is a good one to follow. The village fathers have recognized their plain duty and have taken steps to insure a thorough vaccination of the population of the place. They have generously provided funds to enable the health officer to vaccinate all who are too poor or penurious to stand the expense. The result will be that in case of an outbreak of smallpox in this vicinity, the residents of Ashburnham will be pretty thoroughly protected.

Is it not time that the authorities of this town were doing something in this direction? The danger of the people is not yet over. The dreadful disease in Montreal is increasing in violence and virulence instead of diminishing, and the daily death roll is growing larger. Toronto was infected by direct importation of the disease, and Port Hope suffered from another case of direct importation. There is no means for guarding against exposure, but vaccination is a sure protection. There is no doubt that the practice of the great discovery of Dr. Jenner is of the greatest benefit. In the epidemic of 1881 the returns show the following results for London:—Out of every 3,440 deaths, 3,350 were deaths of those who had not been vaccinated. That is, out of every thirty-six persons who died by smallpox thirty-five had never been vaccinated and one had been vaccinated. During the Franco-German war the French lost 13,500 men by smallpox, while the Germans, who had all been re-vaccinated in barracks, lost only 265 men from the same disease. With these facts and similar ones, which might be produced to an unlimited number, the course of action is plainly indicated. In every community there are many persons who do not act even when they are convinced that action is called for, and, therefore, it is the duty of the authorities to institute action. Will our town fathers take the hint and act while action will be effective? It will be too late to lock the stable after the steed has disappeared. Montreal did so, and she is now reaping the result in a scourge that is sweeping away her citizens by hundreds. If the authorities had insisted on vaccination there is no earthly doubt that the present visitation would have been confined to a few isolated cases and have been speedily stamped out. We have many among us who cannot very well afford the expense of vaccination, and these the town should assist in the manner Ashburnham has done. While there are abundant reasons against delay, there is not one reason, nor even an excuse, in favour of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Senate of Canada cost for the late session $175,000. It sat just eighty-seven days, so that the outlay was $2,000 a day, or an average of $1,000 an hour while in session. The Brockville Recorder asks, is it worth it?

The Privy Council judging by their position on the Connors case, cannot save Riel. The respite of his sentence is, therefore, says the Kingston Whig, a political dodge, the postponement of the evil day for a little while longer.

Growth of Methodism.

The Methodist Conferences in Great Britain and Ireland forthe current year having been held, it is interesting to note the present numerical state of each of the denominations. The following figures give the return of fully accredited members:—

Educational Notes.

The chief engineer of the geological department has, on the recommendation of Jas. McMullen, M. P., Mount Forest, forwarded to the Listowel High School nearly 300 mineral specimens to be the property of the High School. The donation is very acceptable, and will be found to be a great aid to the study of science.

For the examinations in December next, candidates in drawing may submit to the examiner's books 2 and 3 of the drawing course for public schools. For June 1886, 3, 4 or 5 will be accepted. After that date it is intended to take the numbers prescribed by the regulations for the fourth class.

Beetle vs. Alligator.

An alligator not more than six inches long is properly housed at 190 West Seventh street. Early last Saturday evening an enormous beetle flew into the house where the alligator is being entertained, and fell to the floor. One of the occupants of the house scooped up the intruder on her fan and flirted it off into the aquarium. The water in this ornamental vessel is very shallow, so much so that when his alligatorship stretches his six inches along the bottom his back and tail are not submerged. Luckily for the beetle he landed well upon the alligator's tail, high and dry, so high that the 'gator couldn't double up and nab him. The reptile lashed the water, and his contortions described nearly all the curved letters of the alphabet, but to no purpose; the beetle hung on and appeared to enjoy the ride.

During a moment when the alligator was at rest the rider appeared to let go his hold to secure one more reliable, when quicker than lightning, he was shaken off and was floundering in the water. Instantly the 'gator whirled to secure his prey, when his tail again touched the drowning insect, and again there was a passenger aboard elated over his narrow escape. Not contented with the perilous position from which a moment before he had been thrown, the beetle began crawling up the back of his enemy to what looked like more secure quarters. With the sagacity of a fox the reptile now laid quiet, evidently biding the time when the death-walk would be sure to end. Slowly the beetle crawled, fastening his feelers one by one into the youthful scales of his enemy. The 'gator moved not a muscle. He did not even breathe, while his eyes shot forth the malignant hatred of a basilisk.

The beetle finally reached the ugly-shaped head, which was held up well out of the water. In a twinkling the head was ducked, the beetle was again in the water, and in another instant the incipient teeth of the reptile had crushed down through the stiff-cased wings of the bug, and the struggle was over. The alligator made no effort to devour the elephantine bug. He simply held on to him, half of the corpse in his mouth and the other half in the water, and not until an hour or two after daylight yesterday morning did he spit out the mouthful and evince a desire for his usual breakfast of half-dead flies.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Parting Lovers.

Winding upward rose a slender vine tree,
Winding upward round the fort of Buna.
Ah, no vine tree was it winding upward,
But a loving maiden round her lover!
Early had the twain begun their loving,
Loving ever since their days of childhood;
How they had to say farewell forever.

To the maiden thus the stripling murmured:
"Three broad rivers, maiden, run before thee;
High the third the garden green is growing;
In the garden blooms a tree of roses;
From that rose tree pluck a rose, O maiden,
Lay it near thy heart, within thy bosom;
Faster than the rose leaves fade within it,
Faster fades my heart for thee, beloved!"

To the stripling thus the maiden answered:
"Three high mountains, youth, arise before thee;
From the third there flows a quiet fountain;
High the fountain lies a rock of marble;
On the marble stands a silver chalice;
In the silver chalice lies a snowflake.
Bear away the snowflake from the beaker;
Lay it near thy heart, upon thy bosom;
Faster than the flake of snow dissolveth,
Faster melts my heart for thee, beloved!"

A FATEFUL RIDE.

CHAPTER I.

"Madeline, I will not let you go on in this manner; it is not ladylike, it is not proper," said Miss Ayre warmly.

"Susanna, you are an old maid," retorted Madeline Ayre complacently.

Miss Ayre flushed up. If there were an accusation she hated, it was that of old-maidism, perhaps because it was one impossible to contradict.

"I am a lady," she said hotly, "and I know what is proper, and what is wrong And I maintain that this harum-scarum scampering about by yourself at all hours, in all places, is vulgar, fast, and anything but to be admired."

"I don't want to be admired," said pretty Madeline, gathering up her riding-habit. "I only want to be let alone, and do as I like. Fast, Susanna! Well, Bey is fast, I grant—do you know I came across the moor in ten minutes the other day from the white tree to the top of the lane? But vulgar? I am sure you make a mistake there, dear old sister."

There were certainly no traces of vulgarity in the pretty voice and refined face of the speaker. Thorough-bred, perhaps, would have described Madeline Ayre better than any term.

"I don't know what we are to do with you, if you make such mistakes as that. Susanna," said the girl, laughing, as she bent her face to her sister's. "Calling me vulgar indeed."

"It is vulgar for a young lady to go riding all over the country alone as you do every day. You ought to take a groom with you. Some day you will have a fearful adventure on those lonely moors, or somewhere," said Miss Ayre with great solemnity.

"Oh, which day do you think?" laughed Madeline with mock alarm.

"And you talk very scornfully of old maids, but I think you will be one yourself if you don't alter very much," snappishly.

"Well, if I am as nice a one as you, I shan't mind," conciliatorily.

"Men don't like fast girls; at least, the men worth having don't. You will find that out when too late. Lance Gorden would like you much better if you were quieter and more ladylike in your behavior, I know."

Madeline had reached the door, and was on the point of turning its handle, but she swept round when her sister said that, and raising her little hand haughtily, asked, the while she colored deepest crimson:

"What has Captain Gorden to do with my actions, I should like to know?"

"Don't be silly, child. Of course he will have everything to do with them presently, if you don't disgust him by some outrageously foolish action. If you would give up flirting (it is very unladylike to flirt as you did last night with Mr. Charsley), and all the other tomboy practices I am always correcting you for——"

"Captain Gorden ought to be very flattered if he heard you. Well, Susanna, I can't keep Bey waiting any longer. I won't go far, dear, really, only just a gallop round and be back before dark."

She tripped downstairs and out to the stable-yard, where Bey, a beautiful brown horse, looked round with delight when he saw his mistress approaching. Lightly mounting and gathering up the reins, Madeline smiled as she cantered down the drive.

"I should be a wretched being without my rides, and Bey would be a wretched animal too. It is such a fad of Susanna's this nonsense about my going out alone, when I have ridden all over here alone at any time since I was six years old. I wonder who put it into her fidgety head; not Lance Gorden, I hope. I should not like to do anything he greatly disapproved of; but I can't be ordered about before marriage," with a blush no one was near to see, "that is very certain, whatever kind of a slave I may develop into after. Does he care for me, I wonder—oh, I wonder? Does he dream I care for him? I hope not—oh, I hope not!

Thinking such all engrossing thoughts, Madeline galloped farther than she intended before she remembered how late it was.

Recalled to time by the waning light, she turned sharply, and, thinking of her promise to Miss Ayre, hard and fast she rode through the wintry gloaming homewards—past the stunted plantations and dying bracken, across the wide-spreading dreary moor, meeting no creature, hearing no sound but distant voices of cattle and dogs.

No road could possibly be more lonely, but as Madeline had said, she had known it intimately since childhood, and she knew no fear.

But suddenly—she was near the old white tree, and the bracken was thick about there—Bey swerved and shied, turning with a sharpness that would have unseated a less practised rider, and rearing a little as Madeline tightened her rein.

Ere she could get over her astonishment at such unusual conduct on the good brown's part, she espied a man's figure rising from the side of the road, looking gaunt and startling in the uncertain light, and as she espied him he darted forward and laid a powerful hand upon her bridle.

Then for, perhaps, the first time in her life, Madeline Ayre felt afraid; the hour and place were so very dreary, the attack so unexpected, herself so helpless. Though trembling inwardly, outwardly she put a brave face upon the situation.

She drew up her pretty figure proudly, and said in a voice that was scrupulously calm:

"What do you want?"

"Food!" said the man curtly, and as he spoke he looked up with hungry, demanding eyes. "I want food, and I will have it—for I am starving."

"But I have no food about me," said Madeline, but I have a little money, luckily," drawing out her purse from her saddle-pocket. "You are welcome to that if you like," handing it to him.

"Money is of no use to me; it is food I want. You can fetch me some if you will: you are on horseback and [illegible] ings are not so very far away; unless you wish to have my death upon your conscience, bring me something to sustain life—wine, meat, bread, without delay."

"What are you doing here? Who are you?" she asked, bending down a little to see his face more closely.

"Never mind that. Will you do as I ask you?"

"I can do nothing while you hold me prisoner like this."

He looked up at her quiet face with a rough admiration in his gaze.

"You are a plucky girl," said he. "If I tell you who and what I am, will you swear to keep my secret and do what I ask you?"

"I can make no terms until you set me free."

He looked at her again, then released her bridle and stood aside so that she could have escaped had she chosen, but she stood perfectly still, looking at the powerful figure and strange haggard face by her side.

"Now tell me who you are," she said.

"First give me your word to keep my confidence and to help me."

"I give you my word I will not betray you, and I will help you if I can."

"You can." Then drawing nearer her, and glancing round, though no living creature was near, "I am a convict," he said. "I escaped some time ago—no matter how or when—and I have been wandering on these moors for days, hiding like a rabbit, creeping, burrowing, dodging. I have eaten nothing for thirty-six hours, and as I say, I am starving. For the love of humanity bring me food. Some day, perhaps, I may repay you. If I can keep up my strength for a little longer I shall escape from England safely. I have plenty of friends at a distance; but it is needless to waste time over this. Will you give a starving fellow-creature help for charity's sake?"

"I will," said the girl, touched by the earnest desperate appeal. "I will ride home and fetch you what I can. I trust you, you see, implicitly."

"You may trust me. You were in my power a moment ago. Come back here; you will find me by this old white tree," said the convict calmly.

Madeline started off at a gallop and reached home without misadventure.

Telling the groom who took her horse that she should want him again directly, she crept in the back entrance, and told the cook at once to pack up bread and meat and wine in a large satchel.

"Be as quick as you can, Barnes, and put in plenty—as much as ever the thing will hold. Stuff it full, I don't mind how heavy it is."

"But la', Miss Madeline, you aren't going off on one of your charity freaks at this time o' day? Why, miss, it's almost dark. Let one of the men take it—do. What would Miss Susanna say?"

"Miss Susanna is not to know anything about it, so she won't say anything. Dark! Nonsense, Barnes, it is not half dark outside."

"I am cooking dinner, Miss Madeline. I hope you won't be late; it does spoil fish so to keep it back. It is almost time now, miss."

"I won't be late. They need not wait for me if I am," said the young lady, catching up the heavy bag and hurrying out to her horse.

But as she rode through the gate, a gentleman on foot was coming in, and with a wild wave of color over her face, Madeline would have passed him with a bow, but he stopped her.

"How do you do, Miss Ayre?" he said, standing—fortunately as the girl thought—on the side where the satchel was invisible, and holding her hand in a close warm pressure that made the blushes cover her face again. "You are not going out now?"

"Only for a little time, just a little way, Captain Gorden, I assure you," with an uneasy little laugh. "You won't find my absence insupportably long."

"I am coming to dine at your own invitation," he said gravely.

"Yes, I know," impatiently. "Don't keep me now and I shall be back in lots of time for dinner. My father and Susanna are at home. Please go in and——"

"Do your father and Miss Ayre know you are just starting on a ride?"

"Captain Gorden, you ought to have been a horrid cross-examining counsel. I am not starting on, I am just finishing a ride, and you are delaying me unconscionably. Au revoir."

"If you go, let me come with you," he pleaded, laying another sudden hand upon her bridle. "It really is too late for a young lady to go scampering about these lonely roads by herself."

"I am not going to scamper. And how do you know I am going all alone?" she said mischievously, bending her laughing dark eyes upon him.

"I do not know it," he said swiftly, drawing back. "I beg your pardon. Perhaps," with a pain in his tones that she did not read aright, "I am delaying an appointment?"

"You are—a very important appointment that I am very anxious to keep, Captain Gorden," laughing still as she leaned nearer him.

"I should judge so," he returned calmly, "from your keeping it in this fashion against all your friends' wishes."

"Are you one of those well-wishing, but slightly, I should say, interfering friends?" she questioned mischievously.

"I am certainly one whose wishes are disregarded."

"But by what right, I wish to know," her laughter was gone now, and hauteur was stealing into her tones, "do you expect them to be regarded?"

"I have no right," he said coldly, and with a bow passed on.

Putting her horse into a gallop, Miss Ayre soliloquised, with tears in the proud dark eyes—tears that would never have been permitted there if daylight had been abroad:

"I wish there were no such things as men; so odious they are and trying. So vexing, and exacting, and unreasonable, and disagreeable. Keeping me ever so long there in the cold just to quarrel with me; as if it mattered to him what I do, or do not choose to do. I have a very good mind not to speak to him again this evening. Making such unkind speeches, just because I am going to feed a poor starving man. He might have guessed it was something of the kind.

Considering that she had carefully concealed the satchel from the chance of Captain Gorden's eyes beholding it, that escaped convicts are not things of everyday life, and that she herself had raised the young man's ire by laughingly arousing his jealousy, Miss Ayre was a little hard on the young officer, and a little easy upon her own share of the disagreement.

She galloped on without stopping until the old white tree was reached, then she reined in her panting steed, and looked for the strange man she had come to meet.

CHAPTER II.

He stepped forward from behind the tree, and opened the bag she gave him greedily.

Drawing out the bottle of wine he struck off its neck with a blow, and put it to his lips, she yet lingering and watching him curiously.

[illegible] ing a deep breath, looked at her.

"That gives me new life, new hope, new energy," he said. "Young lady, I thank you—you have done me a greater service than you can quite understand. I have no payment but thanks to give you to-day, but some day it may be in my power to repay you a hundred-fold." He raised his head with a kind of pride curious to behold in his worn face and ragged figure. "And I shall not forget my debt then. Will you tell me your name?"

"Madeline Ayre," she said simply.

"And again, will you give me your word that no breath of this encounter shall pass your lips for, say six months from now?"

"I have given it, but I will promise again if you like."

"You are a noble, splendid woman," the man said, with a sudden fervor in his tone; and seizing her hand he would have pressed it to his lips, but she shrank away with uncontrollable fear.

To be charitable to, and be interested in, such a man was one thing, but to have her hand caressed, or even touched by him—a convict—was another.

She shuddered, and drew it back.

He noted the gesture, and a look—not of resentment, but of pain—passed across his rugged features, softening them strangely.

"You shrink from me," he said, "and with reason, for I told you I was convicted of crime, but if I vow to you that I was convicted guiltlessly, that though the evidence was conclusive to twelve ignorant men, I was innocent of the charge brought against me—that my punishment was undeserved, and my escape the first bit of justice that has been allowed me, will you believe my word? I could have no motive in deceiving you, a weak woman, whom, in all probability, I may never see again. You have given me all the worldly aid you can, but it would be a wonderful help to me—a deeper comfort, and solace, and encouragement than you can imagine"—his harsh voice trembled, his haggard eyes, as they sought hers, were intense in their pleading—"if you, who have already shown me compassion and trust, would let me hold your hand for an instant, and tell me honestly that you believe me innocent!"

The Daily Examiner.

MONDAY, SEPT. 21, 1885.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

To Subscribers.

Subscribers to the DAILY EVENING EXAMINER will greatly oblige us by reporting promptly any neglect in the delivery of their paper.

Thanks.

Mr. Duff, the superintendent of Hazel Brae, takes this opportunity of thanking the ladies who devoted their time and energies to make the garden social of last week so great a success. The result being an addition to the funds of the Home of nearly $100 the amount required to support two children for one year.

Enforcing the Scott Act.

The undersigned, on behalf of the Scott Act Executive Committee, hereby announce their intention, in case the Scott Act is adopted, to employ a first-class Inspector to enforce the strict observance of the prohibitory provisions of the Act, and to prosecute to the full limits of the law any infraction thereof.

GEO. A. COX, President,
J. W. FLAVELLE, Treasurer,
GEO. E. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

A Challenge to Hotel Men.

The employes of the Oriental Hotel challenge the employes of the Grand Central, or any other hotel in town, to play a game of baseball at a time and place to be mutually agreed upon. If no single hotel is willing to meet this challenge, the Orientals will play a team from any two hotels in Peterborough. The employes of any hotel desirous of accepting this challenge are requested to communicate with R. Smith, clerk at the Oriental.

Complimentary.

We received the following note from Fenelon Falls on Saturday morning. It speaks for itself.

Mr. J. Stratton :—

DEAR SIR,—Enclosed I send you $1 for renewal of my subscription to Daily EXAMINER for another three months, the present "sub" expiring on the 20th inst. The exemption, Scott Act, dynamite, sporting and other news items so spicily "dished up" in Peterborough's "go-a-head daily" makes it a welcome visitor to former residents of the "Plate Glass City." Success to your efforts, and respectfully yours,

J. A. P.

Cheap Excursion to Chicago and Return.

A train of first-class coaches will leave the Grand Trunk station, Peterborough, on Friday and Saturday, the 25th and 26th of September, for Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukie and Cincinnatti. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukie and Cincinnatti and return only $12, to Detroit and return, only $6.00; good for 10 days. This excursion runs over the Wabash and Baltimore and Ohio Railways, being 26 miles shorter than any other line from Toronto to Chicago. Secure your tickets from the old reliable ticket agent, Mr. Thos. Menzies, Peterborough.

The Ten Gallon Order-in-Council and the Scott Act.

This Order-in-Council has been misunderstood by a good many persons, and editorial articles in several journals—notably the Globe and Christian Guardian, whose writers seemed to have shared in the general misunderstanding—misled many more into believing that the Order-in-Council would totally destroy the usefulness of the Scott Act. The order makes no change in any clause, section, or sub-section of the Act. It simply changes a regulation regarding bonded spirits, by reducing the quantity which can be taken out of bond by the distiller from forty to ten gallons. Under the former state of affairs a purchaser of ten gallons of liquor would be compelled to give his order to a wholesale dealer, who, in his turn, purchased the larger quantity from the distiller. Now, the ten-gallon purchaser can go to the distiller direct. In Scott Act counties the sale of liquors is under the same stringent regulations as before. It must be borne in mind that there is no change whatever in the law affecting the bringing of liquor into or selling liquor in Scott Act counties. The Act is absolutely unimpaired by the new regulation.

THE BANKERS SUCCUMB TO THE MERCHANTS.

The bankers on Friday afternoon had to give way to the victorious merchants on the diamond field. Their fielding, which won them a game from the telegraphers, was on this occasion weak, and in the second and sixth innings cost them ten and eight runs respectively which lost the game for them. The following is the

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR SHEVLIN.

The one hour contest between Scott and Shevlin took place at the Lansdowne Rink on Friday night and attracted a large [illegible] of the most keenly contested races ever seen in this town. For the first six miles, which were covered in half an hour, the men kept close together, each alternately leading by a few feet, and when fifty-five minutes had passed both men were going well, Scott slightly ahead. He had the misfortune to fall at the turn just after, and Shevlin, making the most of his advantage, gained a good lead. Scott stuck to the race gamely and in spite of his accident was only a few feet behind Shevlin at the finish. The distance covered in the hour was about 12 miles. Scott's friends still have confidence in his ability, and another race is among the probabilities.

Lacrosse.

THE COMING CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH.

On Wednesday the Peterboroughs will be called upon to defend their recently recovered championship against the Cannington lacrosse club, who are coming here to compete for the coveted honor. The Cannington's have shown themselves a strong team in many a hard fought field, and will, no doubt, make a determined attempt to carry away the championship medal, while our own boys may be relied on to make a stubborn resistance, so that a lively and exciting game of lacrosse is sure to ensue. The club have succeeded in engaging the grounds of the Athletic Association in Ashburnham, so that everyone will have an opportunity of seeing this game, and as there cannot be many more matches during the season, there is no doubt that the capacity of that portion of the field devoted to spectators will be taxed to its utmost.

Meeting Withdrawn.

To enable the electors to hear both sides of the Scott Act thoroughly discussed, the Scott Act association have withdrawn the meeting advertised for Wednesday night in consideration of the N. L. T. U. consenting to the Rev. B. B. Keefer occupying one hour at their meeting in the skating rink on that evening.

First Prize.

Mr. Joseph Redmond, of Otonabee, was fortunate in securing first prize on Durham bull calf under one year, at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition. A heifer was ruled out because it was born on the ocean and therefore not Canadian born. This seems a little technicality on which to cut a deserving animal out of a prize.

Mr. Nelson intends having an auction sale of his stock early this fall, and will spend the remainder of his days in ease and luxury.

Change of Date.

The annual show of the Ballieboro Agricultural Society, which comprises the townships of South Monaghan, Cavan, Hope, Hamilton, North Monaghan, will be held at Ballieboro on Wednesday and Thursday, the 7th and 8th of October. The date has been changed on account of the previously announced dates conflicting with the Millbrook show. The management are making every effort to establish this new society on a sound and permanent basis, and an excellent exhibition may be expected.

Scott Act in the Churches.

The pulpits of the George street and Charlotte street Methodist Churches and of St. Paul's Church were yesterday given up to Scott Act sermons. At Charlotte street in the evening Rev. F. H. Wallace preached a very impressive sermon, taking as his text Genesis, 4th chapter and 9th verse, "Am I my brother's keeper." At the conclusion of the sermon a prayer meeting was held, during which short addresses were given by Mayor Cox, Mr. Morrow, Mr. Hughes and Mr. Sawyer.

Rev. W. A. McKay, of Woodstock, occupied the pulpit of St. Paul's both morning and evening. At George street in the evening Rev. I. Tovell preached on "a sad man, a mad man, and a glad people" to a large congregation. Leaflets by Professor Geo. Foster, M. P., on the responsibility of the churches in temperance, were distributed in most of the churches.

South Monaghan.

The annual exhibition of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society will be held at Centreville, on the 12th and 13th of October.

The second annual harvest festival will be held in the Agricultural Hall, Centreville, on Friday next, the 25th, when a good time may be looked forward to. There will be in the course of the afternoon a big spread in the Hall. A lacrosse and football match in the grounds, and a grand concert at night. The Peterborough brass band will be in attendance during the afternoon. Festival commences at 2 o'clock p. m.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

A SEND-OFF.

Launching a Lacrosseman Into Matrimonial Life.

Presentation to Mr. Will. A. Sanderson.

A number of members of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club might have been observed last evening hanging around the door of Mr. W. A. Sanderson's jewellery store with a pertinacity which, had it not been for their well known character, might have led a passer-by to believe they had sinister designs on some of Will's valuable stock. Any such conjectures, however, would have been wide of the mark, for although the loiterers had designs, they were not sinister, nor were they directed to any part of his goods or chattels, but rather against his person. It had leaked out that he was about to take unto himself a wife, and when about nine o'clock in the evening he made his appearance he was, much to his surprise, laid hands on by the patient loiterers and carried boldly upstairs to his room. Before he had time to recover from his surprise Mr. Jas. Sheehy, on behalf of the lacrosse boys, read the following address and presented Mr. Sanderson with a handsome China tea set.

ADDRESS.

To W. A. Sanderson, Second Vice-President of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club:

DEAR SIR,—Since, in the course of human events, you have come to a recognition, and are on the eve of a realization of the fact, that in the game of life as well as in the game of lacrosse, "team play" is the most effective, your fellow members, who have long enjoyed the pleasure of delightful association in lacrosse circles, desire on the occasion of your marriage to recognize in a formal manner the pleasure they have derived from such associations, and the profit and advantage the club has gained from your active connection with it. As a pioneer member you were concerned in its organization, and through all its chances and changes, all its triumphs and reverses, you have been its staunchest friend and one of its most active members.

We all remember and recall, with a deeper feeling than mere gratification, the manner in which you captained the team of the club in the gallant struggle for the Gildersleeve Cup, and how earnestly you assisted in defending its possession. Nor do we forget the help you gave the club in winning, retaining, and regaining the Central District championship medal. And when the requirements of a growing business demanded your closer attention, and you were compelled to sever your connection as an active participant in the game, you have never lost your interest in the success of the club, and we feel sure that a triumph of the club to-day stirs your heart as deeply as when you wielded a crosse, and captained the team to victory.

As a recognition of these valuable services as a reminder of pleasant associations, as a pledge of future friendship, and as a token of the good wishes every member of the club will ever fell towards you and yours, we ask your acceptance of this tea set. May it beautify a happy home, reflect the light of domestic happiness, and be a perpetual memento of the fervent wishes for happiness that follow you in your home life and relations from every member of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club.

Signed on behalf of the P. L. C.,

H. LEBRUN, President.
R. H. FORTYE, Vice-President.

Mr. Sanderson was so much taken by surprise that he was for a moment unable to respond, but recovering himself replied in suitable terms, expressing the warm interest he had always taken in the club, and the feelings of friendship he entertained for its members, and thanking them for their handsome present. At the conclusion of the pleasing little ceremony the whole party adjourned to Chamberlain's hotel, where a supper had been provided for the party. The head of the table was taken by Mr. H. LeBrun, and after justice had been done to the viands, a convivial time was spent in toast, speech and song, everyone present being called on to contribute. The party broke up at a late hour with reiterated wishes for Mr. Sanderson's happiness in married life.

The Scott Act.

Edward Carswell Addresses a Meeting at the Opera House.

Standing room was at a premium in Bradburn's Opera House last evening when Edward Carswell, the Canadian Gough, addressed a meeting in favour of the Scott Act. The chair was taken by Mr. D. W. Dumble, and the usual representation of the ministry occupied seats on the platform. After the customary devotional and musical exercises, Mr. Carswell took the platform amid vociferous applause. He began his speech by referring to the old-time meetings in favor of the Dunkin Act, and held that although that piece of legislation had not proved a success, it had led to the enactment of the present one, and had been of much service in that should be a success. He said that though people might grow weary and faint in the temperance movement, the cause itself could not die, for it was God's own cause, and he believed if we did not remove the great evil of intemperance God would remove us to make room for a people who would. He deprecated the idea of placing any other interest in opposition to the salvation of souls, and believed there were enough people in this county who would be willing to sacrifice their own interests for the general good to carry the Act, but he did not believe anyone would be in the end injured by it. It was a simple question of and the Liberal Temperance Union with all their sophistry of so-called scientific argument could not make any right minded man believe otherwise. They had complained that the advocates of the Act had an advantage over them because their doctrines were advocated in the school house and church, while the opponents of the Act could not use those agencies. And why could they not? Simply because the liquor traffic was a curse to the country and everyone knew it. He drew a graphic picture of the evils arising from moderation principles as compared with total abstinence and pleaded for the protection of our homes. He combatted the argument of the Act being an interference with the rights of the people by showing how in Montreal, while suffering from the scourge of smallpox, the interests of some people had to suffer from the regulations framed for the benefit of others, and asked if this giant evil of intemperance was not a greater scourge and more costly to the world than any pestilence could be. It destroyed not only the victim, but those connected with him. He concluded his speech, which was replete with humorous anecdotes, by a stirring appeal for all present to turn out and vote as their conscience bade them.

The chairman addressed the meeting at the close of Mr. Carswells's speech, making a powerful appeal to the audience to cast aside all mere selfish interests, and viewing the question from the broad stand of what would be in the common interest of Christianity and humanity to obey the impulses of their conscience, and vote for what they believed to be right. At the close of the meeting a show of hands of those in favour of the Act was called for, and the hall became at once a sea of waving hands.

Cheap Excursion to Chicago.

There will be a cheap excursion to Detroit and Chicago on Friday and Saturday, September 25th and 26th, from Peterborough, on the G. T. R., in connection with the Detroit and Chicago short line. This is the shortest and quickest route from Canada to Chicago. Passengers will arrive in Chicago at 7 o'clock on the following morning. Pullman palace sleepers on night trains. Secure your tickets from Mr. Thos. Menzies, the old, reliable ticket agent, who will accompany the excursion and see that all are provided with good accommodation. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukee and Cincinnati and return only $12; to Detroit and return, only $6.00; good for ten days.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

CORRESPONDENCE.

(The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.)

Prof. Smith vs. Canon Farrar.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—Notwithstanding your columns are at present crowded, I crave your indulgence for a little space, for that subject which, more perhaps now than ever before, is agitating the public mind; moreover, I crave that space at this time, because in a day or two the struggle will be over.

During the present Scott Act campaign in the county of Peterborough, speakers for and against the Act have addressed large public gatherings, and prominent among them is Prof. Goldwin Smith, so as to be brief I will confine myself to his representation, or rather misrepresentation, of Canon Farrar's

Nearly every argument advanced by Prof. Smith and his colleagues, when honestly examined will be seen to be as much against them as is the Very Rev. Canon Farrar. But perhaps Prof. Smith will answer that he did not distinctly state that Canon Farrar was on his side; if he did not in so many words, that is what he implied, and also the view he wished his hearers to receive, if not why did he refer to him at all? and to support this, he, Prof. Smith, told the large audience assembled in the P. C. A. Hall, in Lakefield, last Thursday (17th inst.) that Canon Farrar was to be his guest next week. Why did he mention it? Was it not to lead the credulous to believe that Canon Farrar, a man truly respected and loved, not only by the Church of England, of which he is an honored member, but also by all evangelical Christians, was either opposed to total abstinence, or, at least, held views similar to his own?

I have before me some of Canon Farrar's sermons and speeches upon the question in hand, and in order to present the matter fairly, will ask Canon Farrar to step into the witness box and we will hear his evidence and the intelligent listener can judge for himself whether the witness is on the side of beer and wine or total abstinence:

"I am bidden to speak to you about temperance, the point of view from which I shall speak is that of TOTAL ABSTINENCE. It is, I know, the unpopular view, the deprecated view, the despised view. By taking it I rank myself among those of whom some speak as unpractical bigots and ignorant fanatics. But, because I believe it in the present need to be the only effective remedy for an otherwise hopeless evil, therefore I take it undeterred.

"Are you a man? are you a Christian? have you a heart? have you any human pity? have you one spark of nobleness left in you, if you can look on them with indifferent acquiescence? And if you are not indifferent, what can you do? Be temperate! My brethren, I should not think that worth saying to you; I should not have been asked to come 400 miles to tell you that. In this particular struggle, temperance is worth nothing. No! I come to ask you for something much more. I come to plead with you for a perfect, a certain, a final remedy.

"Consider, then, my brethren, whether God calls you or no to help in removing from your country its deadliest curse; but this I say to you, that if He does, you can only do it effectually by being an abstainer."

Here, then, we have a direct shot from a total abstinence cannon; it surely has hit King Alcohol right in the heart, as he was advancing in all his corpulent proportions, with a bottle of wine in one hand and a bottle of mild beer in the other, to advocate temperance in mild drinks. No, Professor Smith, you cannot make us believe, after listening to the worthy Canon's testimony, that he is on your side, for the language is not only strong, but is so plain that it is incapable of being misunderstood.

But to the total abstinence position, Prof. Smith advances plausible objections and scriptural arguments, and these are not unknown to his friend, but I must also add, opponent, Canon Farrar, for he calls those very objections and arguments

"COBWEBS OF MISERABLE SOPHISTRY."

"Now, those who argue with a man in favor of that which he likes, in favor of pleasant custom, in favor of a popular practice, argue with him in shorthand; but he who would run counter to vulgar customs, he who is not afraid 'to smite the hoary head of inveterate abuse,' must be prepared to face at the first stage violence, at the second ridicule, and at the third—for we have already stormed those two redoubts—the heaped facines of plausible objection. We are told, forsooth, that total abstinence is morose, that it is Manichæan, that it trenches on the province of the baptismal vow, that it invades the true functions of the Church, that it is a violation of Scripture. These cobwebs of miserable sophistry, had time permitted, I would have gladly swept away; but I must conclude, and among many and pressing grounds on which it might well be, if not your direct and positive duty, at least your strength and your safety, and your honor, to deny yourself an infinitesimal pleasure to further an infinite gain."

In one part of Prof. Smith's address he advocated moral influence and education as an additional remedy for intemperance. Here, again, we turn to his friend and recognized authority and listen to what he has to say. Canon Farrar, will you please give us your opinion: "I will urge upon you the duty of self-denial for the sake of others. If you are fond of drink abandon it before it be too late for your own sake; if you are not fond of it, it will cost you nothing to give it up. We are all face to face with a hideous, a degrading, an enormous evil.

The use of that deadly, peculiar, and wholly unnecessary substance called alcohol, is so far inseparable from the abuse, that where the individual use is, there the national abuse will be. Unrestricted liquor traffic will, to the end of time, mean for myriads intense temptation; temptation means drunkenness; drunkenness means degredation, horror, ruin, crime. You are a Christian? Will you give up a needless luxury to help in saving others from a blasting curse? You are a patriot. Will you give up a poor tickling of the palate an unwholesome tingling of the brain, to rescue your nation from a blighting degredation? If you do not help, at least be ashamed to hinder. Call not those fanatics who would clear their consciences from every taint of so dangerous a leaven. Do not gild a self-indulgence with the Ophir-gold of Holy Scripture."

MODERATE DRINKING.

I do certainly claim for Prof. Smith that he cannot have read or known Canon Farrar's views of temperance or moderate drinking, or else he would never bring his name before a Christian audience and represent Canon Farrar as agreeing with the Liberal Temperance Union, a society that is desperate in its opposition to the total abstinence principle of the Dominion Alliance. Again we ask the Canon to fire another shot and we will call upon all Prof. Smith's followers to heed well the report.

"Not long ago there was, in a certain colliery, an explosion, by which 400 miners were suddenly hurled amid shattered ruins into horrible death. It was caused by a single miner who had opened his safety-lamp (with a duplicate key) to light his pipe. Then after likening intemperance to fire damp, he continues, "The fatal, and the fatally common key of that safety-lamp is what is called moderate drinking."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kindness in granting me so much of your valuable space, I close by asking all those who are opposed to total abstinence if Canon Farrar is not right when he says, "Self-sacrifice is effective because as Sir Wilfred Lawson says—the mitred heads of the whole Episcopate together could not discover any cause for drunkenness except drinking."

Yours in favor of total abstinence,

A. E. DE ST. DALMAS.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—In last evening's Review I find that Mr. J. Gordon Mowat has published the correspondence that passed between him and the Scott Act Association, with reference to the meeting on Wednesday night. In what he calls a "protest" attached, he states that instead of withdrawing our meeting we have simply shifted it to Tuesday night, and in consequence he feels himself relieved of his obligation to allow an hour at his meeting to a Scott Act advocate. I place the plain facts of the case before the public in denial of his insinuation of unfair tactics on our part. On Friday last, after we had invited (through press, platform and poster) full discussion at any of our meetings, and they had persistently refused to appear, we sent a letter to Messrs. Mowat and Richardson, offering to withdraw our meeting on Wednesday, if they would allow us an hour at theirs. On Sunday evening after five o'clock, we received Mr. Mowat's reply, stating that if he were allowed half an hour after church service that evening, in one of several churches named by him, he would accord our side an hour at his Wednesday night meeting. To his unbounded surprise, this privilege was accorded him, and, quoting from the Review's remarks following his letter yesterday, "in accordance with this arrangement, Mr Mowat spoke at the Mark street Methodist Church yesterday evening." Now, fearing an open discussion of the question, as the representatives of the N.L.T.U. have always done, he, in a very unmanly and dishonorable manner, tries to escape from fulfilling his part of the contract by the ungracious back-down which has called forth this reply. In any case, had we "merely shifted" our meeting from Wednesday to Tuesday evening, it would not affect the position, as he made no stipulation in his letter about our withdrawing our meeting. But we have done no shifting. We had intended from the first having meetings on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week, as the National Liberal Temperance Union found out some time ago, when they tried to engage the Opera House for these nights. Our meetings for last night and to-night were arranged days ago. Now, Sir, we still claim our right to an hour at the meeting to-morrow night, and call on all, friends and foes alike, to attend the meeting and hear the Scott Act discussed, if not fully, at any rate to the extent possible in the hour allotted to our side of the question. And we also demand that the National Liberal Temperance Union, on their honor, see to the fulfilling of their part of the contract made through their Secretary. I am,

Yours obediently,
GEO. E. WILLIAMS,
Secretary Peterborough Co. Scott Act Association.

Two Thousand Cases.

Alarming Increase of the Smallpox in Montreal—Fifteen Hundred Cases in in the City and Five Hundred in Outside Municipalities—A Poor Girl Deserted and Left to Die Alone.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—The number of new cases of smallpox reported to-day was 114, while the number of deaths foot up thirty-six. This brings the increase in mortality up to over 100 more than for the week preceding. From the most reliable figures obtainable the number of cases at present in the city is set down at 1,500, while there are fully 500 cases in outside municipalities. The deaths in the municipalities for the week ending to-night are reported at 106. The alarm is general among citizens of the city. Many of those who can afford it are leaving. The epidemic has shown itself in the best families, and on the leading streets of the city during the past few days.

It is said that a case on Maufield street was ordered to be removed to the civic hospital, but upon arrival there the case was refused, and the patient sent back to the place brought from, because the hospital was full. The sick person being the servant girl, the family left her alone in the house and went to the country. She remained alone in the house until this morning, when she was discovered dead in her bed.

The report from the smallpox hospital for yesterday shows the following cases:—Admitted 3, died 3, remaining in the house 101, of whom 86 are doing well. There were 23 deaths in the city yesterday, bringing the total for this week up to Friday night to 147. There were three deaths in St. Jean Baptiste, three in Cote St. Louis, three in Ste. Cunegonde and one in St. Henri.

The new wing of the hospital will be ready on Monday, and another in the course of a week.

The nuns, who have been making a house-to-house visitation, have discovered 160 new cases.

A new hospital with 50 beds is to be provided for Hochelaga ward.

YOUNG LIBERALS' PLATFORM.

The party Conservative papers, and this classification includes them all, are unanimous in pronouncing the convention of the Young Liberals recently held in Toronto a failure. From their standpoint it is no doubt a great failure, for it turned out contrary to what they expected. They thought and doubtless hoped the convention would be a gathering of callow young radicals with a big programme of crude revolutionary theories, and liberal denunciations of the Reform party leaders. Instead of that the convention proved to be a deliberative assemblage of clever, well-informed, enthusiastic, patriotic and reasoning young men, who showed by the tenor of their remarks and discussions that a desire to promote the good of the country, underlay every motive and action. The result of the conference was the adoption of a series of resolutions which may be conveniently crystallized into a "platform" as follows:—

Provincial control of the franchise.
Manhood suffrage for Ontario.
Repeal of the Dominion Franchise Act.
Commercial independence of Canada.
Taxation to be only for the requirements of economical government.
An elective Senate.
No Civil Service superannuations or pensions.
Civil Service reform.
Canada's right to amend its own Constitution.
No assisted immigration.
Decreased taxation.
Abolition of Federal veto.
Abolition of Provincial subsidies.
Reciprocity.
North-West representation.
Provincial appointment of judges in Provincial Courts.
A plebiscite (or popular vote) on Prohibition.

This programme of political action contains nothing treasonably radical, nothing that, if carried into effect, will not be for the benefit of the country at large; though, it must be confessed, that some parts of it will be rather hard on the politicians of the party now in power in the Dominion. The sting of this convention, however, to the partizans is the hearty endorsation of the Liberal leaders, Federal and Provincial, respectively—Hon. Messrs Blake and Mowat. If the Mail and its journalistic entourage, could have induced the young Liberals to condemn and repudiate the present Reform leaders, no honey of adulation would have been too sweet. The convention of the young Liberals was a great success, of which there can be no more significant proof than the undisguised disgust of the Tory newspapers at the manner in which it turned out. They would have rejoiced at a failure, therefore their mourning pronounces success in language louder than words.

BRITISH POLITICS.

The Tories of Great Britain, by a trick, succeeded in replacing the Gladstone Administration, and with a great deal of reluctance they took its place. A section of the Liberal party, which is the party of progressiveness, went further in the advocacy of radical changes than another section was prepared to assent to. The illness of Mr. Gladstone and the improbability that he would be able to take part in the political struggle the general elections would result in, seemed to widen the little rift in the Liberal lute, and gave the Tories a good hope of succeeding at the polls. But Mr. Gladstone, after a period of rest, is again in harness. He has issued a manifesto, which has proved the most successful pamphleteering of his life. The document was secretly issued to his colleagues last Monday. The first preceptible effect was a palpable r'approachment between Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Hartington and Sir Wm. Harcourt. The radicals were going with Chamberlain, the whigs with Hartington, and Harcourt was endeavouring to hold the moderates together. The Liberal party was being rent to pieces. The manifesto put a stop to the ripping, and the diverging triumvirate at once set to work to replace the stitches, and with each effort came closer together. To-day the Liberal party in Great Britain at least is a solid unit. Mr. Chamberlain's Glasgow speech after he had perused the manifesto, displayed a practical abandonment of independent radicalism, and the adoption of a policy of conciliation, and so with Lord Hartington and Sir William Harcourt. They have indicated complete submission to Mr. Gladstone and have become opportunists. These three men have been ambitious to succeed the "Grand old man." Circumstances have demonstrated that the party will at present accept no leader but him, and that without him restoration to power is impossible. In one of the opening sentences of the manifesto Mr. Gladstone uses the following significant statement: "It will not be possible for me to repeat in the new Parliament the labors of previous sessions." This is everywhere accepted as a distinct asseveration that he intends, if victorious in this campaign, to confine himself to the work of forming a ministry, and after remaining in office long enough to assure the successful working of his re-established governmental machinery, to retire permanently to private life.

The Liberal Manifesto.

Mr. Gladstone Formulates his Platform—A Statesmanlike and Masterly Document—Errors Acknowledged and Responsibilities Not Denied.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Mr. Gladstone's manifesto, which has been awaited with much general interest, will be issued in the form of an address to his constituents in Midlothian to-morrow. The manifesto consists of twenty sections. It shows a distinct recognition of the radical advance. It begins with a request for the renewal of his constituents' personal trust in him. He regards the future with cheerfulness. He says the arrears of legislation are due to Tory obstruction. He claims credit for the Afghan settlement, says he found Afghanistan broken to pieces, and left it friendly. By yielding the Transvaal he averted a war of the English and European races in South Africa. He challenges a contrary verdict. He traces all the trouble in Egypt to the policy of foreign intervention, of which he has never ceased since 1876 to point out the danger. He advocates a withdrawal from Egypt at the earliest moment that honor permits, saying: "I will admit that we committed serious errors of judgment at a great cost of treasure and precious lives in the Soudan. For none of these were we rebuked by the Opposition. Our responsibility for our mistakes cannot be questioned. They were the proper and certain consequence of undertakings against nature and that lie beyond the scope of human means." He advocates dealing freely with the transfer of land, the registration of tithes, land taxation during the life of the holder and after his death. He opposes primogeniture and entails. He notices that the current is slowly settling in the direction of disestablishment, but believes the vitality of the church equal to her needs even at this crisis. He is averse to pressing the gratuitious primary education bill. On the Irish question he says: "I cannot believe that the political genius of this nations' illustrious history will prove inadequate to a solution of the problem, or permit embittered civil strife. If such strife should arise, the one may cast blame on the other, but the verdict of the civilized world, I am convinced, will alike condemn both." Evidently alluding to Mr. Parnell, he says:—"I believe history and posterity will consign to disgrace the name and memory of every man on whichever side of the channel he dwells who, having power to promote peace and friendship, uses it for strife and enmity." He says no progress is possible without reform of the legislative instruments. On the question of the house of lords he says, "I cannot deny that there is a case sufficient to justify an important change in the character of the house of lords, but I trust a reasonable share of power may be allowed under wise conditions to the principle of birth." Concluding he says, "Much of what I have written refers to the future, which, according to all expectations, lies beyond my reach."

Educational Notes.

Three million pupils now attend the free schools in the Southern States, and over $10,000,000 is annually raised to support them.

Mr. J. H. Brown, late of the Deaf & Dumb Institute, Belleville, has been appointed principal of a similar institution at Wilkensburg, Pennsylvania.

Shade of John Knox! Rev. Mr. Pitt, Dunfermline, Scotland, actually proposes that dancing shall be taught in the High School there as "a higher branch of education."

The annual meeting of the Association of Mechanics' Institutes was held in the Toronto Normal School on Tuesday. The executive committee presented a very satisfactory report and officers were elected.

There are now 140 Mechanics' Institutes in the Province, of which five are also Free Public Libraries in their respective cities. In all 79 institutes received legislative aid during the year and 44 received grants from municipal councils.

Nothing would tend to increase the permanency of the teacher's position more than the erection of suitable teachers' residences in well-to-do localities. Why should teachers be expected to live without homes of their own?

The entrance examination in December will last three days instead of two as formerly. This will give candidates a better opportunity to do justice to themselves as they will now have time for thought and for showing neatness in their work.

A FATEFUL RIDE.

Chapter II.—Continued.

She looked at him for a minute, searchingly, clearly, intently gazing with her young sweet eyes into those worn sad ones upturned; then she put out her hand and clasped his.

"I do believe you are innocent," she said, "and with all my heart I hope you may prove it some day. I trust you will escape now, and your troubles be at an end. I am very, very sorry for you. If ever I can help you again, let me know, and take this," drawing her purse out again, and pushing it into his hand. "I only wish I had more to give you, poor man!"

"You have given me what I thirsted for even more than for food and drink," he said brokenly. "Bless you a thousand times! I believe you are an angel."

Then he pressed her hand to his lips and turned away, and she rode hard and fast over the darkening road towards home.

But she was not fated to enter again unseen.

Before her own gate she met with another gentleman, on horseback this time, and at sight of whom she did not blush, but looked decidedly vexed.

He, however, looked radiant.

"Miss Madeline, this is an unexpected pleasure," he said, reining in by her side. "Where are you coming from?"

"From a ride. Where are you going to, Mr. Charsley?"

"I was returning home. I am coming round to The Firs this evening, about eight o'clock, if I may," he said, looking at her admiringly.

"Of course. My father will be very glad to see you, I have no doubt," she said carelessly.

"But you," with deep significance in look and tone, "shall you be glad to see me, dare I hope?"

"Of course I am always glad to see my father's guests," she said with studied coldness.

He bit his lip irritably.

"You will never make a man vain by your compliments, Miss Madeline."

"Oh, I hope not. They are so vain by nature, I think—don't you? I should be grieved, indeed, to make one more so. Well, au revoir until nine o'clock. I am very late, you see, and hurrying in."

To her vexation he turned and rode beside her, escorting her even up the drive and to the very front door, and waiting until the bell was answered to her impatient pull.

But she rushed in, leaving him without good-bye, the instant the door was opened, and hearing that the family were at dinner she crept upstairs, and sent down her maid with apologies and for some dinner during the intervals of her toilette.

"I can't have Susanna's scolding before Lance Gorden," she told herself.

Madeline found the drawing-room empty when she entered it.

"What a long dinner they are having!" she said, glancing at herself in the pier-glass, and deciding that she looked extremely well in her white lace dinner dress, with crimson pompons upon its voluminous drapery, and sprays of crimson fuschia in her thick dark hair, and drooping over her bare neck and arms. "It is a good thing I look nice, as I am in disgrace," said she, selecting a most comfortable chair and a book; but ere she opened it Mr. Charsley was announced.

He entered, beaming at the position of affairs.

"I am fortunate," he said in low tones, "to find you alone."

"You are very early," she returned, sacrificing politeness to vexation. "It can't be nine o'clock yet."

"Eight, I said. I am sorry if I have arrived too early," with great stiffness.

"Oh no; it is only that they have not left the dining-room yet. I expect Susanna ought to have done so, but she is listening to some political discussion, no doubt, and I am only here to entertain you."

"You are the only one I want," he said with intent gaze.

She pretended not to hear that remark.

She put up her hand to a bracket near, and took down a painted terra-cotta plate.

"This is what I did this afternoon," smiled she. "Is not it beautiful?"

"Exquisitely done," he said, rising and leaning over her shoulder on pretence of admiring it more closely.

Ere she could free herself from the embarrassing position the room door opened and they all came in, Miss Ayre followed by the two gentlemen; and Madeline, by coloring scarlet at the look upon her sister's face, made matters worse.

Captain Gorden did not see the poor little plate at all; he only saw Charsley's curls almost touching the girl's bright hair, his hand almost resting on her shoulders; and seeing those things, and putting his own interpretation upon them, his face changed for one brief instant, then he went on calmly discussing with his host the topic broken off in the dining-room.

Madeline rose vexedly.

"I never saw people so long at dinner. I thought you never were coming."

"I wish they had been longer," whispered Charsley in her ear.

"If they had been, I should have expired of ennui," said she pettishly.

"Now, what are we going to do—play a rubber?"

"Chess, I think. Mr. Ayre and I have a return match to play," said Gorden, quietly moving the chess-board.

"You are very selfish," said Madeline with a bewitching smile. "Chess is so stupid for the lookers-on."

"Don't look on, you will make us nervous," said he, in as light a tone as her own.

"But what are we to do? You know you will look daggers at us if we attempt the least conversation."

"Won't you and Mr. Charsley"—with a quick smiles and glance—"play some game to yourselves?"

"Perhaps, kind Mr. Master-of Ceremonies, you will suggest what that game shall be, then?"

"Nay, I leave that to your own taste," he said gravely, setting his pieces. "Mr. Ayre, will you move first?"

Tears of vexation were in the girl's eyes, but she turned proudly away and opened the piano.

"You are going to sing to me," said Mr. Charsley, following her devotedly. "How kind of you!"

"I am singing principally out of an unkind desire to disturb the chess," she laughed. "What song do you think will do it most effectually?" turning over her music carelessly.

"Sing this," he begged, picking up "Across the Far Blue Hills," and arranging the music for her.

Madeline sang exquisitely. Her rich, sweet, contralto voice had depths of expression that were powers of appeal to the most unmusical soul; it had been perfectly cultivated, and its full, clear, thrilling notes were trained to most subtle modulation and flexibility.

She soon disturbed the chess. Gorden lost his game, and, moving abruptly, came up to the piano, whereupon Mr Ayre prepared for his evening doze, and Miss Susanna pounced upon Mr. Charsley.

"Will you come here a minute, please? I have something very particular to show you," she said.

Left alone with Gorden, Madeline finished her song, then looked up with a mischievous bewitching glance.

"Have I charmed away the evil spirit?" she asked softly.

"Have you what?" He met her glance and went a little nearer.

"In plain English, have you got over the very bad temper you were indulging in just now?"

It would have been an incorrigible temper indeed that could have resisted those sweet smiling eyes, those pretty parted lips, that bright gesture and winning voice.

Gorden's dark face softened wonderfully, and he leaned yet a little closer over the piano.

Miss Susanna saw it, and redoubled her attentions to the refractory Charsley.

"What makes you think I was in a bad temper?" Captain Gorden asked quietly.

"It was a patent fact. Your countenance was black as thunder, your eyes were shooting lurid flashes, your voice nearly frightened me into—despair."

She paused before she uttered the last word, and ran her fingers softly over the keys, looking down upon them the while.

"And how did you account for my temper, Miss Ayre?"

She shrugged her pretty shoulders, smiling again.

"How can anyone account for a man's temper? It is like himself—an erratic, unreasonable mystery."

"Had I no reason for mine?" he questioned quickly.

"I suppose you imagined you had quantities of good ones. I know of none."

"Come here a minute; I want to tell you something," he said, drawing her hastily through the open conservatory door; and thrilled by his voice and glance, she followed obediently, blushing like the bashful loving girl she really was.

Miss Ayre, noticing the move, smiled calmly to herself, and held poor Harold Charsley in tighter chains than ever.

But when he had her in the conservatory, Gorden seemed in no hurry to speak.

He stood looking at the sweet downcast face and graceful white figure, at the little fingers picking buds off Miss Susanna's best azalea, and gradually into his own face rose a passion of admiration and love that she saw when she looked up and began:

"You said you wanted——"

Then she stopped dumb before his gaze, trembling and crimsoning, and he picked up her hand and the azalea it was breaking off.

"I want you, my darling," he said; then checking himself hurriedly: "I want to know which of us you really prefer—Charsley or myself, Madeline?"

"I think," she said, as firmly as her trembling voice would speak, "I almost hate Mr. Charsley."

"And you don't hate me?" gathering up both hands now, and pressing them to his heart. "You sweet little darling!"

"I don't think I hate you," she whispered, smiling, yet with downcast eyes.

"Why have you encouraged that brute—that imbecile as you have done?" he questioned, stern again for a minute. "You are not a flirt, Madeline, I hope and trust—not a flirt, with that pure face and innocent way," in almost passionate entreaty.

"What would be the consequence if I were a flirt?" she questioned, still smiling softly and happily.

"I should have no respect for you," he replied gravely. "I could have none, for if there is one character I despise it is that of a flirt, masculine or feminine, Madeline."

"And if you had no respect, you would have no—no love, I suppose?" shyly, and coloring again.

"That would be about it."

"I am not a flirt, Lance, indeed and indeed," she said, raising her eyes, now clear, and warm, and truthful, to his. "I would not be one for anything!" vehemently. "I am not saying this just to curry favor with you," dropping her glance again, "for I don't care one bit what your opinion of me is, of course."

"Not one little bit, Madeline?"

"Well, very, very, very little," mischievously.

"And don't you care one little bit for me then, either?" he whispered, bending his face to see her averted one.

"That depends," she faltered, "how much you care for me."

"How much I care for you!" he cried, suddenly clasping her in his arms, and raining passionate kisses upon her happy blushing face. "How can I tell you how I care, my love, my little darling? Enough to worship the very ground you tread on—to remember every word you say—think of you night and day—dream of you—yearn for you. Enough to have had some very bad nights lately, Madeline, on that imbecile Charsley's account," looking into her eyes with a smile.

CHAPTER III.

Madeline, sitting warm and cosy by the library fire on the following afternoon, looked up with pretty reproach at her lover when he entered.

"You are as false as false can be," she smiled. "I have not been out to-day thinking you would be sure to come and take me for a ride, and you don't appear until this unsatisfactory hour. Lance, I think I will give you up and have another lover, after all."

"Will you?" he said strangely. "Have Harold Charsley, then, I suppose."

He had shut the door behind him and had come up to the fire, but he made no attempt to greet his lady-love, he did not even touch the little hand she had outstretched; he stood looking at her so strangely, so coldly, so sternly, that she felt the oddness of his manner even before she saw it. When she looked up and saw his face distinctly, she gave a little cry:

"Oh, Lance, what is the matter?"

"I don't quite know how to put it—you are a lady, you see," he replied in that odd suppressed coldness; "if you were a man, Miss Ayre, I should say you told me a falsehood last evening."

"Captain Gorden!" she exclaimed, starting up indignantly, "have you lost your senses?"

"Only for a time last night—they were brought back to me with a rush this morning."

"Treat me as a man, as you evidently don't know how to treat me properly as a lady," she said, with superb disdain in manner, and a cold deadly pain at her heart; "and tell me in plain words—as plain as you like, they won't hurt me—what you mean."

Somewhat, he said unsteadily, and approaching her by one step, "you know what I mean. You know how you deceived me last night."

"I might retort that it is you who are speaking falsely now," with a little laugh that was in reality a sob, turned off into a less humiliating sound.

"You told me—you vowed to me—that you had no appointment with Harold Charsley yesterday afternoon; that it was not with him you went out for that late ride you would not allow me to accompany you upon."

"And I tell you exactly the same—the simple truth—again now."

"Yet I met with someone to-day quite casually, Madeline—someone who had no thought of doing you evil or making mischief—who told me that he had seen you and Mr. Charsley returning from a ride over the moor at seven o'clock yesterday evening; that Charsley had accompanied you to this very door, and had only left to return again at nine o'clock by your own appointment. I cannot doubt that person's word, Madeline," he said, with deep sadness in the stern tones.

"Yet you can doubt mine?" she cried, with quick resentment in hers. "If you begin your love thus, by doubt, and, I might say, insult, how will it end, I wonder?"

"It has ended. It could have withstood anything but deception. Madeline, if you had but owned the truth last evening, if you had only answered my question truly, I could have forgiven."

"Forgiven indeed!" she cried with a superb raising of her little head. "I think it will be time enough for you to talk of forgiveness, Captain Gorden, when I stoop to ask for it."

She rose as she spoke, and faced him. Two quick tempers alight; two sore hearts burning; two proud natures aroused and defiant; two pairs of haughty angry eyes regarding each other coldly.

"Darling," she said, putting up her soft little hand to his cheek, "you sha'n't have any more."

"You really like me infinitely better than him?"

"It is very wonderful—is not it?—but I really do. In point of fact I have an absolute loathing for him; while for you——" She finished the sentence by a soft shy kiss.

"You sweet angel! You are not wishing to hurry back into that other room to his stupid compliments now?"

"Not just yet, Mr. Jealousy; you see you are just now paying me rather pretty ones yourself, the first I have ever wormed out of you."

"I suppose that other has had the presumption to pay you any amount?"

"He was more complimentary than you, certainly," with a fond smile. "But all the same I can't bear him. I was so vexed to have him here to-night. I can't think why my father invites him."

"Then," said Gorden, after a moment's pause, and drawing a deep breath of relief, "it was not with Charsley that you had the appointment you rode out so late to keep this afternoon."

She raised her clear wondering eyes, then hastily:

"With Mr. Charsley—an appointment! Lance, never, never, never! I vow it was not. I would never have an appointment with him. Oh, how could you!"

"You told me you had an appointment with some one," apologetically. "I think you hardly realized the state of mind you put me into."

"Oh, you dear old stupid! I only said that to tease you. Lance, you are a jealous——"

"Jealous wretch! Yes, I know; but I can't help it, I love you so intensely, I cannot brook a rival. And I am suspicious, for I was so bitterly deceived once, Madeline, by a girl almost as pure-looking as you."

"Were you in love with her?" hastily.

"I fancied so, until I found out her falsity. Never mind that old story now, dearest, you shall hear it all some day if you care to. But don't tease me any more, please, by encouraging any rival," beseechingly.

"No, I won't. If I have encouraged Mr. Charsley at all—I don't think I have," puckering up her pretty white brow meditatively; "but if I have, it has been your fault, sir, entirely, because you have driven me to the verge of flirtation sometimes by your inexplicable coldness, and—and general bad treatment, you know."

"You shall have that excuse no longer," he said, taking her into his arms again. "Oh, Madeline, how I love you! I wonder," gazing tenderly at the sweet face blushing beneath his kisses, "if you can form any idea how passionately and deeply and wholly I do love you, my darling?"

"I think I can form a little idea," she smiled, "from looking into my own heart, for oh, Lance—I don't want to make you vain—but you are dearer to me than all the wide world."

"I do not think I am vain—I think I am thankful," he murmured gently.

And then Harold Charsley broke from Miss Ayre's detaining hand at last, and interrupted the tete-a-tete.

Too late though for his own hopes, as one glance at the two radiant faces he intruded upon, told him.

The ladies of Peterborough held a large meeting in the interests of the Scott Act at the Y. M. C. A. hall yesterday afternoon. The proceedings were very enthusiastic.

Peach Festival.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church will have a peach festival in the school room on Friday evening, 25th inst. Admission, 10 cents; refreshments extra. There will be a good musical programme. All are invited.

Mass Meeting.

A grand Scott Act rally will be held to-night at the Opera House. G. Hilliard, Esq., M. P., will preside. A. F. Wood, Esq., M.P.P., of Hastings county, Geo. A. Cox, Esq., of Peterboro, and others, will address the meeting.

Prob'e Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office:—Strong winds and moderate gales from the south-west, shifting to north-west, partly cloudy warm weather.

Scott Act Committees Attention.

The last meeting but one of the Scott Act Committees will be held at the headquarters, to-night, at 8 sharp. The scrutineers are all again requested to be present. Let every member of the committees be promptly in attendance.

Spectacles.

Testimonial from Edward J. Stobo, pastor of the Baptist church, Belleville:

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 24th, 1883.

Mr. B. Laurance has succeeded admirably in suiting Mrs. Stobo and myself with spectacles adapted to the state of the vision organs, and we have every reason to believe him a skilful optician, and worthy of public patronage.

EDWARD STOBO.

McKee, Druggist, Sole Agent, Peterboro'.

"Rock the Cradle, John."

Many a luckless Benedict has too often, for his own comfort, received the above command from his better-half when about to engage in baking, washing, or some of the multifarious duties of domestic life. But thanks to modern invention, he can now secure exemption from the irksome task by investing a few dollars in the "Workman Automatic Cradle," an ingeniously devised swinging cot with a mechanical attachment that, on being wound up, will keep the cradle rocking for fifty minutes. A mother can now put baby in the cradle, wind it up, and go off after her household duties without being interrupted by the wakeful cries of the unrocked little one. This useful invention, which will win itself a place in every home where there is a baby, may be seen at the furniture store of Mr. D. Belleghem, who, with his accustomed business tact and shrewdness, has secured the control of it in Peterborough and vicinity. Mothers should not fail to call and see it.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks, among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

ATHLETICS.

Lacrosse.

THE TEAM FOR TO-MORROW'S GAME.

The boys are eagerly looking forward to the championship match with Cannington to-morrow, and are in first-rate trim for the fray. The following players will defend the championship:—Felix Trainer, goal; Jos. Joyal, point; Percy Myles, cover-point; R. Hall, 1st defence; M. Halpin, 2nd defence; R. H. Fortye, 3rd defence; J. J. Sheehy, centre; R. Kelly, home field; W. Rudkins, home field; J. Henderson, home field; G. H. Giroux, home; C. Rutherford, home; J. Canning, spare man. Mr. F. Brennan of Norwood, has consented to fill the position of referee.

The match will be played on the P. A. A. grounds at Ashburnham, so everyone will have a good opportunity of witnessing it, an opportunity that no lover of the national game should miss.

Baseball.

The Ontario publishes a graphic report of baseball match between the "Feline Fumblers" of that office and the Intelligencer, respectively yclept "Tigers" and "Wildcats." The Grit Wildcats got the best of it by a large majority, running up a score of 57 to the Tigers' 26. The pussy cats think they are no slouches on the diamond, and are scratching around getting their claws sharpened for a new encounter.

CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

The employees of Kennealy's Hotel say that the Oriental's must have forgotten them when issuing their challenge, but rather than see the Oriental brought to utter ruin by the baseball tossing proclivities of its employees, offer to afford them a chance of bringing their fever to a head by playing a friendly game. Details can be arranged at any time or place agreed upon mutually, but the Kennealyites wont play till the Scott Act has been defeated. This may not be for some time.

What they are Saying.

Let us be the first nation to hoist the prohibition banner.—D. W. Dumble.

Feed up the nags, boys, they've got a big day's work ahead of them.—The liverymen.

We'll play the Orientals after the Scott Act has been defeated.—The Kennealyites.

I occupy the organ stool at St. John's this evening.—C. C. Hampshire.

And me, too.—Professor Parker.

And I'm going to sing a solo.—Tom Dunn.

We Would Like to Know.

What made the audience at Bradburn's hall laugh so much last night,

And if they really thought Mr. Carswell was saying funny things.

If Moses Oates isn't scared to meet Keefer on the platform.

Why Mr. Goldwin does not induce his friend Canon Farrar to come down and give the Liberal Temperance Union a boost.

How many actual voters were present at Bradburn's Opera House last evening,

And if they will go solid for the Act.

What We May Expect.

The Cannington lacrosse boys to arrive in town this evening.

And to give our boys a lively time to-morrow.

Mr. Keefer to insist on being heard at the Drill Shed on Wednesday evening.

The "Canadian Gough" to learn some new stories before he comes here again.

Lovers of music to attend the organ recital at St. John's this evening.

A meeting of Adullamites in the Council Chamber this evening.

A Reminder.

Remember the mass meeting at the Opera House to-night.

To Subscribers.

Subscribers to the DAILY EVENING EXAMINER will greatly oblige us by reporting promptly any neglect in the delivery of their paper.

Meeting at Ashburnham.

A Scott Act mass meeting will be held in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, this evening. It will be addressed by an eminent speaker.

The Pushing Porters.

Messrs. Porter Bros. Peterborough's far-famed carriage builders, yesterday shipped a handsomely finished and painted commercial waggon to Messrs. Bottom & Garlick, of Bobcaygeon. Every day the Porter Bros. are dispatching vehicles of various descriptions to various quarters of the country, and their excellent workmanship is beginning to couple the name of Peterborough with first-class carriages.

Ready for Business.

Mr. T. E. Flaherty has his fine new premises on Hunter street in readiness for opening business on Saturday next. On his shelves will be found a splendid stock of gents' furnishings, and a full assortment of tweeds, broadcloths, etc., and a capable and artistic cutter, Mr. R. J. Kirkpatrick, formerly of Port Hope, ready to give a stylish and perfect fit to all customers who may favour the establishment with their patronage. The public will please remember the place and date of the new business opening, Hunter street, Lynch Block, Saturday next.

Thunder and Lightning.

During the severe storm that passed over the town at noon to-day a very sharp flash of lightning, followed by a terrific peal of thunder, occasioned the remark from many that the lightning must surley have struck somewhere close by. This surmise proves to to have been true. The house of Mr. Regan, near the C. P. R. station, was struck, and the gable end and chimney blown off; fortunately there was no damage to life or limb. Many people experienced electric shocks by standing in the vicinity of telephones or telegraph keys during the storm, and there was quite a general ringing of the telephone bells by the electric influence.

Personal.

Mr. A. St. A. Smith, of the Bank of Toronto, has returned to town after spending a pleasant holiday season.

Mr. C. F. Colwell, wholesale dealer in music, of London, Ont., is in town.

Special Meeting.

The Executive Committee of the Scott Act Association urge every Scott Act worker to be in his place at the headquarters, Hunter street, to-night, at 8 sharp.

Crowded Out.

An interesting interview with Mr. James English in reference to the state of the hose owned by the fire department, has been left over till to-morrow, owing to pressure of matter.

Ditched.

Mr. J. P. Galvin was driving a team of horses in a waggon along Aylmer street to-day, and on coming to a trench which is being dug for the water works extension, one of the horses shied and crowded the other into the trench. The men had been tunneling in the trench, and the horse fell with his hind quarters under the tunnelling, and sitting with his fore legs upright like a dog. From this very uncomfortable predicament there was great difficulty in extricating him, but the crowd who assembled at length assisted Mr. Galvin to get him out, and he was found to be little the worse of the fall.

Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 21.—At the cheese board of trade on Saturday, sixteen factories offered 2,650. The highest bid was 7⅛ which was refused. No sales.

The Equinoctial.

The Electric Fluid's Freaks.

The storm that struck the town yesterday and kept up during the night, must have been September's regular equinoctial. The damage done by lightning was not very serious, but several well-meant attempts were made. Advantage was taken of the absence of Mr. Regan's family, south ward, and his residence, as noted in yesterday's EXAMINER, was stirred up considerably. In the opposite part of the town, on the borders of "Goose pond," at the foot of Harvey street, a pine tree was artistically mowed down. The electric bolt apparently struck the tree which stands at the foot of the bank, about eight feet from the ground. Skipping downwards, gouging out pieces of tree at intervals, it gathered its forces and about two feet from the ground, twisted the trunk apart, flung it several feet, burrowed itself in the earth at the foot of the tree, scooping out a large hole and smashing cobble stones like chalk. A daughter of Mr. James Bradley, who resides on the front of the lot where the lightning amused itself, was coming out of the back door as the crash came. She was knocked back against her mother, who was just behind her, and considerably stunned. Mr. John Lockhart, who lives on the opposite side of the street, was also shocked and momentarily stunned.

ELSEWHERE.

The storm did not confine its mischief to Peterborough, for one corner of the barn of Mr. David Wilson, near Springville, was struck by lightning. The post at the corner was splintered into fragments, but the burning that usually follows lightning was absent in this case.

In Port Hope the visitation of lightning was made with greater effect. The Guide of Tuesday says that a severe thunder storm passed over the town, and the flashes of lightning were most vivid, followed by very heavy thunder. One of these flashes struck St. Mary's church spire, knocking off the shingles and boards on the south side, and slivering the timbers for at least sixty feet down, but as fortune would have it, no fire followed; if t had the church would without doubt have been consumed. The damage will probably amount to one hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars, covered by insurance.

Craig & Son's new brick tannery was also struck by the electric fluid, but no damage of any account was done.

Cheap Excursion to Chicago.

There will be a cheap excursion to Detroit and Chicago on Friday and Saturday, September 25th and 26th, from Peterborough, on the G. T. R., in connection with the Detroit and Chicago short line. This is the shortest and quickest route from Canada to Chicago. Passengers will arrive in Chicago at 7 o'clock on the following morning. Pullman palace sleepers on night trains. Secure your tickets from Mr. Thos. Menzies, the old, reliable ticket agent, who will accompany the excursion and see that all are provided with good accommodation. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukee and Cincinnati and return only $12; to Detroit and return, only $6.00; good for ten days.

This Season.

Fair, VanEvery & Co'y have opened a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps, in many styles, much below regular prices. Don't fail to see them.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

Municipal Malcontents.

Meeting of Ratepayers to Oppose the Dickson By-Law—A Game of Bluff.

A public meeting of ratepayers opposed to the Dickson by-law, met at the council chamber last evening to discuss that matter and take steps to have it repealed. If the numerical strength and the complexion of the meeting may be taken as a criterion, the townsmen evidently do not apprehend any great danger from the provisions of the much discussed piece of municipal legislation. Mr. Carnegie, M. P. P., Mr. Deane, Mr. Edmison and Councillors McNaughton and McClelland occupied seats in the inner circle, the remainder of the gathering, numbering about 25 persons, some of whom were evidently attracted more by curiosity than any interest in the subject under consideration, occupy the spectators' seats.

On motion of Mr. Carnegie, Mr. C. E. Starr took the chair and declared the meeting open for discussion.

Mr. Carnegie said that in a private conference of citizens opposed to the by-law, the conclusion had been reached that it was illegal, and that in the event of the council refusing to repeal it, any individual ratepayer had the power to bring an action in the courts to have it quashed. Of course the party doing this would want to be guaranteed the amount of the costs, and for his part he was quite ready to contribute his share. It had been thought best before drawing up any document on the matter to hold a public discussion, though he really saw no room for discussion. The by-law should never have been passed, and the sooner it was removed from the by-law book the better. The question was how to effect the object. A two-third vote of the Council could repeal it, or if they refused, and it was illegal, it could be quashed by legal process. He proceeded to state his belief in its illegality, quoting from the Ontario Statutes in support of his belief. After making numerous objections to the by-law, he moved the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Denne:—

"That in the opinion of this meeting, should the Town Council refuse at its next meeting, on Friday evening, to repeal the Dickson by-law, steps should be taken to have the by-law quashed before the proper court."—Carried unanimously.

Mr. Denne, seconded by Mr. Griffith, then moved the following:—

"That the chairman, and Messrs. Denne, Edmison, Phelan, Lundy, Rowe and Carnegie be a committee to carry out the resolution carried at this meeting."

Mr. George Edmison then said that, judging from the complexion of the meeting, it seemed as if it were the intention of the Council to FACE THE MUSIC.

He commented on the absence of the Mayor and the majority of the Council, who, he thought, should have been present, as the matter under discussion was of great importance. If the Council refused to repeal the law, legal action to quash it ought to be taken within the prescribed time. It was not his desire to be one of the committee, but he would not shrink from doing his duty in the matter. He commented on the fact that at the recent public meeting both Mr. Dumble's and Mr. Carnegie's resolutions called for the repeal of the by-law, but he did not know how the Council was inclined to act in the matter. He understood that there had been no Council meeting since the public meeting, and it was possible the Council might feel disposed to take up the matter and deal with it according to those recommendations. In that case the action of the present meeting would be

SOMEWHAT PREMATURE.

In his opinion the by-law was illegal. It gave away taxes without stipulating for a quid pro quo, and it was not specific enough. He believed the Dickson Company, and not the tenants of any buildings erected by them would reap the benefit of the by-law.

Mr. Carnegie said that the action proposed by the present meeting would be needless if the Council repealed the by-law, but in view of the fact that it would require the votes of nine members of the Council to repeal it, and some members of the Council had shown a disposition to stand by it, he thought no time was to be lost, because it must be borne in mind that action might be taken on the other side to render the by-law legal by legislation, and every day it remained undisputed could be used before the legislature as an argument why it should be made finally binding.

Mr. Denne's resolution was then voted on and carried, and after passing a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting adjourned.

"El Padre" Cigars.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE SHETHEN.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Scott Act Campaign.

Speeches by Messrs. Hilliard, Cox and A. F. Wood, M. P. P.

There was some slight hitch in the arrangements for announcing the Scott Act meeting in Bradburn's Opera House on Tuesday evening, and in consequence there was a comparatively thin attendance at the meeting.

The chair was occupied by Geo. Hilliard, Esq., M. P. After the usual devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. Mr. Tovell, the chairman, in a few opening remarks, disclaimed the correctness of the rumour that he was lukewarm in the cause of temperance and thought his past record should have made such a rumor impossible. He was and always had been in favor of legislation to diminish the evils of intemperance, temperance workers. He said we might expect opposition to the Scott Act, but he was in favor of making any effort that would result in the slightest diminution of the evil. It was the duty of every humanitarian to come to the assistance of those who could not overcome the temptations to which they were exposed through the liquor traffic. He called on Mayor Cox, who was received with cheers. He did not come with any prepared speech, and did not know that anything he could say would give any better idea than what he had heretofore said and done, of his sympathy with the temperance movement and his utter hostility to the drink traffic. He read the letter of "One Who Supported the Dunkin Act," as published in the DAILY EXAMINER, and asserted that the statements therein contained respecting the increase of taxation, that would ensue if the Scott Act were adopted, were misleading, and that the object of bewildering the ratepayers would have been as well answered if the writer had swelled his supposed amount of increased taxation by including the amount spent on streets and bridges, or any other town improvement. The little loss of revenue would largely be met by the decrease in expenditure for charity extended to persons pauperized and made miserable by their drinking habits. Even if it were not, he did not think that many would be found willing to barter human souls and human happiness for the slight revenue derived from a traffic that produced such melancholy results. He did not believe that the Scott Act would injure the business of the town. He could not see how the liquor traffic could bring business to the town. Reference was made to the failure of the Dunkin Act, which had legislative defects that prevented its enforcement. But the Scott Act was different; it could be enforced, and he pledged his honor that if men and money would secure its enforcement it would be enforced. (Cheers.) If it were not enforced the blame would principally rest on those who opposed the Act. If they pursued a policy of obstruction, it would have the effect of making more difficult the work of the supporters of the Act in their determination to see that its provisions were obeyed. In regard to yard accommodation for farmers, he would say that there would be ample accommodation provided. He was certain that the Cavanagh Hotel yard would be open to the use of farmers and there wouldn't be any chance to slip into the back door to get a drink, either. (Cheers). He had had the pleasure within the past three months of closing one hotel and converting it into a useful business place, and before long he would, whether the Scott Act passed or not, add another hotel to the list The speaker referred to arguments advanced to support the plea that the license act was not enforced, and he showed that law carried out most strictly could not prevent the accomplishment of great evil. He cited the case of a poor woman who came to him in his capacity of mayor, to solicit charity. Her husband had been drunk almost every day for five months, on a barrel of soured porter that had been presented to the husband by a respectable hotel keeper, licensed under the Crook's Act. Such cases should rouse the deepest indignation of every man with human feelings, and strengthen his determination to prevent their recurrence by sweeping away the traffic.

Mr. Hilliard followed with a few remarks in regard to the enforcement of the Scott Act, and asserted that a law that could not be enforced should be repealed. He had every confidence in the possibility of enforcing the Scott Act.

Mr. A. F. Wood, after speaking of the pleasure it afforded him to find Mr. Hilliard advocating the temperance cause, and to know that he opposed the action of the Senate in regard to the Scott Act said that there was no need of convincing anyone of the evils of strong drink, for they were apparent to everyone. He then referred to the failure in passing the act in his own county, explaining what he believed to be the reason of that failure. He then proceeded to review the remedies to be had for the evil of drink. He argued that moral suasion had failed to accomplish the desired object though it had been brought to bear in every quarter and in every possible way. Then there was the license law, which, with its numerous provisions, in itself started out by recognizing that the liquor traffic was an evil one and something that NEEDED RESTRAINT.

It provided very carefully that only good men should get licenses, and hedged them round very closely with regulations of different kinds. Yet it fell short of what was needed to reach the evil, and there were many who believed that nothing short of prohibition would stop the evil and this brought us to the Scott Act. The Government had been asked for a prohibitory law for the Dominion, and had said, "Here, we give you the Scot Act, and if a majority of counties in the Dominion pass it, we may think of going a step further." He had heard parents and friends of those addicted to drink blaming the man who sold the liquor. But really it was not so much these men who were to blame as the people themselves who made the law under which the saloon-keeper was allowed to sell the drink. The electors had the matters in their own hands and could, if they chose, stop the sale of liquor. He appealed to the ladies to use the powerful influence they possessed in bringing out the vote on Thursday He particularly enforced the fact that whoever did not vote for the act was going against it and exhorted all who recognised the great evils of drink to vote for it, for if they did not, a great responsibility rested on them, for every man was his brother's keeper in this sense.

The Eastern Question.

Bourse Rumors.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The Petite Bourse of Paris was agitated yesterday over reports that an insurrection is imminent in Macedonia in favor of a union with Bulgaria, and that the advance by Austria upon Salonica, in connection with a Russian occupation of the Bosphorus, is probable.

How to the Inevitable.

The Titibo, a Turkish journal, advises the Moslems to accept the situation arising from the Roumelian revolt.

Warlike Movements.

The combined forces of Roumelia and Bulgaria amount to 50,000 men. The Turkish forces have not yet crossed the frontier, but the authorities are greatly excited, and active preparations are being made. Large numbers of Russians, believed to be volunteers, are passing through Bucharest daily, en route to Bulgaria.

Recognition of British Sympathy.

Panaret Rascheff, Metropolitan of Bucharest, has sent a dispatch to the Daily News on behalf of the Bulgarians, thanking that paper for its humane support of lesser nations and saying that reliance upon English sympathy assures the Bulgarians of freedom.

Tory Charges Against Mr. Gladstone.

The Conservative papers accuse Mr. Gladstone of knowledge and complicity in the conspiracy to cause the rising and assert he is in communication with the Russian and Bulgarian leaders of the revolt. They comment on the significance of the revolt occurring on the same day as Mr. Gladstone's manifesto claims that the influence of England would support the infant liberties of smaller eastern states. The Liberals hail the events in Roumelia as likely to embarrass the Marquis of Salisbury, and contribute to their success in the general election.

There is public rejoicing in Odessa over the uprising in Roumelia.

Earthquake Shocks.

ROME, Sept. 22.—Repeated shocks of earthquake were felt in Benuento yesterday, causing a panic. A large portion of the populace is camping out.

The Carolines.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Germany is ready to admit Spain's prior occupation of Yap, but not of the whole of the Carolines group.

Nugget Jewelry.

The rage just now is a rough, crusty gold, eighteen carats fine, studded with minute jewels, which stand out like the plums in a Christmas pudding. The chain and ball seems to be the leading style in the novelties sent out by Durand, the famous New York fashioner. The chain is very fine and the ball perfectly round, and about the size of an English sugar plum. These are attached to ladies' fob chains, an elegant new trifle, and the ends of bracelets, and are also worn as earrings. The balls are studded with tiny rubies, or with turquoise and diamonds, and many of the chains have fine jewels worked into them. The barbaric but stylish hoop ear-ring has returned in the shape of a semi-circle of nugget gold, and is now in high favor. A new engagement ring is a lover's knot of dead rough gold. A popular style of pin is a gold horse-shoe on one end of a wrought-gold nail—good luck. The Langtry bracelet is composed of several strands of fine gold chain, each one ending in a ball pendant gemmed or enamelled. The new styles are elegant, and not outre; flower and insect jewelry is entirely passe.

The Old Mythology in Use To-Day.

A Greek peasant looks upon death quite differently from what a peasant of the Western world is taught to believe. To him it is the end of all joy and gladness; the songs over his body (myriologues) speak of the black earth, the end of light and brilliancy. A popular Klephtic song on the death of Zedros, when read by the side of Sophocles's description of the death of Ajax, shows how curiously alike are the ideas of death as painted in the two poems. Charon is still believed to be a white-haired old man with long and fearful nails, and in myriologues or lamentations, which are still of everyday occurrence in the islands, you actually hear of Charon's calque. I had been told that in some parts of Greece they still put money on the mouth of a deceased person to pay the passage, (naulon.) I sought in vain for instances of it in the islands; but one day, while attending a child's funeral in a mountain village of Naxos, I saw a wax cross put on the child's mouth by the priest, and on inquiry I was told it was the naulon—i. e., freight money—so completely has the Eastern church incorporated into itself the ancient ideas. In a popular song I have heard Charon spoken of as a "bird like unto a black swallow," which compares curiously with the passage in the twenty-second "Odyssey," where Athena is represented as sitting on the roof of the palace at Ithaca like a swallow on the day of vengeance for Penelope's suitors.—Macmillan's Magazine

VITRIOL THROWING.

There is more truth than poetry in the complaint of many in town that our local contemporaries are allowing admission into their columns over anonymous signatures of letters containing low and contemptible insinuations, levelled against Mr. Cox, mayor of the town. The writers of these have not the moral courage to manfully make over their own names, the insinuations they smuggle into their productions. These writers are shielded behind the mask of the moral assassin, but the journals which give currency to their unworthy utterances, are doing themselves more harm than good, for the respectable portion of the community do not endorse such reprehensible methods of fighting an opponent. It is a great mistake for journalists to allow their columns to be used by vitriol throwers, seeking to damage the standing of a gentleman who, in the conscientious pursuit of honorable ends, happens to oppose them.

THE SCOTT ACT.

To-morrow the electors of this town and county will be called on to cast their votes for or against the Scott Act, and thus to say whether liquor, beer, or wine will be sold by retail in this town or county. We have given the fullest scope to both sides, in placing before our readers the arguments for and against the Act. We have done so regardless of fear, favor or affection, believing that the more is known on both sides, the more intelligently can the voters mark their ballots. We have confidence that the people will give this matter their earnest consideration. Politics and religion have been kept out of the discussions. So full and free have been the means used to enlighten the people that we can leave the matter—where it ought to be left—with the voters, and await the result of the voting on Thursday evening. We would merely say to those who believe that the adoption of the Act will be for the moral benefit of the community, and in the interests of social and domestic happiness, that they will be following the plain leadings of duty in voting for the Act, regardless of other considerations. To those who are persuaded from intelligent convictions that the Act, if carried, will fail to accomplish what is claimed for it, in the way of reform of an acknowledged evil, and that it will not be for the advantage of the community in other respects, their duty is also plain before them. Whatever way the balance of the ballot is thrown, it is to be hoped that a full, unbiassed and untrammeled expression of opinion will be given on this important subject, and that whether the verdict is for or against the Act, it will be accepted in the spirit of that ready acquiescence in the expression of popular will, which should characterize every citizen willing to abide by the decision of the majority.

The London Advertiser playfully, but pungently, tells a world of truth in this little sentence:—"When the Toronto Mail spoke of "the so called charge at Battoche," it probably meant that it was a trifling affair compared with the charges for transportation.

Ennismore.

An important auction sale of farm stock and farming implements will be held on the farm of Mr. P. Crough, lot No. 6 in the 6th concession of Ennismore, (adjoining the cross), on Thursday, October 8th inst. At this sale will be sold a large number of valuable horses and cattle—seven horses and fifteen cattle—besides eleven well bred ewes, four ewe lambs and six store hogs. There will also be sold a large number of farming implements, such as are found on every well equipped farm. Sale without reserve. Terms under and including $10, cash; over $10, on good papers.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Opinions of Engineer English Regarding the Hose.

The Effect of Uncalled for Reports.

The fact that statements, made by an interested agent of a hose manufacturing company, in regard to the state of the Peterborough Fire Department have gone abroad and are being magnified to the detriment of the town's standing among insurance men, makes it a question of public interest. Such reports, even though unfounded, cannot fail to have a prejudicial influence, and the EXAMINER has deemed it a matter of public interest that they should either be refuted, or, if true, that the department should be placed in an efficient condition. With this object in view we published on Monday the report of Mr. C. R. Gray, of the Canadian Rubber Company, whose opinion, although of course he is not an altogether disinterested one as the wild statements of Mr. Humphrey, who, in his endeavors to decry the quality of the hose owned by the town, made too plainly apparent, even for his own interest, his ultimate object of selling a quantity of hose for the Company he, with undoubted zeal,

BUT QUESTIONABLE DISCRETION, represented. Since publishing Mr. Gray's opinions a reporter of the EXAMINER had a casual interview with Mr. James English, engineer of the Fire Department, whose opinions on the question are deserving of consideration. In answer to a question regarding the truth of the statement made by Humphrey that a quantity of the hose represented as three ply Eureka, was two ply only, and of the Paragon brand, Mr. English said there was not the slightest doubt that the hose was as represented, three ply and of the Eureka brand. Although he made no pretensions to being a judge of hose, he could at least tell a rotten piece from a perfectly sound one, and there were no signs of rottenness in any of the hose. In support of his assertion, Mr. English produced a portion of the hose that had been cut to ascertain its condition, and the reporter found himself unable, by strongest effort, to break a single thread of it. Mr. English believes that with fair play the hose would stand the utmost pressure that the waterworks or the steam engine could put on it. He says that sometimes at fires, when desirous of coupling hose without removing the pressure, the firemen make two or three folds of the hose, and by putting a couple of men to stand on it stop the flow while the coupling is being made; this, he says, is more than should be asked of any hose. Speaking of the statement made in the Council in regard to the hose not being in good order, he believed they were made under a misapprehension of the true facts, for he was confident that the hose would stand all that could be expected from it. In regard to the purchase of hose, Mr. English is of the opinion that it would be for the Council to purchase about 200 feet of hose every year, and that the newest should be used next the engine or hydrant, within two or three hundred feet of which the pressure is always heaviest. A great deal of hose, he says, has now been in use nine years, and stood a great deal of hard wear before there was any tower in which to properly dry it. He had seen heavily loaded teams driving over hose at a fire, which he considered was not fair to it, and should not be permitted. Mr. English says that he was the other day conversing with Mr. Saulter, Inspector of the London, Liverpool and Globe Insurance Co'y, who informed him that the report to the Peterborough Council with regard to the rottenness of the hose had reached Montreal, and that the attention of insurance men there had been called to it. Unless the reports were contradicted the result would be an increase in the rates of fire insurance here. Fortunately Mr. English was able to convince Mr. Saulter that matters were not so bad as represented, but it is easy to see what the effect of such a report regarding the fire department going abroad would create. As the store keepers and property owners are already paying sufficiently high insurance rates, such reports should not be made without good grounds, and then not publicly, but privately, and should it not be acted upon promptly, then a public report would be justifiable? The reporter remarked that Mr. Gray's report of the condition of the hose reflected credit on Mr. English's care, but that gentleman replied that he felt he had done his duty by it and could do no more and would do no less.

A WISE PROCEEDING

Sound on the Cheese Question.

In regard to Canadian cheese it may be noted that Lord Lansdowne has declared that he had had repeatedly the pleasure of tasting Canadian cheese, which he found it impossible to distinguish from the finest grades of English Stilton, and Canadian cheesemakers were, he believed, becoming better able to hold their own against competition on the other side of the frontier. The testimony of the committee specially appointed by the New York produce exchange to discuss the relative qualities of Canadian and American cheese recognizes that every exertion must be used to secure a high standard of quality, if they are to preserve New York city as the outlet for the bulk of the shipments

A FATEFUL RIDE.

"You might ask for it," he replied slowly, "by deliberately leading me on to love you for your mere amusement: for pretending to care for two men at once; for wilfully telling me false, when you knew it was no matter of jest to me; for giving me such bitter cruel pain as I pray you may never know." His tone broke for an instant, then hardened the more for that moment's weakness. "You might ask forgiveness, indeed; only, of course, it is but a matter of sport for you."

"I find it no matter of sport to be accused unjustly, and of things I really do not even understand. I—I can only gather from your curious reproaches that—that you repent of what you term a temporary loss of your senses last evening, and wish our half-formed engagement to be at an end. Is that it, Captain Gorden?"

She only knew what it cost her to speak those few words calmly and without tremor; her pride must have been the strongest thing about her, stronger even than her love just then, or she must have failed.

He looked at her a minute steadily, coldly at first, then sorrowfully, then pleadingly, but her eyes were gazing out of the window over the darkening garden and park, and her face was expressionless and hard.

"She has no heart. All women are alike; the sweeter they look the less true are they," he said bitterly to himself. Then aloud: "Why did you deceive me so pointedly last evening Madeline?"

"I never deceived you; but, if you doubt my word then, why ask me anything now?"

"You had an appointment with that man?"

"I had none with Mr. Charsley."

"With whom then?"

"I am not at liberty to tell you."

"Another!" he burst forth madly "Miss Ayre, you are a model flirt indeed."

"Thank you. Knowing your opinion of flirts, I can fully appreciate that compliment," with a graceful bow.

"Can you deny that you rode from over the moor and up to this very house with Harold Charsley last evening?"

"I shall not take the trouble to deny anything to you," Madeline said haughtily. "Your right to pry into my doings is at an end, if ever it existed. You—you evidently don't care for me really, and——"

"Would any girl have dismissed the man she really cared for, to ride out at dark to meet secretly another?" Gorden burst forth jealously.

She smiled irritatingly.

"I should say such a girl could exist only in your morbid imagination; but that seems vivid enough for anything."

"Madeline!" he came nearer her, his tones unsteady, his features pale with emotion, his eyes haggard and imploring; "Madeline, if you will look at me now and tell me the truth, I will forget and forgive all even now. I love you so madly"—his voice grew hoarse, his face was stirred—"I could almost take you back even without confession, against my better judgment."

"I wish you to take no step against your better judgement," she said coldly. "And I have nothing to confess that I am aware of."

"Did you, or did you not meet Charsley last evening?"

"I met him near home, by accident. I did not go out to meet him."

"Whom did you go out to meet?"

"I cannot tell you now; I may perhaps some day, but at present I am bound by a promise."

"To another man?" in mad jealousy.

"It is to a man—yes, but to no one whom even you need be jealous of. You could not be jealous"—with a faint flickering smiling—"if you knew the truth."

"Then why not tell me the truth?"

"Because I tell you I have promised to keep it secret, Lance." She went a step nearer to him, and raised her sweet eyes for one instant. "Would your trust in me be increased by my breaking a promise to another?"

"Why did you give the promise, Madeline? It sounds too improbable—too vague, this mysterious promise to someone unknown. Deceive me in one item, deceive me in all. Last evening you led me to believe you never saw Charsley, that you were surprised at his coming last night—to-day you admit that you did meet him, did ride with him. What can I believe?"

She went very pale, and the softened look died out of her proud dark eyes.

"If you choose not to believe my word, I think you have only one alternative, Captain Gorden."

"And that is——"

"To choose someone else who may be more truthful in your eyes."

He turned away with a bitter gesture.

"Perhaps you are right. There can be no love without trust and confidence——"

"Exactly, there can be no happiness—there is no love, to my way of thinking, without trust," she interrupted quickly.

"So I must ask you, as you refuse me your confidence, to let me take back all that passed between us last evening," he finished bitterly.

"To set you free, in fact, to woo and win elsewhere?" she said with a kind of laugh. "Captain Gorden, I think you might rejoice in the title of flirt to perfection. Yes, you can go free."

She uttered the last words in a kind of monotonous whisper, turning meanwhile away from him, and leaning over the fire.

He went to the door, and then he paused for that backward glance so often unsafe. He paused and looked at the slight figure in its trailing black velvet dress, at the rounded arm raised to the mantelpiece, and gleaming white from under the lace thrown back above it, at the little dusky head bowed sadly towards the firelight, and then he came back with three hasty strides, and catching the girl in his arms pressed one last passionate burning kiss upon her lips—a kiss he had no right to give—a kiss of farewell, perhaps, to all that might have been, but a kiss that disturbed her composure and proud coldness as nothing else could have done.

Had it been less dark in the room he must have seen the change in her face, and stayed after he had kissed her, but the dusk hid it, and she uttered no word; she only freed herself hurriedly and pushed him away, then stood trembling until he had left the room, and she heard the front-door shut loudly behind him: then she just fell down a velvet heap upon the rug, and sobs—convulsive, stifled, passionate sobs—shook her form again and again; yet she only said to herself:

"How dare he treat me like that? If I die for love of him, I will never send for him back—never tell him the truth. But surely he will come back of his own free will to ask for pardon presently. He will find he cannot live without me; and then—and then——"

Alas for the then and then that never comes!

her sister, very gently, and she did not look at her while she spoke:

"Lance Gorden has not been here for a long time, Madeline."

"No."

Madeline was counting her knitting-stitches absorbedly.

"Did you have any quarrel with him, child? You are very hasty and apt to take offence, I know, at trifles."

"Yes—am I? I did not know."

"I thought—I hoped once—one evening when you and he were in the conservatory so long, that it was getting settled all right, Madeline."

"What do you call all right, Susanna? I am going to be an old maid like you, dear," with an uncertain laugh.

"Nonsense!" very sharply. "Do you mean to tell me you have refused Lance Gorden? You will never get such another chance, you silly, particular, coquettish girl. I have no patience——"

"Perhaps he refused me," said Madeline, getting up to look for some wool.

"Nonsense! How could a man refuse a lady?"

"Men can do very odd things, as you would have known if you had had more experience with them, my sister."

"Well, I suppose Lance will come and say good-bye to us before he starts for India. Of course he is in a desperate hurry, ordered off so unexpectedly; but——"

"Before he starts for where?" very sharply.

"India. Did not you see his regiment is one of those ordered out at once? This war, you see, makes——"

But before Miss Ayre could finish her sentence her young sister had gone; her knitting lay on the carpet, a tiny table, with Madeline's pet ferns upon it, was overturned, and the loose wools the girl had been sorting were scattered upon the floor, but Madeline herself had vanished.

Her room door upstairs was locked, and dead silence reigned within, for Miss Ayre troubled herself to go up presently and apply her ear to the key-hole.

"She is not crying, certainly," said the old maid, consoled. "Perhaps, after all, she did not care for him, though I am certain he did for her. Heigho! I don't believe girls have hearts nowadays—I really don't. They will flirt, flirt, flirt, with first one and then another, saying anything and meaning nothing, until they really have no capacity for real affection left in them. It is a great pity!"

CHAPTER IV.

Ten years had passed, and the wheel of fortune had made many turns, dashing some of her favorites to the bottom, raising a few to insecure eminence.

Poor Madeline Ayre was at the bottom; there had come a mercantile crash in those ten years, that had overwhelmed her father with its ruin and desolation; then the old man's health had sank beneath the stroke, and, one week after, Miss Ayre's life was taken by a sudden attack of fever.

Madeline stood orphaned, and without relations or money, to fight her way single-handed in the battle of life, and earn her daily bread by teaching.

Ten years had passed, and she was a woman of nine-and-twenty instead of a girl of nineteen; there were silver threads in the abundance of her dark hair, a sad pathetic look in her eyes, and the bright witchery of manner was only seen at rare intervals now.

But she was charming still, so charming and pretty that every now and again some man, meeting her sweet glance, or hearing her sweet voice, fell in love with her, and she might have been married over and over again had she not been constant to the love of her life, constant to what was but a memory now, for she had had no word or sign from Lance Gorden since they parted that wintry afternoon in anger.

She had heard of him sometimes by casual mention in a newspaper; but he had passed out of her life after robbing it of all its brightness, and she could only think that he did not care.

She tried to tell herself that it was better so, that he never had loved her really, and that she was happily parted from one so inconstant, so jealous, so suspicious as he, but all the same she loved him yet, and no other man could take his place.

The sun was shining on the beach at Folkestone, and the band was playing, and Madeline was finding it very hard to draw her little pupil's attention from the sights and sounds outside to the lesson-books within, when the school-room door opened, and a pretty fair-haired girl of about eighteen entered.

"Miss Ayre, come out to the harbor with me, please; it is so lovely this morning. Let that child's lessons go, I am sure she has had enough for one day. I enjoyed the ball so awfully last night," the young lady went on, as she and Madeline strolled along to the harbor.

"Did you?" smiled Madeline, with the sympathy that made her so charming. "Did you have very delightful partners?"

"I had one delightful one," with a blush, "the nicest man I ever met. He danced with me four times, Miss Ayre, and we sat out twice."

"He must have been quite struck. What was he like?"

"Middle-aged, dark, stern, grave, military, you know. Major Gorden is his name. I was half afraid of him at first, but still he was so charming, I liked talking to him better than ony one I ever met," emphatically. "He was so clever and so reverential, don't you know? Most men are so silly, and pay such stupid compliments; Major Gorden never paid me one."

"No; I can quite imagine that was a charm," said the governess mechanically.

What was there just in the sound of an ordinary name to take her thoughts back to pain and regret?

"What regiment did he belong to, Flora?" she inquired falteringly.

"The ——st," said Flora Maxwell, and Madeline breathed again, for that had not been Lance Gorden's regiment.

The two ladies stood watching the boat come in from Boulogne, and remarking upon the different people around them, until, suddenly, Flora Maxwell flushed up, bowed smilingly, and whispered:

"There he is, Miss Ayre."

And Madeline turned to see a tall bronzed man, with dark hair turning grey, and a fine figure, bowing to and looking at Flora.

Just for an instant the whole scene grew misty and dark; Lance Gorden's face and Flora's, the boat, and the crowd, were lost to Madeline's sight, as with some instinct of self-preservation she turned and tried to walk away a few steps.

But she went dazedly against the railing, and she would have fallen had it not been for the prompt assistance of a stranger, an elderly man, standing near, who, without saying a word, held her up and supported her until she came to herself again.

Then he said, speaking very respectfully and kindly:

"If you will take my arm, I will get you a glass of water in the waiting-room; this sun is enough to make any one feel faint."

"Thank you," she said mechanically, accepting his proffered support, and going to the door, where out of Lance Gorden's sight.

The stranger waited upon her with a thoughtful gentleness she felt rather than noticed just then.

She sank into the seat he led her to, and struggled for the composure that so rarely deserted her, and he disappeared for a while, and left her to herself—the most grateful thing he could have done just then.

But when he reappeared presently, bringing her both wine and water, and she took the latter from his hand, there stole into her disturbed mind a dim wonder as to what made that rough kindly face familiar to her. Where had she seen it before?

"Can I get you a cab, or help you home?" he said considerately, when she rose at length, white and tired-looking, but perfectly composed again.

"No, thank you," said she gratefully. "I am quite well now; I have only a little way to go. Thank you very much."

She bowed farewell and left him; but turning, as she reached her own door, she saw that he had followed her at a little distance, as if to be in readiness if she should require aid again, and his kindly attention was soothing to her. She did not get too much of that nowadays.

Some little time after Flora came in, escorted to the door by Major Gorden.

In her quiet schoolroom Madeline heard his voice, and something said about the Pavilion Gardens that afternoon, before he left.

"Where did you get to, Miss Ayre?" Flora asked. "I lost you entirely in the crowd. Did you think," with a merry laugh, "that two were company, and three none? Now, did you have a good look at him? and what did you think of him? Is he not a splendid man?"

"I only just caught a glimpse of him," Madeline answered constrainedly. "He is a very handsome man, I think, Flora."

"And he is ever so much more charming than he looks. I am going to see him again in the Pavilion Gardens this afternoon," cried the gushing girl rapturously. "Oh, give me a friend's advice, and tell me what to wear—my pink satine, or my pale blue? Which suits me best?"

"Pale blue suits you best," said the governess, heroically stifling the pain at her heart.

Unmarried for all these years of separation, to appear now and pay attention before her eyes to this chit of a girl, her late pupil.

Ah well! men did like young girls often better than older women.

Flora was fresh and bright as she herself had been when Gorden fell in love with her; she, Madeline, was passe now, worn, and sad; the love that had deserted her youthful freshness was hardly likely to rekindle now.

No, she must school herself to see his attentions received by Flora, and to meet him herself as an old friend.

Flora was a nice true girl; she would make him happy, no doubt. So Miss Ayre sat and thought, and then the house seemed suddenly too hot and close for her burning heart and brain, and she took her hat and went up on the Leas to try and get a breeze to cool her headache.

The Leas were almost deserted this afternoon, for the band was playing in the Pavilion Gardens, and the fashionables were congregated there; so, sinking into a seat, Madeline sat watching the incoming tide until a voice arrested her attention.

"Are you feeling better now, madame?" the voice said.

Miss Ayre looked round, and there stood the stranger who had assisted her that morning, and again the dim wonder—where had she seen him before?—crossed her mind, but ere it had time to grow, the man said, speaking very respectfully, but in a confidential tone:

"Have you any remembrance of me, Miss Ayre? No, I suppose you have quite forgotten me."

"Your face seems familiar to me, but I cannot recollect your name," said Madeline, puzzled.

"You never heard it. I remember yours—it is, or was, Miss Madeline Ayre."

"It is; but whoever are you? How long ago ought I to remember you?" suddenly.

"Ten years ago; one winter's afternoon on the moor near H——; you on horseback, and I——"

"You were never that con——" with a flash of memory, starting up, then stopping with an apologetic glance at his respectable face and dress.

"I was an escaped convict then, whom you most generously succored. Perhaps you remember that I promised then to repay your kindness a hundred-fold if ever I had the opportunity. I have it now. When I came back to England I came to H—— on purpose to look for you, but I could there learn no trace of your whereabouts. I only heard that your father and sister were dead, and you alone in the world, in poverty, and earning your daily bread. Then I redoubled my efforts to find you, but it was by the merest chance. I happily espied you to-day. I recognised you instantly, though you are altered," looking at her.

"Yes, I am altered," she repeated sadly.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Peach Festival.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church will have a peach festival in the school room on Friday evening, 25th inst. Admission, 10 cents; refreshments extra. There will be a good musical programme. All are invited.

Anti-Scott.

The Anti-Scott meeting on Wednesday evening will be held in the drill shed, and not at the rink, as previously announced. Messrs. Mowat and Richardson will address the meeting.

To the Ladies.

A women's prayer meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall on Thursday, the 24th inst., from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Mothers, wives, daughters and sisters who are interested in this work are requested to attend.

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meteorological office:—Winds mostly northerly, gradually decreasing in force, generally fair, cool weather.

Carswell the Inimitable.

Edward Carswell will discourse on "Laughing" at the Opera House, to-morrow night. The Scott Act Association have secured him for the lecture, in order to defray in part, the heavy expenses of the campaign. It is not intended in any sense to be a jubilation over the expected victory, though the state of the polls will be announced during the evening. Every Scott Act supporter should secure a ticket, price 25 cents.

The New Hydrants.

Mr. W. Henderson, Superintendent of the Peterborough Water Works Company called at this office yesterday and said that Mr. C. R. Gray, of the Montreal Rubber Co., was laboring under a misapprehension in stating that the thirty new hydrants being provided for the water works extension are being threaded for the Maltese cross hose. The connection of the hydrants, he says, is of the same size as that at present in use, and Mr. Gray must have been misinformed.

Enforcing the Scott Act.

The undersigned, on behalf of the Scott Act Executive Committee, hereby announce their intention, in case the Scott Act is adopted, to employ a first-class Inspector to enforce the strict observance of the prohibitory provisions of the Act, and to prosecute to the full limits of the law any infraction thereof.

Notice of Visit.

I have the pleasure of announcing to the residents of Peterborough and vicinity that Mr. P. H. Morris, formerly of the firm of Lazarus & Morris, and now from the establishment of B. Laurance, of Montreal, and London, England, will be at my store during the three days on which our Central Exhibition is held, viz., Tuesday and Wednesday, the 29th and 30th Sept., and on Thursday, the 1st of Oct., for the purpose of adjusting the B. Laurance genuine pebble and other spectacles and eyeglasses for every requirement of the eye. He is especially qualified by his long experience and thorough knowledge of his profession, to give just such spectacles, &c., as are best suited in each case, however difficult, and afford relief where relief is possible. This, added to the acknowledged superiority of the B. Laurance pebble spectacles and eyeglasses, ensures to wearers and others needing aids to sight great advantages not otherwise attainable. Remember dates of visits to my store. JOHN MCKEE, chemist and druggist.

ATHLETICS.

Lacrosse.

THE GAME THIS AFTERNOON.

The members of the Cannington lacrosse club arrived in town last night and put up at the Little Windsor Hotel. They had not been long in town before it was noised abroad that they objected to playing on the Ashburnham grounds, and this proved to be correct. Until a late hour to-day they flatly refused to play except on the new grounds, although it was explained to them that no gate money could be expected if the arrangements were altered. To-day, about 2 o'clock, the referee, Mr. Brennan, of Norwood, notified them that the Ashburnham grounds met all the requirements of the rules of the game, and a refusal to play on their part would count as a defeat for them. After some further kicking they made up their minds to play and started for the field.

What they are Saying.

We don't want to play in the hen-coop.—The Canningtons.

You can play or go home.—The boys.

I did my solo up Brown.—A. D. Browne.

I'm going to speak at Mowat's meeting to-night.—Rev. B. B. Keefer.

Mr. Keefer shan't speak at my meeting to-night.—Moses.

We'll go and see the fuss, anyhow.—The people.

What We May Expect.

A crowded meeting at the drill shed to-night.

People to feel relieved when the trouble is all over.

The M. P. P. to be disappointed at the small turn-out to his Adullamite meeting last night.

Reports of lightning casualties.

Carswell's lecture on "Laughing" to-morrow night.

We Would Like to Know.

Who posted the Canningtons about the hen-coop.

And if they ever played on as good a lacrosse ground before, anyhow.

Whether Peterborough will play a return baseball match with Cobourg this year.

If Moses Oates will allow Mr. Keefer to speak at the drill shed to-night.

And what the reverend gentleman will do if he wont.

Or say if he will.

If there will be a rumpus.

Another Chance to hear Carswell, who drew the immense audience on Monday evening.

Polling Returns

will be made public at Ed. Carswell's lecture on "Laughing" at the Opera House Thursday night.

Offices Removed.

Messrs. Stone & Masson, barristers, etc., have removed their law offices from the Bradburn block, Simcoe street, to a commodious suite of new rooms in the Darcy block, Hunter street.

An Active Advertiser.

Mr. D. Belleghem, ever on the alert for a business opportunity, has purchased the privilege of placing an immense advertising board over the entrance to the agricultural ground. $25, the amount it is costing him seems high, but Mr. Belleghem knows what he is about, and his furniture advertisements is sure to be one of the features of the fair.

A Popular Pastime.

The popular Parlor Rink on Water street is one of the best patronized amusements in town, and large numbers of ladies and gentlemen daily indulge in the exhilarating pastime there. Care, courtesy and correct deportment are the prominent features insisted on by the management.

Organ Recital.

The unseasonably cold and gale-like weather of last evening operated to make the attendance at the Organ Recital at St. John's less than it would have been under more favorable circumstances, but those who were present enjoyed a rare musical treat. An excellent programme was provided, and it was smoothly carried out, and without the delay that usually attends amateur entainments. Of course, the burden of the programme fell upon Mr. Hampshire, the organist, half of the numbers being selections for the organ, and the manner in which he rendered the choice and difficult gems, of the great classical composes, confirmed the reputation he has already won in Peterborough as an organist of first-rate abilities, both in technique and taste. Prof. Parker also gave highly appreciated assistance in the rendition of two selection in his usual artistic manner. The choral numbers were beautifully given, and it is no detraction from the merit of the performers to say that the excellent time, harmony, and shading that characterised the singing showed evidences of skillful and careful training on the part of the choirmaster, Mr. Hampshire. Great credit is also due those singers who took solos or solo parts incidental to the several choral selections. Miss Ada Errett, in her aria from Mendelssohn, "O rest in the Lord," acquitted herself in an exceedingly creditable manner. Mr. S. D. Craven sang with very pleasing effect Mendelssohn's "O Come, Let us Worship," and also the tenor solo in Rossini's anthem, "To the Great Lord." The baritone solo in this selection was taken by Mr. T. Dunn, and his effort was worthy of every praise. He has a rich, full voice, which, under thorough training will place him well up in the ranks of the first amateurs. Mr. A. D. Brown rendered, in a manner characterized by distinct enunciation and well-judged emphasis, Terrington's solo, "Abide With Me." Mr. Hampshire's closing number, especially the first part, Thomas' gavotte, was pronounced by many the gem of the evening, was listened to with delight, and was a fitting close to an excellently selected and presented programme of classical music.

Wedded.

Marriage of Mr. W. A. Sanderson to Miss Alice M. Wesson.

Another of Peterborough's marriageable young men, in spite of Punch's laconic advice, "Don't!" has been and gone and done it. Mr. Will. A. Sanderson, the enterprising and popular young jeweller, has taken a wife unto himself, the young lady being Miss Alice M. Wesson, only daughter of Mr. J. Wesson, of Warsaw, at whose residence the marriage ceremony was performed yesterday afternoon by Rev. E. F. Torrance, pastor of St. Paul's Church. The bride, who was supported by Misses Lily Dickson, Alice Lynne and Ida Maw, wore a dress of white Oriental lace, with a bodice and sash of brocaded white satin; Miss Dickson was attired in cream-colored nuns' veiling, with Spanish lace, and Miss Lynne in pale pink nuns' veiling, with Oriental lace, while Miss Maw's costume was of pale blue cashmere and satin, with lace trimmings. Mr. William Lech, jr., officiated as groomsman. The bridal presents were numerous and beautiful, and included a handsome walnut bedroom set, a diamond set of jewelry and a solid silver tea set, presented by the bridegroom, a silver butter cooler, silver cake basket, three handsome lamps, candlesticks with shades, 2 fruit dishes, 2 silver egg stands, pickle cruet, a handsome berry set of 13 pieces, plush jewel and dressing cases, hand-painted plaques, an elegant carving set in plush case, a hand-painted jardiniere, Japanese handkerchief case, silver card receiver, hand-painted tidies and whisk cases, and a profusion of other fancy articles too numerous to mention. Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson returned to town last evening and left on the night train for the west, and will visit Toronto, Detroit, Chicago, and other points of interest during their wedding tour. The bride, dressed in a handsome brown travelling costume, looked charming; while the happy husband, radiant with smiles, looked a fitting mate for so fair a daughter of Eve. THE EXAMINER heartily joins in the chorus of good wishes that followed the happy pair on their wedding tour.

Peremptory Payment.

R. W. Simpson brought an action at the Police Court this morning to recover $69, wages due him by A. D. Faucher. The information was laid under the provisions of the Seaman's Act of 1873, plaintiff having been employed as engineer on the defendant's steamboat Pearl, and the prosecution was conducted by Mr. Stone, of Stone & Masson. The defendant failed to appear and an order was given for payment of $54 and costs within 24 hours, plaintiff having received $15 on account. This is the first action ever brought under the provisions of this act in town.

DISORDERLY DOINGS.

The Attempted Mowat-Keefer Discussion Ends in a Fizzle.

But the Weather Prophet Holds the Fort.

From half past seven till eight o'clock last evening large numbers of citizens of all degrees might have been seen hurrying northward on George street, and entering the drill shed, and at the latter hour that building was about three parts filled by a audience, the bulk of which was composed of business men and artisans, the remainder consisting of the small number of ladies who ventured out, and the inevitable and irrepressible small boy, who was present in great force and high spirits. Upon the platform at the end of the building stood a small table, lighted by two dim oil lamps, and covered with books, newspapers, etc. Shortly after eight o'clock Mr. J. Gordon Mowat, better known as Moses Oates, appeared on the platform, accompanied by Mr. Richardson and Mr. C. W. Sawers. The latter gentleman came forward to the railing and said that he had been requested to assume the chairmanship of the meeting. It had been arranged, he said, that Rev. Mr. Keefer or some other gentleman on behalf of the Scott Act should be allowed an hour's hearing after Mr. James Stevenson, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Mowat had addressed the meeting. He trusted a fair and impartial hearing would be accorded to everyone. Rev. Mr. Keefer, who had made his appearance on the platform as soon as his name was mentioned, asked the chairman if he could not be granted the hour of the Liberal Temperance Union and not after they had concluded. This Mr. Mowat would not consent to, and the reverend gentleman next asked that a guarantee be given that he should speak not later than eleven o'clock, a request which was backed up by the audience. With the understanding that this was to be the case Mr. Keefer resumed his chair, and the chairman called on Mr. James Stevenson to address the meeting. From the very commencement of the proceedings it had been evident that a disorderly spirit pervaded the meeting, and when Mr. Stevenson rose to address it, he was received with a mingled storm of cheers, groans, hisses and screeching. At every attempt he made to speak for a few seconds this was repeated, but Mr. Stevenson would not be said nay, and a better spirit at length prevailed and comparative order was secured. Mr. Stevenson then, in a brief but forcible and manly speech, explained the position he took in reference to this matter. He had doubts, he said, about the Dunkin Act at the time it was passed, and he had doubts that the Scott Act, too, would prove an utter failure. He held the belief that a prohibitory act, to be effectual, must embrace the entire Dominion. He did not believe that Peterborough was worse than other places, though he was sorry to believe that it was getting worse because the license act was not properly looked after, but the Dunkin Act had not improved things and he did not believe that the Scott Act would. He believed that those who voted for the Act would be for the tavern keepers would still sell whisky and pay no license. He referred to the way the Act had been found to work in Orillia, and said that people who themselves drank were the only ones who knew what the effects of the Act were. It was no use to ask a tavern keeper or a clergyman how the Act worked, for one did not know and the other would not tell. He stood prepared to vote for any law that would exclude liquor from the whole community, from Toronto as well as Peterborough. And he was not a drinking man, as the audience knew, he would as soon take a glass of salts as whisky. If the Scott Act passed he believed there would be more whisky drank in the course of the next year than ever before. The revenue of $5,000 would be lost to the town and instead of our taxes [being 12½ mills on the dollar next year they would be fifteen mills. It would take $60 a year out of his pocket in taxes. It was all very well for Mr. Keefer, who paid no taxes here, to say we should not regard it in that light, but men who liked whiskey would still have it, and the taxpayers would suffer. Again expressing his entire sympathy with temperance; his willingness to support any act that put down the liquor traffic of the entire country, and hoping the ratepayers would view the matter in a dispassionate light, and vote as they thought best in the matter, Mr Stevenson left the platform.

BETWEEN THE SPEAKERS

INJURING PETERBOROUGH,

Mr. C. Gordon Richardson then advanced to the front of the platform and remarked that it was a painful task—a statement received by the audience with uproarious laughter—to have to oppose men occupying high positions in religious circles. After speaking of the opinions of Mr. Goldwin Smith, Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, Rev. Prof. Clark, of Trinity College, Rev. A. H. Baldwin, and Dr. Howard Crosby, in regard to coercive liquor legislation, he took up the scientific aspect of the matter. His assertion that alcohol was a food was received in comparative silence, but when he denounced salt as a poison the audience broke into derisive cheers, and a voice called out, "Talk about the Act." At this point the chairman requested better order in the audience. Mr. Richardson went on to speak of the infamous tyranny of the Act and to claim that there was no intemperance in Canada compared with other countries. An allusion made by him to the city of Glasgow, where, he said, women might be seen drunk on Sunday afternoon in the public streets, called forth a chorus of groans and hisses from the Gaelic portion of the audience. He subsequently charged that more people were sent to the insane asylum through religious excitement than from the effects of liquor, a statement that once more raised a storm of hisses, groans and objurations.

The chairman made an endeavor to restore order and Mr. Richardson, after a few more remarks, finished up by appealing to his hearers, to "vote as they would wish they had done when they came to their dying bed."

Mr. J. Gordon Mowat commenced speaking at about 9.30 and said that he stood on the platform to oppose what he believed to be a mere wave of the 19th century, which, like many other waves, would subside and die away. He proceeded to denounce the Act as in opposition to

THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ETERNAL, to whom alone he acknowledged allegiance, although he might be submitting himself to the persecution of pharisaical people. He went on and heaped up objections, Scriptural, scientific and social, against the Act, after which he transported his hearers to Vermont, Maine, Kansas and other prohibition states, in which he unearthed from official records and other sources a quantity of evidence to prove that prohibition had failed to prohibit, and increased crime. Coming nearer home, Mr. Mowat brought his hearers to Halton county, and was busily engaged in showing them what a miserable failure the Scott Act had been there, when the town clock struck eleven. This was the signal for the audience, who had all through manifested much impatience, to shut off the speaker, and loud cries of "time!" "Keefer!" "sit down!" etc., went up from the crowd. Mr. Mowat still endeavored to be heard, and raising his voice above the din, said he would be listened to or no one else should. The row continuing, the mayor, who with Mr. Dumble and some other gentlemen, was seated in a corner of the platform, rose and conferred with the speaker for a few moments, and then addressing the meeting said that it had been understood between the Scott Act Committee and Messrs. Calcutt and Stevenson, on behalf of the Union, that Mr. Keefer would be allowed to speak between speakers of the Union. He thought Mr. Keefer

SHULD NOW BE ALLOWED TO SPEAK.

The uproar continued; the chairman, on rising to request silence, was met with cries of "Shut up!" "Sit down!" After another conference Mr. Mowat denied that any such arrangement as mentioned by Mr. Cox had been made.

Some of the audience asked him to state how much longer he wanted to speak, but this he would not do, expressing his determination to stay till morning if he was not let go on.

Mr. D. W. Dumble came to the front of the platform and essayed to speak, but the spirit of mischief was rife in the crowd, and the deafening din drowned out his utterance. By his pantomine, however, it was understood that he wanted Mowat to continue, and the uproar abating a little, he at last managed to say, "Let him go on, the longer he talks the better." This was met with loud cheers, an Mr. Mowat resumed his subject. He now took up the Scriptural aspect of the business, and presently made the assertion that the Bible did not anywhere countenance total abstinence. This again aroused the audience, and more disorder ensued. He then went on to show that other human weaknesses caused crime as well as drink, saying that a girl might fall from virtue through

THE LOVE OF DRESS.

This was met by a tornado of hissing groans and cat calls; and the Indian war cry from different parts of the building betrayed the presence in the audience of some of the North-west heros. Failing to get a hearing, Mr. Mowat sat down on the railing, and then moved over and sat down on the table. He was greeted with cries of "get him a tooth pick!" "go home!" etc. The chairman raised his voice above the din and said he had requested Mr. Mowat not to speak again until perfect silence was restored, and made some remarks about the conduct of the audience, which were inaudible, but in which he asserted that he was a Presbyterian.

Mr. Mowat again made an essay to speak, advancing to the railing, he solemnly said: "Friends and pharisees——" What more he would have said was drowned in the roars that ensued. The chairman again tried his hand, but the audience would have none of him, and he retired discomfited. Some one in the audience then struck up "God save the Queen," in which the whole crowd joined. This was followed by "We won't go home till morning," "Rule Brittannia," parodies on "Hold the fort" and other songs. It was by this time approaching midnight, and the caretaker came on the platform and wanted to put the lights out, but was persuaded not to. Just at this time the Rev. W. A. McKay made an appearance and there were cries for him to speak. Still the uproar continued without cessation and the drill shed was for the time being. After a considerable pause the chairman advanced to the platform and raised his right arm as if to implore order. The audience, however, kept up the racket, and the chairman kept up his hand, so long indeed that some began to fear it must be paralyzed. Then occurred an amusing incident recalling the biblical story of Moses, Varon and Hur, only in this case, Moses, instead of having his hands supported, was himself the supporter, holding up Mr. Sawers' arm on his shoulder. This of course excited great merriment in the crowd. At 12.25 Mr. Keefer, seeing that all chance of anyone else speaking had fled, gathered up his traps and did likewise, being followed by a large number in the audience. Quite a crowd remained, however, and crowded up close to the platform. Mr. Mowat again attempted to continue his address, and again was interrupted, although it was evident that many in the front of the crowd wanted to hear him. Although no one could hear a word he said, he still talked on, gesticulating fiercely, and emphasizing his unheard periods by clinching his fist and thumping the railing vigorously. The chairman espying Constable Pidgeon in the throng, called upon him to arrest some of the disturbers of order, but Pidgeon evidently felt that he would have a tough time in doing so, and indeed it would have been hard for him

TO MAKE A SELECTION.

Mr. Richardson, who had been pacing up and down the platform, got his eye on some individual whom he thought should be arrested and made a dive down and collared the offender, at the same time calling the constable to arrest him. The crowd surged around them and the policeman seized on the irate Professor himself, and for some moments a conflict seemed imminent. The crowd swayed and surged, and at length gathered in the south-west corner of the building, where, after some explanations, he was released, and again mounted to the platform, the crowd again collecting directly under it. The chairman again addressed the meeting, saying that, as the hour was so late, no further attempt would be made to speak, and, giving three hearty cheers for the Queen, the disorderly gathering dispersed.

It is only fair to the audience to say that the opposition with which Mr. Stevenson was met was not owing to any disrespect of him or his views, but to the desire of the audience that a definite hour should be assigned at which Mr. Keefer should speak.

Considering the nature of the meeting, the utmost good humour was manifested on the whole, and until 11 o'clock Mr. Mowat was accorded a fair hearing, with a little interruption. The disturbance was doubtless chiefly caused by a number of young fellows, who, with no decided sympathies either way, were bent on having lots of fun, and it is to be hoped they were satisfied with the success they met.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

The Hose Question.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice in recent issues of your paper, two articles regarding fire hose, and as they are somewhat personal, permit me to give my version and correct the statements made by a Mr. Gray, now, it appears, an agent of the Canadian Rubber Co., and Mr. English, with reference to the part taken by me in this matter.

Some time ago I noticed in one of your issues that your Council resolved to purchase 200 feet fire hose, and in the interests of our company, I submitted a sample of our justly celebrated Maltese Cross brand, a fire hose in use in all the principal cities and towns of Canada and the United States, and after a thorough examination by your fire committee, your Council, I believe, unanimously selected this hose as the one most suitable, and consequently gave me the order, at the same time directing me to have it coupled with coarse thread couplings, similar to those in use in the Toronto fire department, and it would have made no differences to us what size thread was required, as we have to be guided in that by the instructions of our customers. With reference to former purchases I never said that one hose was 2 ply and the other 3 ply, and I suppose that is a misrepresentation arising from the fact that one hose is is lighter and inferior to the other, which is really the case as ascertained and reported by your chief of the fire brigade and others. Mr. Gray says after a searching investigation he found 500 feet of the first lot of Eureka hose purchased. There is, however, only 350 feet of this lot left and it is, in my opinion, the best cotton hose you have. Mr. Gray omitted to tell your reporter why the Chief of the Trenton Fire Department interviewed his company, which was to insist upon their sending 200 feet of Eureka 3 ply hose which their department had purchased, and for which two ply or Paragon hose had been sent. Further comment upon this transaction is unnecessary. As regards Mr. English, he probably feels annoyed because I noticed the very dirty condition of the fine Silsby engine belonging to your town, but he admits his lack of knowledge in running a machine of this sort by saying, "The firemen are in the habit of folding and standing upon the hose to stop the flow of water while they remove a burst length, which it would be quite impossible to do if the engine was working up to even ordinary pressure. With the reports of your Fire Committee and Department I had nothing whatever to do, and emphatically deny using the slightest improper means to induce your committee to favor our goods, nor do I think your chairman or any other member of your Council are to be approached in any other than a strictly honourable and business-like way.

Trusting you will allow this letter space in your valuable paper, and treat me with the same courtesy extended to my misapprehenders, I remain,

Yours respectively,

Agent the Gutta Percha and Rubber Manufacturing Company.

Tee-total Tactics!

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—A document headed, "Appeal to the Electors of the Town of Peterborough," and purporting to be signed by a large number of the ladies of the town, calling upon the electors to vote for the Scott Act on this the 24th inst., accidentally came to my notice this moment—and as I know that several of the names have been used without the sanction or knowledge of the parties, I hereby desire to enter my protest against such unfair and dishonorable tactics by the promoters of the Act—especially coming from men who claim to be actuated by such high and philanthropic motives as those gentlemen profess.

I pronounce the use of those names as an unwarranted forgery and altogether unworthy any cause that has for its object the promotion of morality and religion.

Yours, etc.,
T. G. H.

Carswell To-Night.

There is likely to be a laughing time at the Opera House to-night, when Mr. E. Carswell will deliver his celebrated lecture on "Laughing." Particulars of how the vote has gone throughout the county will be given. Admission, 25 cents.

Fatal Faction Fight.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 25.—In a fight in Letcher county yesterday, between the Jones and Wright factions, Dulp Draughne, deputy sheriff, Sam Cook and William Francis were killed.

Railway Rates.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The president of the trunk line railways yesterday decided to advance rates on five different classes of freights westward bound, to 60, 50, 45, 25 and 20 cents respectively, an increase of about 50 per cent. over the present rates. The discussion of east bound freight was postponed for ten days.

Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23.—Sir Charles Tupper left for Victoria, B. C., by the Northern Pacific Railway this morning. He had a conference with the Local Government yesterday, regarding the Colonial Exhibition. He was accompanied west by Mr. Andrew Robertson and Colonel Bond, of Montreal.

Several of Big Bear's band were arraigned at Battleford yesterday, in connection with the Frog Lake outrage. All pleaded guilty. Wandering Spirit, accused of murder, pleaded guilty to having killed Quinn. All will be sentenced to-morrow.

The Roumelian Revolution.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—There is an increasing belief in diplomatic circles on the continent that a conference of powers will be convened for the purpose of settling the Roumelian affair. The panic in the silver market is abating and rates have risen on a demand from the continent.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 23.—The Turkish Third Army corps in Anatolia is being mobilized. The officials of the Adrianople Railway have been ordered to prepare for the transportation of troops. All other traffic on the road will be stopped. Turkey has made a firm protest against the systematic persecution of Turkish subjects in Southern Russia.

VIENNA, Sept. 23.—The rumor that Austria is mobilising her army is untrue.

Prince Alexander of Bulgaria, has sent despatches to the signatory powers of the Berlin treaty, explaining his action in regard to Roumelia.

It is stated that Prince Alexander has expressed the intention of reconciling himself as far as possible with the agents of the Sultan. The Prince is reported, with that view, to be negotiating directly with the Sultan. Severe fighting has occurred between Turks and Albanians at Djakovo. Both sides lost heavily.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 23.—The Viedomosti says Russia has no objection to the union of Roumelia and Bulgaria, but her future action will depend upon the manner in which the union is carried out.

A WET BLANKET AFFAIR.

As to the matter of blankets. The cold suggests the subject. The meeting of the blanket manufacturers also acts as a reminder. A meeting of the Blanket Manufacturers' Association was held in Toronto last week. Each member handed in a statement showing the number of pairs of blankets made this year, and also the number of pairs on hand. It was found that the total quantity made was not more than one-quarter of last year's output, and the stock on hand now is very considerably less than the stock at the end of 1884. This simply means that these disinterested gentlemen reduce the output in order to keep up the price. Thus the N. P. nips the consumer on both sides. The duty of 7½ cents per pound, and an additional ad valorem duty of 20 per cent. doesn't make the consumer shiver enough, so the blanket builders meet in conspiracy and arrange to lessen the production—produce an artificial scarcity and thus put up the price. This is encouraging to the poor man, this is encouraging to the lumbering industry, it is encouraging in every way—to our monopolists and ringsters. Putting one's hand into a Canadian consumer's pocket, and filching his purse is robbery and a crime punishable by imprisonment, but the legalized and systematic robbery made possible by the National Policy, is this much worse; it is as effectual robbery, but it is condoned by statute. The source of law supplies the warrant to plunderers. The people have the remedy in their own hands.

THE ROUMELIAN REVOLUTION.

It is claimed by diplomats that the revolt of Roumelia against Turkish rule, and its declaration of independence, re-opens the eastern question and threatens to lead to serious continental complications. Our readers will therefore be interested in learning more of the country than is afforded by general geographical knowledge. Roumelia lies just south of Bulgaria, from which it is divided by the Balkan mountains. It has an area of 13,500 square miles and a population of 850,000, of whom nearly 600,000 are Bulgars, 175,000 Turks, 40,000 Greeks, and the remainder Gypsies, Jews and Armenians. Philipopolis, the capital, contains 26,000 inhabitants. Agriculture is the chief industry of the country, wheat, barley, rye and corn being the principal crops. Attar of roses is also an important product, amounting to $500,000 yearly, and Eastern Roumelia is the only European country in which it is made. A considerable amount of wine, tobacco and silk cocoons is also produced and numerous live stock of all kinds. Woolen cloth is largely manufactured in several places. The state has up to the present formed a part of the Turkish empire. But the treaty of Berlin (July 13, 1878,) gave it local administrative autonomy and provided that it should have a Christian Governor-General. Bulgaria, to which revolutionary state it has annexed itself, was by that same treaty of Berlin made an "autonomous and tributary principality" under the suzerainty of the Sultan, having a Christian Government and national militia. Prince Alexander is a son of Prince Alexander, of Hesse, and nephew of the Empress of Russia He was, according to the treaty, elected by the people, and confirmed by the Porte with the consent of the powers, his title being hereditary.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. Hare, one of the Professors in the Agricultural College, died Wednesday. The deceased gentleman was a distinguished graduate of Victoria University. He took a three or four years' post graduate course in Germany, where he obtained his degree of Ph. D., having devoted his time exclusively to scientific studies. He was for about two years science master of the Hamilton Collegiate Institute. He left Hamilton early in 1882 for Guelph Agricultural College, and was soon after married to a Miss Graham from eastern Ontario. He has been a hard worker in Guelph.

Presbytery of Peterborough.

Meeting at Port Hope.

The Presbytery of Peterborough met Tuesday in the First Presbyterian church, for the transaction of ordinary business. There was a large attendance of ministers and elders. The Rev. J. W. Mitchel, M. A., of this town, was appointed Moderator for the ensuing six months. The congregations of Grafton and Vernonville extended a hearty and unanimous call to the Rev. Mr. Mackenzie. It was sustained by the Presbytery. Owing to his present illness, the date of induction could not be fixed.

The congregation of Brighton asked leave to sell their present place of worship, with a view to purchase and occupy the late Episcopal Methodist church. Leave was granted and a deputation appointed to visit Colborne, Lakefield and Brighton, to confer with the congregations regarding the erection of a separate pastoral charge at Brighton.

A cordial and unanimous call from the congregations of Lakefield and North Smith was extended to the Rev. John McEwen, Secretary of the Provincial S. S. Association. It was sustained and accepted by telegram; the induction to take place in Lakefield on the 27th Oct.

A communication from Mrs. Jas. Craick, Secretary of the Presbyterial W. F. Society, was read. The Presbytery heartily endorsed the work of the Society and expressed the hope that the congregations in which there are as yet no societies, would soon avail themselves of this means of fostering a missionary spirit among their people and of raising funds for the prosecution of Foreign Mission work.

The Presbytery, at the recommendation of the Committee on the State of Religion, agreed to hold conferences with congregations on the matter, during the coming winter.

After the transaction of a large amount of business, the Presbytery adjourned to meet in Peterborough on the 12th of January.—Guide.

The Future of Liberalism.

That Liberalism is the hope of the world, as it has been the salvation of Great Britain, is becoming, in an increasing degree, the general opinion. In Great Britain any doubt that may have existed on this subject has been completely set at rest by the cordiality with which the Radicals, Whigs and ordinary Liberals are now co-operating It was their lack of solidarity which caused the defeat of Mr. Gladstone on the subject of the beer and other duties, and it has been only that deficiency which has, thus far, been the means of weakening them. In Liberalism, in the light of the manifestoes of Mr. Gladstone, the Marquis of Hartington and Mr. Chamberlain, lies the hope of Great Britain, which, realizing that as compared with "the vigorous foreign policy" of the Tories, the Liberal administration of home affairs leaves nothing to be desired, for wars and rumors of war, no matter the amount of glamour and "glory" that attend them, exercise no beneficial effect upon the masses whose function is to do and to suffer, while the substantial benefits and honors devolve upon those who, as a rule have but scant sympathy with them, except as concerns the personal and sectional advantages that are to be derived.

Liberalism bids fair to be the salvation of Great Britain at the present crisis, while in Canada there appears to be nothing outside of it that can prevent the national decadence. In the Provinces, where Liberal administrations have had the control of affairs, there has been effective and at the same time economic management, while under Conservative institutions as, we may say in this province, the accomplishments have been far beneath their professions, the Liberal influence having been almost all that has prevented ruin and destruction. For instance, in Quebec we are, as it were, on our last legs, while, as concerns the Dominion, we are rapidly approaching that condition of things when in order to prevent the direst of consequences it is essential that we shall have an entire change in our fiscal and our financial system. In Ontario safety and prosperity have been found in Liberalism, and this there are few who will be sufficiently rash to deny. The public, although there are many who hesitate to openly admit it, can see salvation in nothing short of an entire change in the personnel and party complexion of those who have in hand the conduct of our Dominion affairs, and the suppression of those who in the provinces are hanging on to power to the public disadvantage.—Montreal Times.

A FATEFUL RIDE.

Chapter IV.—Continued.

Another voice fell on her ear at that moment, and as it thrilled through her Madeline looked up to see Lance Gorden with a boy companion passing along within a few inches of her seat.

Major Gorden never glanced her way but for her very life Madeline could not help the flush of crimson, and then the deadly whiteness that overspread her face, and her companion noticed it, then followed the direction of her eyes significantly.

"Shall I never learn to meet him without agitation?" Madeline asked of herself bitterly; then turning quickly to the man beside her, she said with an effort: "Tell me how you got on after I saw you that evening, please?"

"I escaped in safety. I really don't believe that but for your kindly help I could have done so, but your food gave me new strength, your kind words—do you remember them?" looking at her with a smile, "courage and heart. I got to A——, to the gold-diggings, and I, so unlucky in my life before, was lucky there; where thousands failed, I made a fortune. But a few years ago," his tones deepened and softened, "I got what I valued far more than the gold I had found—my good name again. The true criminal confessed the crime for which I had suffered, and I was publicly cleared, and tardy recompense made me for the injustice I had suffered. You see the darkest clouds roll away sooner or later," looking at her sad sweet face earnestly.

"Yours have done so. I am so glad,' she whispered, giving him her hand as she raised her eyes to his brightly for a moment.

"Yours will do," he responded, and as she half shook her head, he continued: "Once I thought no power could brighten my life; now, save for memories, there is no darkness about it."

"I am so glad," she said again sympathetically.

"And yours shall be as bright if power of mine can do anything to help it," he said heartily. "Yes, yes, you are far too young, far too good, far too pretty—excuse the remark—to sit down in sorrow and regret. Of course loss of friends and relations, cannot be restored, but time softens that, and loss of money can be soon made right."

"You must not," she said, looking at him in sudden alarm; "you must not give——"

"I must not show gratitude for what in all probability saved my life. That is rather a hard order, Miss Ayre. I must not have the pleasure that I have thought of constantly for ten years—a pleasure doubled now by the fact that my gratitude can really do you some good! I don't think you will be quite as hard upon me as that. You took me as your friend in my extremity and shame, you know; you gave me a friendly hand then; surely you are not going to cast me off coldly now."

"I shall be glad to have you as a friend indeed," she said with a little sob, "for I need one sorely."

CHAPTER V.

"Ah, you have spent ten years in India, I think you said; that is one of the few places I have not been to. I spent ten years in Australia."

"I should like to try Australian life, I think," said the other. "If less conventional, it is more hearty and thorough, I imagine, than English or Indian."

"Pretty well, but there are shams everywhere. You have, now, one great advantage in most parts of India that we are terribly deficient in—ladies' society."

"Yes, we have that—hence the shams," said Major Gorden dryly.

The conversation was between two people walking upon the Leas.

Major Gorden and a man staying at the same hotel, James Hicks by name, and who had cultivated Gorden's acquaintanceship in billiard and smoking rooms, until they had arrived at the stage of exchanging confidences about past adventures.

"You are rather hard on the fair sex," said the older man with a smile. "Have you had more or worse experience of it than most men?"

"I have had enough," said Gorden, speaking very shortly, "to know there is no woman on this earth to be trusted. A little truth and sincerity can be met with in very young girls, so I prefer them to their elders, but no trust or confidence can be placed in any of them."

"I trusted one once with my life," said Hicks slowly.

They had reached the end of the pavement, and standing on the edge of the cliff, the speaker removed his grave gaze from the sea, to fix it upon his companion's handsome sarcastic-looking face.

"You did? You were a bold man," said Gorden with a short laugh.

"I was a desperate one." A pause, then speaking slowly and meeting his companion's suddenly interested glance with a steady clear one. "Have you any remembrance of a case in the papers some years ago, about a man of my name who was convicted and sentenced to penal servitude wrongfully?"

"I have a faint recollection, yes—I recall it now. I remember. You never mean to say that——"

"I was that man. I could tell many thrilling anecdotes of my experiences, my sufferings, my escape, etc., I assure you."

"By Jove! I should think you could."

"But I should like to tell you one little anecdote in relation to the topic we were discussing just now—woman's faith—if you would care to hear it," said Hicks, resting his arms on the railing before him, and turning his head towards his companion, who replied promptly:

"I should like to hear it immensely if it is not painful for you to recall it."

"The recollection of this is pleasant rather than painful, I assure you. It was after I had made my escape from prison ten years ago—ten years ago this very year—I had had many narrow shaves, many terrible privations, and I was hiding and starving one winter's afternoon upon the moor near the little town of H——, in S——shire.

"Daylight was fading, and despair was seizing upon me. You have undergone dangers, and perhaps sufferings, in your time, Major Gorden, but I scarcely think you can form any idea of my feelings then—hiding like a hunted beast, fearing to meet the eyes of any fellowman, feeling the strength without which all I had risked and endured was useless ebbing away. There came past me on the lonely wild moor a lady upon horseback alone, and I stopped her horse and demanded of her food. She was young and pretty, and a perfect stranger to me, remember, but the instant I looked in her face I knew I might trust it. I was a desperate man then in looks and words, and she was utterly in my power; but after the first involuntary start, she displayed no sign of fear. I never saw anyone so cool and plucky in my life. She yielded to my pleading—but through compassion, not fear—and at my dictates, agreed to give me help and to keep my existence secret.

He paused for an instant and looked at his companion, whose piercing dark eyes were riveted on his face.

But Gorden uttered no syllable, and Hicks went on again:

"She galloped home with my life in her hands, I promising to remain in that spot on the moor until her return, but I had not trusted wrongly. In due course she returned alone through the fast-falling darkness, bringing me the food and wine I was dying for want of. Then she gave me more than food and all the money she had about her. I told her of my innocence, and in her sweet saintly charity she believed me—the first of my fellow-creatures who had done so. She gave me her hand to clasp, and kindly words to dream of; then repeating her promise that for six months at least no mention of her encounter with me should pass her lips, she left me, after giving me her name, at my request, in case I was ever able to repay the deep debt I owed her. Her name was Madeline Ayre."

He paused, but he could not see his listener's face now, for it was suddenly turned away. He could only see that the strong hand resting on the railing before them was trembling.

"I trusted my life to Madeline Ayre," Hicks repeated slowly, "and for her true brave sake I would trust every other woman in the world."

"Can you give me the exact date of this incident?" asked Gorden hurriedly.

"November 10th, 18—, at from five to half-past six in the evening," said Hicks promptly. "It is not a date I should make any mistake about—the one on which my whole life turned."

"Thank you."

"My story interests you," said Hicks presently, breaking the silence. "I have a good memory for faces, and I fancied that during my hiding on that moor I had one day seen you riding with that very young lady. I took you for lovers."

"This is the solemn entire truth you are telling me?" the soldier asked, suddenly facing the other with burning, eager, searching gaze. "You can swear to it—date and all?"

"I swear to it—date and all—as solemn, entire truth."

"I believe you. I have only one other question to ask. Have you seen Madeline Ayre since? Have you any idea where she is now—whether married or single? Can you give me any clue—the faintest, the most difficult—to her whereabouts? Give me it if you can, for pity's sake, and I will thank you more deeply, more gratefully, than I do even now," in hurried eager accents.

"You wronged her? You are going to ask her forgiveness?" said Hicks quietly.

"I am at a loss to know how you divine my secrets; but you guess rightly, I wronged her—past pardon, I fear; but if she be upon earth, I will find her to ask it from her."

"Then I can give you her correct address. She is governess to a family of the name of Maxwell, now staying in this place. Miss Maxwell is a friend of yours, I believe. You will have no difficulty in renewing your old acquaintanceship."

"She is a governess, you say. You never mean that that has been necessary?"

Hick's keen eyes looked at him.

"Her father died a pauper. Madeline has bravely earned her daily bread for years now. Does that fact make any difference to you, Major Gorden?"

"Yes; it makes me more bitterly regretful of my injustice, but more hopeful—in all humility I speak—that I may be allowed to atone," was the prompt clear answer.

Hicks grasped his hand and wrung it warmly.

"Good luck go with you! I think you are almost good enough for her. She has not wanted for proposals, I expect, these ten years; but something—who can fathom a woman's heart?—has held her single. Go and find out what it is, if you can, and again I say, good luck go with you!"

* * * * * * *

"You will come down to the drawing-room and play the accompaniments to my songs, Miss Ayre?" Flora Maxwell said, putting her fair head into the schoolroom.

"Is any one coming?" Miss Ayre raised her head sharply.

"Major Gorden half promised to come," with a vivid blush. "Mamma asked him when we saw him on the beach this morning."

Madeline turned away for a moment, fighting a little battle inwardly. Could she meet him? Yes, she must. She must not be so weak, so despicable! If he were going on paying constant attention to, and eventually marrying pretty Flora, she must see him often, and the first struggle might as well be made at once—the first sickening pain got over. Oh, if she could only forget! Oh, if she could only dislike him—if she could only for once do an impossibility, in fact!

She dressed that evening in one of the Paris gowns of her old happy days—a long-trained violet velvet that, plainly made and well cut, had needed but little alteration to make it a becoming quaint dress for modern days. Some of her old rare lace was gathered round the square-cut bodice and short sleeves, and a bunch of violets was pinned into the massive dark plaits coiled low upon her neck.

Fortified with the knowledge that she was looking her best, Madeline went downstairs, but at the drawing-room door she stopped; it was ajar, and just within it sat Lance Gorden, looking so like the lover she remembered. The shaded light did not show the lines on his face, nor the gray in his hair, and his sleek dark head slightly thrown back, and his features animated with conversation, he looked young and handsome as ever.

What they are Saying.

The people of Peterborough are Pharisees, which makes me sad-you-see.—Moses Oates.

I'm not a Pharisee, I'm a Presbyterian.—C. W. Sawers.

What am I then?—Rev. W. A. McKay.

Mr. Stevenson deserved a more courteous reception and attentive hearing.—Right thinking citizens.

I thought I was going to be run in.—The "Professor"

I might have been there yet and not got a chance to speak.—Rev. Benjamin B.

I'm going to settle the whole question.—The ballot box.

When folks talk about hose I'm with them. J. D. "Hose Humphrey."

What We May Expect.

The Canningtons to say they would have won the championship if it hadn't been for the hen-coop.

Mr. C. W. Sawers to swear off being chairman

Moses Oates to shake Peterborough dust from off his feet,

And to say, "O generation of vipers."

Mr. Humphrey to ventilate the hose question.

Carswell to catch the crowd again this evening.

Exit John A. Nicholls, C. G. Richardson, Rev. B. B. Keefer, Moses and Fessey.

And the people to rejoice greatly thereat.

We Would Like to Know.

How many times C. Gordon Richardson mentioned Goldwin Smith's name last night.

And if he is not a G. Smith idolator.

What Mr. Keefer would have said if he had got a show.

And how he will utilize the voluminous notes he made last night.

If Chairman Sawers' arm didn't ache this morning.

What Pigeon thought he was going to do with the "Professor."

How Bob White, jr., liked the speeches. Who raised all the racket.

And how much good was accomplished by the "free and fair discussion."

Whether Carswell's lecture on "Laughing" will be half as funny as the free show last night.

Enforcing the Scott Act.

ATHLETICS.

Lacrosse.

CANNINGTON SHAMROCKS V. PETERBOROUGHS.

The championship match between these clubs on the Ashburnham grounds was a disappointment in every way. As was reported yesterday the visitors were reluctant to play on the Ashburnham grounds, but finally were induced to do so rather than forfeit the match. The attendance was not large, and the ubiquitous boy, who swarmed over the neighboring fences in large numbers, ignoring entrance fees, formed a large proportion of it. The Peterboroughs had some difficulty in getting a team together and two of the most useful players were unable to take part in the game. The visitors are a fine athletic looking lot of young fellows, but, although they gave the team to which they were yesterday opposed all they wanted, cannot be regarded as good lacrosse players. Indeed, the game was probably the poorest exhibition of lacrosse ever seen on the Ashburnham grounds.

Sheehy secured the ball from the face in the first game, and Kelly sent it down to the Cannington goal, and the greater part of the play during the first game was confined between that point and centre, Kelly, Sheehy and Rutherford being the most active participants in the attack. After a while, however, the rubber took a turn to the other corner of the field, and while the goal keeper was away from his post and the defence somewhat scattered, a shot was made to just in front of the goal, and before Traynor could check him, McIntyre, of the Canningtons, raked it between the flags. Time, 25 minutes.

In the second game the Cannington goal at once became the objective point, and after six minutes play, Rutherford got a shot on the Cannington flags, that placed the second game to the credit of the home team.

The third game was won by the visitors, after six minutes of play, during which the ball had to be frequently faced. The play was of a very inferior description, and was much interfered with by the presence of a number of spectators on the field, which impeded the players, and seemed to somewhat demoralize their action.

The fourth game was won for the home team by Dick Kelly, who, as usual was all over the field, and playing capital lacrosse, with the exception of one or two rather wild throws.

The visitors having to catch the 5 o'clock train decided to let the game go by default, so although the match stood 2 to 2, the referee declared in favour of the home team, and the medal is still safe. Unless the home team can be got into better order, however, the medal is at the mercy of any club that can play lacrosse, that likes to come along and scoop it in. Sheehy, Kelly, Rutherford, Fortye and Scott played cleverly and well, but the general character of the match was of the shinny order.

Remember the Date of Hall, Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, 29th and 30th September.

Carswell

is not often surpassed as a mimic and a humorist. Be sure to hear his laughable lecture on "Laughing" to-night. It only costs 25 cents. Returns from the polls will be announced throughout the evenihg.

Threshing Mill Accident.

Yesterday while George Mitchell was feeding his brother's threshing mill on the farm of Mr. McMartin, Otonabee, he caught one of his hands in the teeth of the cylender, and it is due to his great strength and superhuman effort at a critical moment, that he was not dragged into the opening and killed. As it was the bones of his hand were broken and the soft parts frightfully lacerated. His wounds were dressed by Dr. Kincaid, and it is not probable that the usefulness of his hand will be greatly impaired.

A Close Call.

This afternoon as Mr. Thomas Linster, Smith, was driving down George Street, accompanied by his mother and sister, something went wrong with the fastening of the tongue of the vehicle to the axle. Mr. Linster was looking over the dash-board to see what was wrong, when the horses started suddenly, dragging him over the board to the ground. They dragged him several feet, doubled up under the vehicle, one wheel of which passed over him. The horses were soon caught, and the young man rescued, having received no injuries but a badly bruised back. Had the horses been less gentle or less quickly caught, he would have run great risk of losing his life.

Concert.

A very pleasing musical entertainment was given last evening in the School room of St. John's Church, in the presence of a large audience. The following is the programme: Instrumental solo, "The Huguenot," by Miss Gilmore. Song, "The maid and the miller," Miss Cottingham. Song, Mr. Budden, "Conquer or die;" song, Mr. T. Dunn, "Not a sparrow falleth;" instrumental solo, Miss Delaney; song, "When sparrows build," Mrs. Chambers; comic song, Mr. J. E. Hammond; piano solo, "Pasquinade by Gottschcek," Miss Tate; Song, "True to the Last," T. Dunn. By request Miss Delaney rendered her composition, "The Batcche Polka," which brought the entertainment to a close. Mr. Dunn, Miss Delaney and Mr. Hammond were favoured with encores. The concert was a complete success in every way.

Personal.

Mr. John Miller left this morning for Queen's College, Kingston.

MARRIED.

SANDERSON—WASSON.—At the residence of the bride's father, Warsaw, on Wednesday, 23rd September, 1885, by the Rev. E. F. Torrance, Mr. Wm. A. Sanderson, of Peterborough, to Alice M., daughter of John Wasson, Esq., Warsaw.

Kingston Camp.

Our Boys in the Tented Field.

The volunteers supplied by Peterborough are doing themselves credit in camp at Kingston. But their experience is not all glory. There was a fight with the elements on Tuesday night, and the elements rather had the best of it. The storm was bad enough to those securely roofed, but the dwellers in tents had a terribly tough time of it. Shortly after 6 o'clock the rain abated, but a cold north-west gale arose. It fairly howled as it swept across the waters. The camp ground was very wet and soggy. Pools of water were to be seen all over the field. As the wind dried it the canvas flopped dismally, and many times men had to rush out and tighten up the ropes to prevent the collapse of tents. An offer was made to transfer 180 or 200 men to the fort for the night, but the men preferred to remain on the ground. Everybody was good natured, and throughout the night those who could not sleep sang to their heart's content. "C" troop of the 3rd regiment of cavalry, Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons and Peterborough's pride are the crack troop in camp. They have at all former camps held a leading position, and this year a correspondent informs they have maintained their old reputation. At the time of their departure for camp we could not procure the names of the rank and file of the troop. The following is a full list of the members of the troop now in camp at Kingston:—

Lieut.-Col., H. C. Rogers, Captain and Quarter-Master Charles, Stapleton, Lieutenant, R. A. Morrow, Troop Sergeant-Major, James Stothart, Sergeants, W. D. Johnston, A. J. Ritchie, Chas. Billings, Corporals, Alex. Sanderson, Thos. W. Johnston, Thos. Goldey, Trumpeter, Fred. Scollie, Troopers, Wm. Butcher, Thos. Cook, Wm. Cummings, Geo. Crouter, Austin Dobbin, Robert Duncan, Andrew Dobbin, George Hall, Chas. C. Leary, Henry W. Morgan, Robert Montgomery, D. Montgomery, William Hunter, Isaac Milburn, John Musgrove, Charles Pearson, Wm. Scollie, John Scott, Ernest L. Stephenson, Joseph Saunders, Joshua Saunders, A. Ernest Sherwood, J. R. Stewart, J. Stewart, Jas. Sedgwick, James M. Walton; Cook, Robert Duncan; on the staff, Quarter-Master's Sergeant, W. H Hill, Regimental Pay-Sergeant, D. H. Burritt. The troop will arrive in town from camp on Saturday morning, and will parade through the town on Saturday afternoon, before dismissing. Those who admired them on their parade before leaving town, will have an opportunity of judging of the improvement made during their dozen days' drill.

Don't Fail to Visit Hall Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 29th and 30th.

Cheap Excursion to Chicago.

There will be a cheap excursion to Detroit and Chicago on Friday and Saturday, September 25th and 26th, from Peterborough, on the G. T. R., in connection with the Detroit and Chicago short line. This is the shortest and quickest route from Canada to Chicago. Passengers will arrive in Chicago at 7 o'clock on the following morning. Pullman palace sleepers on night trains. Secure your tickets from Mr. Thos. Menzies, the old, reliable ticket agent, who will accompany the excursion and see that all are provided with good accommodation. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukee and Cincinnati and return only $12; to Detroit and return, only $6.00; good for ten days.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, [illegible] a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

The Scottites Win.

The Act Carried by a Majority of over 300 The Returns—Talk of Annulling the Election.

The voting on the Scott Act yesterday, from the returns at present to hand, seems to have resulted in the carrying of the Act by a majority of upwards of 300 ballots. The total number of votes polled indicate that many abstained from casting their vote in either way, but the majority is large enough to be considered as fairly representative of the will of the people. The election was very quietly conducted; there was little or no excitement, but the regulations in regard to the closing of bar-rooms seem to have been rigidly regarded. In the evening, when the returns began to come in, small groups congregated here and there to talk over the prospects, but at an early hour it became known that the Act was likely to be sustained by a large majority, and the people soon dispersed. Messengers ran backward and forward, carrying announcements of the returns, between the Scott Act Committee rooms and Bradburn's Opera House, where Carswell was entertaining a very large audience of Scott Act sympathizers with his humourous lecture on "Laughing." As the returns were handed in, Mr. Cox, who occupied the chair, announced them to the gathering, and as each successive despatch rolled up the total majority the cheering was enthusiastic. The determination to continue the fight and see that now the law was passed it should be duly enforced was strongly expressed in all temperance quarters.

Among the opposition there is a great deal of talk of upsetting the election on the ground that a number of voters from No. 1 Ward in town were prevented from voting, and that in the Township of Smith the 1885 voters' list was used. Vague hints of some other ground of complaint against the election were thrown out, and it is said that a legal man has already been retained to conduct an action with the view of rendering the voting void. The following are the returns received up to the time of going to press:—

Majority for Act	314

Just as we go to press a telegram has come in, giving the total majority for Asphodel as 23, Belmont 64, and divisions 1 and 2 of Dummer 41. This will bring the total majority up to about 340, with several places yet to hear from.

Note.—It was reported in town to-day that No. 2 division of Douro had given a majority of 60 against the act, and that Asphodel had given 31, and Dummer 29 for the act. The report lacks confirmation, but if true, leaves the total figures exactly the same.

The City Hose.

Is it Guaranteed by the Company Selling It?

Readers of THE EXAMINER will remember that Mr. C. R. Gray, agent for the Montreal Rubber Co., speaking of the hose supplied to the town by that company, stated that the town held their guarantee, covering the hose for two years. A representative of THE EXAMINER, meeting the Town Clerk, Mr. C. D. Macdonald, this morning, said: "Mr. Macdonald, is it true, as stated by Mr. Gray, that the town holds the guarantee of the Montreal Rubber Co. for the 500 feet of hose last purchased from them, and that it has two years to run?"

"I am under the impression," replied Mr. Macdonald, "that the hose was guaranteed to the town, but the correspondence did not pass through my hands, so I am not in a position to speak positively; but to the best of my belief it was guaranteed."

"Is it not usual for correspondence on municipal matters to pass through the hands of the Town Clerk?"

"I think it should be done in that way, but it is for the Council to say."

"Through whose hands did the correspondence go in the case we are speaking of?"

"I suppose the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee."

"There were two hundred feet of hose bought recently; did the correspondence in connection with that purchase go through your hands?"

"No, it did not; the only document referring to that transaction that I saw was the account."

"Have you in your custody a guarantee from McIlroy for the Maltese Cross hose?"

"I believe that lot of hose was guaranteed, but I don't place reliance on a verbal guarantee, and I have seen no written guarantee for the hose in question."

"Then the town has no written guarantee from either Company?"

"No, not that I am aware of."

The above conversation seems to point to the conclusion that transactions in regard to hose have not been carried out on strict business principles, and that in the case of hose not being up to the standard represented, the town has no means of redress.

Ops.

Mr. John Robinson of Ops had this year about forty-five acres of barley, which has threshed out nearly 1,700 bushels. The sample was very good and brought 60c. all round. The crop will give nearly $1,000. Mr. Robinson had twenty acres of fall wheat, which will return about 800 bushels.—Post.

Sidney.

Wednesday afternoon, about half-past three, a boy, ten or twelve years of age, a son of Mr. P. W. Finkle, of the front of Sidney, was the victim of a very painful, and, perhaps, fatal accident. As no one saw the accident occur it is not exactly known how it happened. It appears, however, that the boy attempted to climb up behind a load of straw on the road, and in some manner became entangled in the wheel. At any rate, when found by a neighbor he was standing in a dazed condition with part of his scalp torn off and the flesh of the right side of his face cut to the bone and hanging down loosely on his shoulder, till he put his hand to it and tried to hold it up. Dr. Gibson was summoned and found that in addition to the above injuries his collar bone was broken, and his arm and elbow badly injured. It is conjectured that in some unexplained manner the rim of the wheel passed along the side of his head, tearing the skin and flesh off in the manner described. His injuries were attended to, and there are good hopes that youth and a strong constitution will pull him through, although the case is a very serious one indeed.—Ontario.

Barnum's Circus Wrecked.

During the afternoon performance of the Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson circus on the show grounds, one mile west of Titusville, Pennsylvania, on Tuesday last, a terrific tornado sprang up, sweeping in its course the tents of the circus, side shows, etc. At the time there were some 10,000 persons in attendance, and perceiving the storm approaching, extra precautions were taken by the managers in driving in additional stakes to stay the centre poles. About three-quarters of the audience had made their exit into the open air, leaving some 3,000 people inside. The storm when at its height struck the west side of the main tent, levelling everything in its path, piling people upon each other and causing a general panic amid flying seats, poles and debris. A great many people were struck and received various injuries. Ambulances were immediately despatched to the ground and stretchers provided for the wounded, and now all the doctors in the city are caring for the injured. In the midst of the storm the elephants became frantic and much more damage would have ensued, but the tents falling stopped their rage. Two of the cages in the menageries were burst open by falling poles, but but only a few monkeys were enabled to gain their liberty.

Turkey Making Ready for a Struggle.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 24.—Several ironclads have been ordered in readiness for immediate active service.

Will Fight to the Death.

PHILIPOPOLIS, Sept. 24.—All Russian officers in the Bulgarian service have resigned and their places have been filled by Bulgarians. The country is disappointed at the action of the Russians, but the people are not discouraged. Two fully equipped battalions of volunteers have crossed the Balkans and are proceeding to this town. Prince Alexander, while inspecting a body of reserves who were about to start for the frontier, made a brief address to the troops, concluding as follows:—"My braves, we have no quarrel with the Turks, but if they dispute our action we will fight them to the death and be assured that I will always be found in the thick of the battle." The Prince's speech was received with great enthusiasm. The whole province has been declared in a state of siege. Prince Alexander assumes the post of Commander-in-chief of the entire army and Major Nicolaeff will command the forces of Roumelia.

The Situation Critical.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Rumors are current that serious disorders have occurred in Macedonia. The Russian newspapers consider the situation in the Balkans as becoming more critical every day, and they doubt the possibility of restoring the status quo.

The Powers Asked to Interfere.

Prince Alexander has issued a circular to the powers, in which he announces the union of Eastern Roumelia and Bulgaria. He says he has accepted the popular election in no hostile spirit to Turkey. He recognizes the Sultan's suzerainty, and holds himself responsible for public security. He asks the powers to intervene in order that the union may be recognized as an accomplished fact, otherwise the people are resolved to do all in their power to uphold the Union. Prince Alexander has also sent a despatch to the Sultan of Turkey asking him to recognize the union.

Great Excitement.

At Constantinople there is great excitement over the situation. The Sultan presided at a council which was called on Sunday to settle the question of sending troops to Roumelia. Pending a decision, several battalions of troops have been ordered to concentrate on the Roumelian frontier. The Cabinet was divided on the question of sending a force to Roumelia. Some of the Ministers were in favour of despatching ironclads with troops to Boorghas, a seaport town of Eastern Roumelia, and of hurrying forward divisions by way of Adrianople and Macedonia. Other members of the Cabinet thought that the signers of the treaty should be consulted before any decisive steps were taken. The Ambassadors of the treaty powers at Constantinople were consulted by the Sultan, but they had received no orders from their governments as to what course they should pursue. In accordance with the wishes of the Sultan, they have asked for instructions, and are now awaiting replies. Article 16 of the Berlin treaty empowers the Governor of Roumelia to summon Ottoman troops when its security is menaced either by a domestic uprising or by a foreign power. The Bulgarians are angered at the action of Russian officers in resigning from the Bulgarian army according to orders. The Russians are jeered at, called traitors, and Prince Alexander has been asked to expel them.

Montreal's Scourge.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.—Official returns at the Health Office this morning show that there were thirty-eight deaths from smallpox in the city yesterday, eight in St. Jean Baptiste village, two in St. Cunegonde, two in St. Henri and one in Cote St. Louis.

The Chieftain to be Catechised.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—Sir John Macdonald is to attend a banquet on the evening of the Carleton County Fair at Bells' Corners on Wednesday next. The Tory managers are after some of Sir John's constituents who have expressed their intention of questioning him in regard to Riel's case.

The Thirteen Club, which poses to live down a popular superstition, is asked to account for the fact that a farmer out West was robbed of $13,000 on the 13th day of July and the thirteenth anniversary of his marriage. We are inclined to account for it by the fact that the farmer happened to have the money at that time.—Troy Times.

The supply of women teachers for the English schools under the School Board is unequal to the demand. The death of assistants is, to some extent, due to so many giving up the school desk for matrimony, but an even greater reason is the exceedingly stiff preliminary examination which the young girl teachers are now required to pass.

THE SCOTT ACT.

The voice of the ballot has been heard on the Scott Act petition, and has pronounced for the adoption of the Act by a good majority. It is pleasing to record that generally throughout the campaign it has been conducted with good feeling on both sides, and both are to be congratulated on the manner in which the campaign has been carried out. The voting in town shows that almost half of the population is in favour of the Act, but the country districts do not show themselves so equally divided. It is now incumbent upon the supporters of the Act to see that the promises made in its name are fulfilled out. On the first of May, 1886, no licenses will be granted to hotels or shops and the diminution of revenue represented, will make it incumbent upon the Town Council to make timely provisions for meeting, not a contingent, but absolutely certain, falling off in revenue. The Scott Act supporters must not think that carrying the Act with huzzasy of exultation ends their responsibility. The real work upon which they have entered, will begin on the 1st of May, next year.

ANOTHER ADULLAMITE.

There are some strange men in Peterborough, especially in the Noble Ward. With excusable testiness they have been growling about the din raised by the steam whistles of the railway engines. This, it must be admitted, is not at all pleasant or conducive to dreamless sleep, and a little grumbling over the nuisance is perhaps excusable. At the same time, however, if we must have, either whistling with our railways, or no railways and consequently no whistling by all means give us the nocturnal neigh of the iron horse. As a progressive town and people we must be prepared to submit to a slight evil for the sake of a great good. One can, to a certain extent, sympathize with and excuse a man who bewails his loss of sleep through the howling of railway engine whistles. But when a peppery pessimist has the slow-coach audacity to complain because the whistle of the Stove Works at seven o'clock calls seventy artisans to toil, it's a trifle too much to countenance. A correspondent of our evening contemporary makes this ridiculous lament, and argues that because the stove works company has been exempted from taxation, they should not be allowed to call their workmen to toil by the use of the steam whistle. Must the managers notify the men by the use of "tony," triangular, patchouly-perfumed notes, delivered by a page in buttons, on a silver salver, that the hour for entering upon the fulfilment of the duties of the station in life to which they have been called, has arrived? A "Ratepayer," who is so utterly indifferent to the interests of the progress of the town, is a misfit in modern society. If he can't stand the whistle of a factory let him place himself beyond it's sound. A "lodge in some vast wilderness," with the bilious Cowper for company, is the place for him.

The moral to be drawn from such an absurd exhibition of narrow-mindedness, seriously concerns the progress of the town. It is such selfish souls that are stumbling blocks in the way of the wheels of the car of progress. They have not enough generosity of soul, not enough public spirit to submit to a trifling personal inconvenience for the sake of a great public good. So long as their money, the output of the usurious mill of the mortgage, supplies them the means of sustaining their selfish existence and promoting their petty selfish ends, they care not if every factory in town is silent; if every artisan is out of work; if every soul dependent on him starves or begs; if all progress ceases. Out upon such bigoted smallness of soul! Peterborough has, for its own good, too many of the class of which "Ratepayer" is a type, and it is to be hoped that "Ratepayer's" sublime assurance in asking the Council to interfere with operations of that magnificent new industry, the Stove Works, so that he may enjoy his morning nap undisturbed, will receive the snub it deserves.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Fuego" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer be a loser thereby. 13d-25w

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The authorities are determined to force on the imperial general elections as early as possible. The new electoral lists must therefore all be revised by Oct 8th.

A letter from St. Andrew's N. B., stated that Sir Leonard Tilley for the past few days has not gained so rapidly in strength as the progress recently made gave reason to expect. Slight symptoms of the old complaint have appeared, yet not so marked as to cause serious alarm.

Mr. Thos. McGreevy, M. P., has been "called" to the Senate. The hon. gentleman was a leading member of the Prince Albert Colonization Company, which brought about the rebellion. For his share therein he will be compelled to spend his days among the old ladies with a paltry thousand a year, unless, as the Guelph Mercury suggests, the Young Liberals step in and relieve him by sweeping the useless bodies out on the street.

In Conservative circles, says a usually well-informed authority, there is a feeling abroad that Cabinet changes are imminent; tapis. The latest slate gives the portfolio of Railways to the present acting minister, John Henry Pope; Mr. Carling leaves the position of Postmaster-General for that of Minister of Agriculture, a position with whose duties he is from past experience familiar; Sir Alexander Campbell takes the Postmaster-Generalship, and a Maritime Province lawyer, (probably Judge Thompson, of Antigonish,) the portfolio of Justice! It is even reported that Judge Thompson yesterday stated to several Halifax barristers that this was the last day he would act in a judicial capacity. This is understood to mean that he will be appointed Minister of Justice.

Sir John Macdonald has not yet seen fit to issue the election writ for the vacancy in the city of St. John, N. B., caused by the death of Hon. Isaac Burpee over seven months ago. Several constituencies have become vacant and have been filled since St. John lost its representative, but they were more easily "fixed" than the one by the "sounding sea." A verdict against him from the Lower Provinces is greatly dreaded by the Premier, and that is what he is tolerably sure to get. But he is feeling his way cautiously, and discovering where the people's money can be best placed for the advantage of the Tory candidate. In West Durham, the body of the deceased representative was not in the ground before Sir John decided the date of the election to provide for his successor.

Count Paul O. d'Esterhazy, who has charge of a scheme for colonizing a large number of Hungarians in the North-West, came to Ottawa in obedience to a summons from the Department of Agriculture, only, however, to find Mr. Pope and the Hon. Thomas White away, and consequently his mission was futile in the main. He is most anxious to secure a satisfactory settlement to his proposed scheme for the colonization of the Qu'Appelle valley. The large number of men who are anxious to leave the United States for Canada, are becoming unsettled and restless, and anxious to see some definite arrangement made. The Count has had a long interview with Mr. Moore, of the Saskatchewan land company, who assures him of his willingness to use every effort to induce his company to extend to the Huns the same advantages which other settlers have been able to enjoy. The Count intends removing with his Countess and their seven children from New York, and making their permanent home in Ottawa.

Campbellford.

Dr. O'Sullivan, of Peterborough, made a professional visit to Campbellford last week, and has undertaken to do what the physicians of the Toronto hospital failed to accomplish in the restoration of Charley Hawley's foot, which has been lifeless for some months past. Charley visited the hospital twice, and was a patient in that institution for several weeks, but instead of being improved, his condition became somewhat worse. A short time ago he left the hospital and his father consulted Dr. O'Sullivan. The doctor is now treating the diseased foot, and has every hope of soon restoring it to health and action.

The picnic held on Thursday last in aid of the R. C. Church, in Rev. D. Beattie's grove, proved a marked success. The gross receipts of the picnic were $730.60.—Herald.

Deadly Dynamite.

About ninety Pounds of it Exploded at Port Arthur.

A despatch from Port Arthur says:—A magazine at Port Arthur containing a large quantity of dynamite and other explosives, blew up yesterday, giving the town a severe shaking up. The explosives destroyed are said to be worth $20,000, and belonged to Conmee & McLennan and Bark Bros. A large quantity of window glass was broken in the town. No one was seriously hurt. The building is supposed to have caught from bush fires. Mr. James Conmee, M. P. P. for West Algoma, a member of the firm of Conmee & McClennan, was shown the above despatch at the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, last night, and stated that the building was a large one-story stone structure belonging to the Hamilton Powder Company. It had been built of considerable strength in 1877 by the Hamilton Company as a storehouse for explosives. It was situated a little over a mile south of Port Arthur, between that town and Fort William, and about a quarter of a mile from the railway track, close to the lake shore. It was in the bush, on a low, marshy spot, which had been selected on account of its situation, as being comparatively safe from bush fires, and as being far enough from business portion of the town that there would be little danger in case an explosion should take place. His firm had probably about $6,000 or $8,000 worth of dynamite stored there, the Hamilton powder Company a larger amount, Messrs. Bark Brothers a considerable quantity, and Mr. John Conmee a small amount. During the building of the road the Hamilton Co. had kept a very large quantity of dynamite stored there. He thought the estimate of the amount was about correct, and the loss would be a total one to those who had stored there, as neither building nor contents were insurable. If the supposition of a bush fire was correct, it had probably been caused by the clearing of the right of way of the new branch of the Canadian Pacific down the Kaministiquia River. In 1877 or 1878 the Hamilton Powder Co'y had a dynamite factory exploded there, but much nearer the town than where the present explosion took place.

Oakwood.

The camp meeting near Oakwood is still in progress and much good is being accomplished, over 3,000 visited the grounds on Sunday last. A children's day was observed last Saturday and will also be on next Saturday. On Friday (to-day) an all day convention of Christian workers was held. The meeting will close on Tuesday.

A FATEFUL RIDE.

Chapter IV.—Continued.

His figure, too—how well Madeline remembered that easy pose and that graceful gesture as he raised his hand to enforce something he said; and as the old-remembered tones of his voice fell upon her ear—the rich deep voice her heart could never forget—the recollection of his last passionate kiss came back to her, and she stopped, white and trembling; she could not trust herself to enter.

As she fought for composure, despising her weakness and beating it down, Major Gorden raised his head, and in a mirror before him saw the reflection of the tall velvet-draped form with the sweet eyes and dark hair.

He turned with an inarticulate exclamation; a little table fell to the ground with a crash.

Flora looked up in surprise, but Madeline had vanished, and Major Gorden, picking up the fallen furniture with an apology for his carelessness, went on with his conversation calmly.

But Flora came to Miss Ayre's room that night, and said grumblingly:

"Why did not you come down as you promised, Miss Ayre? We had no music nor anything. The slowest, stupidest evening. I do hate evenings like this!" angrily pulling the lace on her pink surah dress.

"I did not feel quite equal to it," said the governess, without looking up. "Stupid, was it, Flora, with Major Gorden there?"

"Yes, I do think men are the most aggravating, disappointing, fickle, horried creatures in this world," said the young lady vehemently.

"Perhaps they are," smiled Madeline; "but you are young to find it out."

"I have had a lot of experience," said the pretty girl; "but I never thought Major Gorden would turn out like this. I am sure I shall not snub poor Captain Rouse for his sake, as I have been doing, if he goes on like this. Captain Rouse is in love with me; he would not dare to pay devoted attention one evening, and nothing—I declare he hardly spoke to me to-night, Miss Ayre—the next. But I don't care one bit," said the philosopher of eighteen, looking very vexed all the same. "I know the only way to be happy is not to think too much of any man. Enjoy the attention you get, and don't care an atom for what does not come to you without a bit of trouble. Encourage the lovers who are devoted to you—I shall always have plenty; I have no fear about that—and let the fickle disagreeable ones go where they please."

"Ah, you are not in love yet," Miss Ayre said with a sigh of relief.

But when they met Major Gorden in the harbor next morning, Flora did not carry out her valorous resolve to the letter.

She and Miss Ayre and little Mabel were together, and Madeline did not see Major Gorden's approach in time to fly, but yet just in time to mask her face ere he looked upon it.

"How do you do, Miss Ayre?" he said as quietly as he spoke to Flora, and offering his hand with the same conventional smile.

"How do you do?" she said, without a smile, and taking her ice-cold fingers from his almost as they touched them.

"Are you two acquainted?" asked Flora in much curiosity. "Why, you never said so, Miss Ayre."

"It is ten years since we met; I dare say Miss Ayre has forgotten me," said Lance Gorden. His deep eyes were seeking hers with a wistful passionate look. Hers were straying over the sun-gilded sea, and all her former lover could discern on the face he had kissed so passionately when last he saw it, was indifference. "Anger, pride, hatred can be overcome," he told himself sadly, "but indifference is impregnable, there is no weak spot about it;" then still with that look that puzzled Flora immensely, he said aloud: "Have you forgotten me, Miss Ayre?"

"No; I remember you now perfectly," she said, and her voice, too, governed by an effort that wrenched her very heart-strings, sounded calm and indifferent.

He turned away and spoke to Miss Maxwell. It was no place to beg for forgiveness or offer explanations here before a hundred ears, and in view of a hundred eyes; and he was no boy to make a blunder by impatience. He turned away and talked to Flora, who in spite of her resolutions was smiling upon and offering him remarks; and Madeline strolled on with her little pupil to the end of the pier, where she stood heedless of the girl's chatter, heedless of the lovely sea, and sky, and sun; heedless of everything but the thought, "How much more can I bear of this?"

Miss Ayre was asked down into the drawing-room again that evening, and as she put on the violet velvet gown once more, and tied the soft lace round her fair neck, she made up her mind to be brave if he should come in this evening; perhaps her valor was assisted by the fact that he was not expected.

The Maxwells were at dinner when Madeline entered the drawing-room, and she sat down to the piano to amuse herself until they should come in.

Was it a thought of that morning's interview that made her sing that pathetic little ballad, "For Old Sake's Sake"? and what was it that made tears steal into the sweet rich notes ere the plaintive words were ended?

"But still for old sake's sake it is the darkest thing in the world," she uttered as some one entered gently and unannounced, and closed the door behind him.

"For old sake's sake," he took up the words as they fell from her lips, and going close up to the piano, bent over the singer.

"For old sake's sake speak kindly to me, Madeline," he whispered.

She started up with a half cry; no mask now, her poor blushing tell-tale face was beyond her control, and she weakly put her hands over it, but he took them both in his, gathering them warm and close up to his heart, while his eyes met here with an expression she could not mistake.

"Madeline, my darling, have you forgotten?" he said in a low thrilling whisper.

"I have forgotten nothing," she answered hoarsely. "What have you come for, Major Gorden?"

"To ask your forgiveness," said the soldier humbly; "to tell you that only the other day I learned from James Hicks, Madeline, how bitterly and wickedly I wronged you by my mad jealous wretchedness ten years ago. I know now whom you rode out late to meet."

"You believe another's word, then, when you would not mine? It is characteristic," she said bitterly.

"Have mercy!" he pleaded yet more humbly. "You know I had been so falsely treated by a woman before, I had no faith left, but I think if you knew how I have longed for you, loved you, yearned for you, never forgotten you all these years of absence, Madeline, you would think I had [illegible] my fault a little. Give me any other penance you like, any time of probation, only grant me pardon at last. Let me prove to you, darling, how deep and sincere is my regret, let me make amends for my despicable conduct by a lifetime of devotion, faith, and love. Oh, darling——"

He was bending lower, his head almost touching hers. She drew back, with memory of that last kiss taken against her will.

"Forgive you to-day that you may doubt me again to-morrow," she said brokenly.

"Doubt you—never, never, never again!" he pleaded with yearning thrilling tenderness. "Dearest, I have no right to be believed, I know, but upon my soul I speak the truth. Whether you will pardon me and take me back, or wh ther you send me from you relentless it can only be the same with my love, that is yours always for the future as it has been in the past—yours only and entirely."

There was silence for a moment. Madeline stood with hands yet clasped in his, with burning blushes suffusing her face, and drooping downcast eyes, and Gorden, gazing down upon what was to him the sweetest face in the world, hoped desperately that the Maxwells' dinner might be prolonged.

"Madeline," he said gently, bending to the blushing face.

"Yes," she answered softly, still not looking up.

"Is there anything else you want me to say—anything else I can say to plead my cause? Dearest, I have it in my power to make you happier now than in the old days, for I am richer and in a better position, and——"

"While I am a pauper," she interrupted quickly.

"Let me brighten your life, take you from work, give you comfort, luxuries, and a happy home, if you will not have my affection," he begged earnestly.

"How do you know I will not have your affection?" she asked with a sudden return of her old brightness; and then she lifted her shy, sweet, radiant eyes to his, and his eloquence was mute, for rapture overpowers words.

"Oh, you darling!" he only breathed, clasping her to his heart fervently; "oh, my love, my darling, my love!"

"Your love has lost all her good looks and winning ways," Madeline said presently, after an interlude of some minutes; "she is old and grey, and plain and grave. I remember hearing you say once you would not have a plain wife, Lance."

"Nor will I; you could never be plain, Madeline—never, if you lived to a hundred. I think your face is sweeter and prettier than it ever used to be," surveying it with loving eyes, "and that is saying a good deal; I have never seen one to equal it during all my wanderings."

"Love is blind," she said gaily, and then the dining-room door opened in very truth, and they all came in—the Maxwells, and the guests whose presence had so luckily prolonged the feast, but no one knew anything of what had occurred in those happy minutes of waiting—though Flora looked rather surprised at Major Gord n's unexpected appearance, and ra er puzzled at some glances she inter pted—until the following morning.

Then, the Maxwells were very kind people, and when they heard the whole romantic story, Mrs. Maxwell proposed that the wedding should be from her house, and Flora begged to be a bridesmaid.

So in a few weeks Madeline sat a happy pretty bride, before a gorgeously-laden crowded breakfast-table, with speeches and congratulations, presents and smiles, overwhelming her on every side.

But the last present she received was put into her hand when in her graceful traveling-dress she stood amid good-byes and rice.

"Accept this as a small proof of my gratitude, my dear; take it as if from your father, you know, my dear," James Hicks whispered, holding her hand fast as he pressed something into it; "and remember that you were too kind to hurt my feelings ten years ago by refusing me your hand when I asked you for it. You are too kind, I know, to-day to refuse this present, that it is the greatest pleasure of my life to give you."

Then he stooped and kissed the fair face, and when, seated beside her husband in the carriage, Madeline unfolded the parcel crushed into her hand—she found it to be notes and checks to the value of six thousand pounds.

Inside the paper was written, "In Memory of A FATEFUL RIDE."

THE END.

Jim Fiak's Generosity.

"When I was head cutter for the late Mr. Linthicum," said a Fourteenth street tailor, "Col. Fisk was among Mr. Linthicum's customers. The store was under the Metropolitan hotel. The first time I saw the colonel was when he came in and ordered three of the finest suits of clothes that could be made. The colonel, on account of his fatness, was a hard man to fit, but I laid myself out to please him. The suits were tried on, and a few days afterward he dropped in and said: 'Go to——'s,' mentioning one of the finest of Broadway jewelry stores, 'and see what he's got for you.' I thought he was joking, but, as soon as I knocked off that afternoon, I went to the store and asked if Col. Fisk had left any orders for me.

"'I should say he had,' replied the proprietor. 'He said that you were to choose a souvenir from these rings,' and he put out three splendid diamond rings on a mat on the counter. 'Take your choice, please; I've other customers to attend to. Col. Fisk told me to send the bill for the ring that you chose to him.' Well, I chose this ring, and I wouldn't part with it for any amount of money unless my wife and I were starving. It has twenty-three diamonds, you see, and the jeweler said, me that the diamonds, without the workmanship on the ring, were worth about $900. Col. Fisk had his faults, they say, but I'll never believe that a man who could show such kindness to a poor workman had any very grave faults."—New York Sun.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church will have a peach festival in the school room on Friday evening, 25th inst. Admission, 10 cents; refreshments extra. There will be a good musical programme. All are invited.

Presbytery of Peterborough.

The next meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough will be held in St. Andrew's church school room, on the second Tuesday of January, 1886, beginning at 10:30 o'clock a. m.

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office:—Moderate winds; fine, warm weather.

Wallace Point Bridge.

Mr J. E. Belcher, County Engineer has issued notices announcing that the Wallace Point Bridge will be closed during repairs, until further notice, on and after Wednesday September 30th, inst.

Call Accepted.

Rev. John McEwan has accepted the call of Lakefield and Smith Presbyterians. At the recent meeting of the Presbytery in Port Hope, arrangements were made for his settlement in the pastorate, and the induction will take place on October 27th, at 11 o'clock.

"His Heart is True to Pell."

Last fall Mr. William Porter, of Douro, sold his farm and farm stock and went west on a prospecting tour. He has spent most of the intervening time in search of a desirable locality in which to begin farming. But he has returned without finding the promised land, and says he found no place that suited him so well as Peterborough, and that he intends buying another farm, or if he can't do that, he will rent a farm or find some way of entering farming again. He sold some of his stock to Dr Kincaid last fall, and is trying to buy it back. There's a solid citizen for you—one that knows a good thing when he sees it. Mr. Porter's practical expression of appreciation speaks volumes for the adaptability of this county to farming purposes.

Cheap Excursion to Chicago.

There will be a cheap excursion to Detroit and Chicago on Friday and Saturday, September 25th and 26th, from Peterborough, on the G. T. R., in connection with the Detroit and Chicago short line. This is the shortest and quickest route from Canada to Chicago. Passengers will arrive in Chicago at 7 o'clock on the following morning. Pullman palace sleepers on night trains. Secure your tickets from Mr. Thos. Menzies, the old, reliable ticket agent, who will accompany the excursion and see that all are provided with good accommodation. Fare from Peterborough to Chicago, Milwaukee and Cincinnati and return only $12; to Detroit and return, only $6.00; good for ten days.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

ATHLETICS.

The P. A. A. A. Fall Games.

THE IRISH ATHLETES ENTERED FOR SEVERAL EVENTS.

The fall games of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association, which are to be held at the Ashburnham grounds on Monday afternoon, bid fair to result in a most successful athletic gathering. During the last few days entries have been coming in fast, and in every event there will be a large field of starters of more than average capabilities, so that keen and exciting competitions are sure to ensue. Among the other entries received are those of Christian and Hussey, two of the team of famous Irish Athletes now visiting this country, and who will participate in the Toronto and New York athletic games. The Toronto meeting takes place to-morrow, and it is altogether likely that in addition to the Irish Athletes, some of the Montreal men returning from Toronto will stay over here and enter for the association sports. Christian and Hussey are great George D. Christian, city and suburban harriers, Dublin, has won the Irish championship for a quarter of a mile for the past three years. His best time in public is 51 2-5, but he has made better time in private trials. He will compete in the open runs. He is about 24 years of age, weighs 148 pounds, and is 5 feet 8½ inches in height. J. E. Hussey, County Kerry Athletic Club, is ex-Irish champion quarter mile and half mile runner, and has a record of 2 min. 1½ sec. in the latter. He is 6 feet high and slenderly built. He, too, is entered in the open events, and some cracking racing may be anticipated.

The Association grounds are looking their best, and Norley, the caretaker, has been working hard to get them into good condition. The cinder path has been greatly improved and the turf is clean and bright. A complete list of the entries up to date will appear in the EXAMINER to-morrow.

Remember the Date of Hall, Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, 29th and 30th September.

We Would Like to Know.

How the yacht Puritan would have come out of the blow the Genesta passed through in the Brenton's reef cup race.

And why none of the crack Yankee skimming dishes entered for that match.

What the council will do about repealing the Dickson exemption by-law.

Whether the Scott Act agitators will go to sleep between now and May.

In what county the "unhappy struggle" will next be entered upon.

What We May Expect.

The Irish athletes on Monday.

And a splendid athletic meeting at the Association grounds.

A lull after the Scott Act storm.

The anti-Scottites to say the election was'nt fair.

Our dashing cavalrymen home to-morrow.

A protracted meeting of the council to-night.

With discussions on the Dickson exemption by-law.

The ladies to turn out in large numbers on Monday to see those dashing Irishmen.

How many druggists will apply for licenses to sell under the Scott Act.

What they are Saying.

My organizing did it.—Mr. Fee.

No, 'twas my argument.—Rev. Benjamin B.

Moses and the "Professor" did it.—The antis.

We did it.—The ladies.

Fee may organise and Feesey may foster, but the voter gives the majority.—The electors.

Enter us for the P. A. A. A. sports.—The Irish athletes.

We're going to have a great meeting.—A. St. A. Smith.

Those Irishmen will make us hustle.—The local runners.

That's what we want to see.—Lovers of athletics.

Let "Hose" Humphrey howl, my hands are clean.—Engineer English.

I take the "lead" in short horns.—H. W. K.

Fred. Cox, Peterborough, shows a handsome driving mare, a very fine roadster.—Lindsay Post.

Sale of Articles.

On Wednesday next a sale of useful articles, under the management of the Ladies of St. John's South Ward Sunday School, will be held in the house of Mr. W. H. Rackham, corner of Reid and Charlotte streets; open afternoon and evening. Admission, 5 cents; tea and other refreshments, 25 cents. Proceeds in aid of the South Ward school room fund.

Words of Welcome.

The Lindsay Post, in its descriptive report of the Lindsay Central Exhibition, thus discourses:—"We notice the appearance of a new exhibitor, and as he is from the neighboring county we extend the right hand of welcome. We allude to Mr. Geo. A. Cox, of Peterborough. Mr. Cox has decided to become a "horny-handed son of toil," and has set up a fine farm near Peterborough. He has built a big barn. This year he was represented, and very efficiently, by Mr. R. D. Dandas, farm manager, but next year we shall expect to see Mr. Cox himself, with hayseed in his white plug and trousaloons rolled up, lead the big bull into the ring and take the red ticket. The farmers of Victoria county will join us in giving him a hearty welcome on that occasion. Mr. Cox's exhibit comprised one yearling heifer, a very fine animal, and three heifer calves."

Obituary.

The Late Mrs. James Stewart Lang.

On September 17th last, Mrs. James Lang, the mother of Mr. John Lang, Reeve of Otonabee township and ex-Warden of the county of Peterborough, departed this life, and on Saturday her remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of friends and neighbours. Her death followed a stroke of apoplexy, with which she was stricken on the fourth of last August, since which time she lay in an almost unconscious state, though she endured a great amount of suffering from other causes. The deceased lady was one of the pioneer settlers of the township, having come to the township with her mother and uncle (being then two years of age) in 1822. Her father, Mr. John Stewart, a native of Renfrewshire, Scotland, came to the country two years previously, to secure a home for his family, which he did by settling on a lot about one mile north of Keene, on the banks of the Indian River. Mrs. Lang, who was, at the time of her death, 65 years of age, leaves besons and four daughters, besides a large number of grandchildren.

Don't Fail to Visit Hall Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 29th and 30th.

A Few First Prizes.

At the Lindsay Central Exhibition yesterday Peterborough took in a fair number of prizes. Mr. Fred. Cox won the first prize for his nobby little mare, "Maud," and Mr. Geo. A. Cox took four first prizes and one second prize on Durham cattle. Mr. T. Cavanagh took first prize for span of carriage horses over 15½ hands in height.

Return of the Favorite

Miss Jessie Warts, the American Star, whose reputation in Canada is well known, assisted by Chas. McKinney, the Champion of Professionals, will give an exhibition unsurpassed on the little wheels, at the Lansdowne Rink, on Saturday and Monday evenings. Do not fail to witness this Exhibition, as it will be the last opportunity this season.

Journalistic.

The Cobourg World comes out this week with a neat new title heading.

We have received the first number of the Calgary Tribune, a new journalistic venture, launched by T. B. Braden & Co. It is a neatly printed, newsy eight-page paper, and has every appearance of a thrifty career before it. We wish the new journal great success.

Personal.

A party consisting of Mr. T. Menzies, Councillor for No. 4 Ward, Miss Menzies and Miss Kerr, left this morning by G.T.R. for a trip to Milwaukee, Chicago and the west.

Mr. Geo. McCombe left this morning by the G.T.R. for a visit to relatives in Milwaukee.

This Season.

Fair, VanEvery & Co'y have opened a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Hats and Caps, in many styles, much below regular prices. Don't fail to see them.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Dickson By-law again the Subject of a Lively Debate.

Mr. McNaughton's Notions

The Obnoxious By-law Must Go.

Hunting for Hose Statistics

When Mayor Cox ascended the municipal throne in the Council Chamber last evening, just as the town clock was striking eight, quite a considerable gathering of spectators had assembled in the auditorium, and it was easy to tell from their expectant glances that fun was anticipated; nor were their expectations ill-grounded, as the report of the Council's proceedings will show. A mischievous twinkle was perceptible in Councillor Cahill's merry gray eyes, as he took his seat and conversed in an undertone with his neighbor on the left, Councillor Davidson, who seemed to be in equally as good humour as his confrere from No. 1 Ward, Councillors John McNaughton and John McClelland were evidently on business bent, the former had the air and bearing of a Roman Senator, a man of unbending will, who feels that he has a duty to perform from which he will not flinch, and the latter, with aggressive determination stamped in every feature. Councillor Kelly deported himself with the nervousness of a man who has a resolution hid in his coat-tail pocket. Mr. Yelland's genial face loomed good-humoredly up from behind his desk; and a kindly smile illumined the usually staid countenance of honest John Douglass. Messrs. Rutherford, Green, Hartley and Kendry comported themselves as became such a thorough-going business-like quartette. Councillor Menzies, who is visiting in Detroit, was the only absent member.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been disposed of, the following were read:—

From Mr. D. W. Dumble, enclosing a copy of resolutions passed at a meeting of citizens on the 18th instant.—Received.

From the Property Committee of Saint Paul's Church, requesting the erection of an electric light at the south-east corner of Water and Murray street.—Fire, Water Light Committee.

From Robert Kingan and others, asking that the expense of the electric lights on Hunter street be made a general, instead of a local, charge.—Fire, Water and Light Committee.

From W. Croft, complaining of a nuisance on Hunter street.—Referred to Street Inspector.

From Rev. J. W. R. Beck, re an indigent man named Burrows.—Referred to Charity Committee, with power to act.

The following accounts were presented and, with the exception of that of the Times Printing Company, which was ordered to be paid, referred to the Committee on Finance:

Robert Kingan	$41 35
S. J. Bell	1 00
G.T.R.	30
Lockhart & Chowen, repairs fire to appliances	77 95
George Stethem	20 00
A. Poussette	20 00
Alex. Elliott	3 40
Times Printing Company	28 02

After these matters had been disposed of, Councillor Kelly rose to move "that by-law 495, fixing the rate of taxation of certain properties belonging to the Dickson company at $50,000 for a period of ten years, be, and

IS HEREBY REPEALED,

and that the clerk be authorized to prepare a by-law granting exemption to the buildings now in course of erection, or any other buildings which the company may erect for any other new industry."

In speaking to his motion, Mr. Kelly referred to the recent meetings held in this connection, at which, he said, resolutions had been passed asking for the repeal of the by-law.

Councillor Cahill said that Mr. Kelly should have been aware that the by-law in question could not be repealed by a resolution, but would have to be dealt with in another by-law.

Mr. Kelly still held that he was on the right track, he wanted the by-law repealed and did not care how it was done.

Mr. Cahill said that if the Council desired the repeal of the by-law, their proper course would be to have another prepared first, so they might see what it was going to be; otherwise the same objection might be made to the new by-law.

Councillor McClelland wanted a by-law calculated to repeal the existing one. At Mr. Dumble's meeting, he said, a clause was inserted in the resolution framed, recommending its repeal, but withdrawn out of courtesy to Mr. Cox, who was absent, but the feeling of that and another meeting of citizens held since, was strongly in favor of repeal.

At the meeting on last Monday night they went so far as to appoint a committee to take steps, in the event of the Council refusing to repeal the by-law, to take legal steps with a view to quashing it. He thought it would be wise for the Council to accept Mr. Kelly's motion, which he seconded, in the spirit in which it was presented, for it would

SAVE TROUBLE AND EXPENSE.

The Mayor said he had held no conversation with Mr. Hazlitt since the last meeting, and did not know whether he desired to have any by-law at all passed.

Mr. McClelland said it was not desired to take any advantage of the action of the Dickson company in erecting a building already. He thought it would be wise to accept Mr. Hazlitt's proposal to withdraw the by-law. He wanted to show Mr. Hazlitt that they would not take advantage of him under the circumstances, but carry out the report of the meeting of a few evenings previous.

Mr. Cahill still thought the by-law should not be repealed until another had been prepared and compared. Some difficulty might arise in regard to it; some one in the community would find fault with it. Mr. Kelly's resolution was more vague than the present by-law. He understood that very few people were present at the meeting on Monday evening, and he did not believe the opinions then expressed were generally held, but rather thought public opinion would sustain the present by-law. It was complained of the by-law that it was loosely worded, but the present resolution was far more so. The only objection worthy of a moment's consideration was that it might interfere with some existing industry. He could see no reason to quarrel with the by-law, for the town was not giving the Dickson estate one cent. The Council had been frequently complained of because they did not do something to develop that mill race, and now as soon as they did anything, a few cranks,—yes, he would repeat it—stepped in and said: "We want this thing encouraged in our way, or not at all. One must have it described by metes and bounds; that would not make it any larger or smaller, in fact we did not give them one cent. We simply entered into a little speculation with them by saying we won't raise your assessment. He was as anxious for the welfare of the town as anyone, his little all was invested here, and it was as much to him as the richer man's pile was to him. He was convinced the by-law was in the town's interest and that if it were submitted to a vote of the ratepayers they would support it stick by the by-law; it was discussed several nights in all its bearings. He did not wish to refer to the fact that Mr. McClelland moved the resolution upon which it was based and supported it.

Mr. McClelland, interrupting, said that he could not have supported the by-law, because he was absent from the Council when it was passed.

Mr. Cahill called on the clerk to read Mr. McClelland's resolution, which seemed to support Mr. Cahill's statement.

Mr. Cahill, continuing, said he thought words could not put it squarer than that. Therefore, he thought it was of Mr. McClelland to find fault with the by-law when passed, because it was exactly what his resolution, that had been discussed two or three hours, had said it should be. Some people thought that the Scott Act passed yesterday was going to lower the value of property, and others said that steam power was running out water, and if so the Dickson Co'y were more likely to be the losers by fixing the assessment for ten years than the town was.

Councillor McClelland said Mr. Cahill and the Mayor well knew he only moved the resolution spoken of to aid them in surmounting a difficulty, and that it was in reality the mayor's own resolution. Had he seen or read it over he would have taken exception to it from the first. He did not happen to be present when the by-law passed; it was not his fault, he would have been present had he known the council was going to consider that matter. Mr. Cahill would have to face the music of the committee formed the other night, and the council would be put to expense that he for one did not want to bear.

Councillor John McNaughton, who had for sometime been impatiently awaiting his turn, now took the floor. He started out by insinuating that Mr. Cahill did not attend Mr. Carnegie's meeting because it was a workingman's meeting.

Mr. Cahill requested Mr. McNaughton not to state what he knew was untrue.

The councillor from No. 1 ward was on his pins, however, and would not be said nay. He indignantly denied that there were any cranks present at Mr. Carnegie's meeting; he DID NOT KNOW WHAT A CRANK MEANT.

Perhaps Mr. Cahill was one himself. That meeting was called by public notice, not like Mr. Dumble's meeting; he would like to know who gave orders to Dumble.

The mayor rose to tell Mr. McNaughton that he had no knowledge of Mr. Dumble's meeting having been held.

The worthy councillor continuing, said, well, he was only wondering was that so. Why did Mr. Dumble notify his friends, Mr. Hazlitt's friends; why didn't he come out and put a notice in the paper, same as Mr. Carnegie. He wasn't like Mr. Cahill who wanted to rub shoulders with the big bugs; he kept the workingman's company and he knew their views. He would like to know, if they brought 2,000 people to this town with their manufacturing industries who was going to pay the taxes, and where would our own people get work. (Suppressed laughter.) He wasn't going to pay taxes for any one to run against John Baptie, the Hamiltons, or anyone else. Maybe if Mr. Cahill got an open vote as he did on the waterworks extension, he might get them to vote in favor of the by-law, but he knew the feeling of the workingmen of this town and it would not carry if voted on by ballot. The first thing we knew his friend across the way, Councillor Kendry, would be wanting another ten years exemption on the woollen mills when the present term expired next year. He again asserted that it was the workingman and mechanic who paid all the taxes, and wound up a perfect torrent of excited oratory by declaring that he was bound

TO REPEAL THAT BY-LAW.

Councillor Douglas thought the wisest course would be to repeal the by-law, in the terms of Mr. Kelly's motion which gave everything Mr. Hazlitt could desire. If the by-law were let stand too long it would be beyond repeal, and become law. He thought the Dickson Company should have brought the map and showed the council what property they wished exempted, and let them know what belonged to the Company and what to the estate. As it was, they could transfer property just as they liked. He was in favour of encouraging new industry, but wanted to do it in a legal way.

The mayor said the deed from the Dickson estate to the Company clearly described the property, and he had repeatedly explained that the property went along the water waste way to London street, where it turned up just around the corner only a part of the way up to Harvey street. Another thing was that buildings erected for any but manufacturing purposes would be taxable, so that even if they extended to Smith Town Hill and built manufactories all over the town it could not do any harm. For his own part personally he did not care anything for it, it really did not amount to a row of pins and he could assure them he was not going to press the matter very hard. He believed Mr. Hazlitt did not want exemption, but would rather see all exemptions repealed. He should, himself, however, vote against the repeal of the by-law, for he did not think the objections to it had been taken

IN A FAIR WAY.

They imputed dishonest motives. He had looked upon the by-law more as a simple memorandum of a bargain made in good faith between two corporations, and did not believe the Council had power to make it a legal by-law. It was certainly in the town's interest and the taxes exempted were the merest trifle.

Mr. McClelland thought it was very singular that Mr. Cox, knowing the by-law to be illegal, should continue to uphold it. He did not think it wise to leave it in that state. When in Lindsay the other day he had seen the Sylvester Agricultural Works, of which so much had been said in connection with his exemption matter. He had been shown, too, a piece of scrip for six dollars wages, payable to a man on the 1st February, 1886. It seemed to him that an establishment that paid in that way would not be such an immense benefit to the town.

Councillor Rutherford said that in regard to the legality of the by-law, he had supposed it was the intention to ask a special Act of Parliament to legalize the Council's action. It had, unfortunately, given rise to a quantity of discussion that might have been avoided had Messrs. McClelland and McNaughton attended to their duties as they should have done. He never knew any one so anxious to get a resolution through as Mr. McClelland was to get that on which the Dickson by-law was based, and which he, the speaker, had seconded. He repudiated the assertion that the by-law had been rushed through. Councillor Douglass and others persisted in misunderstanding the tenor of the by-law in regard to what it covered. If he could judge by the large public meeting held he would say public opinion was that the matter be again referred to a committee to investigate and report to the Council.

Mr. Kelly said he had moved his resolution in good faith. If the by-law was illegal it was no use detaining it until action was taken against the Council. It was a matter in which every member of the Council had an individual interest, for the costs could not come out of the town. He thought the by-law should be repealed, and that his motion met all the needs of the case.

Councillor Hartley believed the majority of ratepayers in the big citizens meeting had favored the by-law. But that was not enough, but another meeting of citizens had met and recommended the exemption of buildings erected for manufacturing purposes in any part of the town. That didn't satisfy some parties and another meeting resulted in the passage of certain other resolutions. These people might be just as far astray as the Council had been. The Council wanted to do what was right. The owners of the Dickson property had in the past been censured because they did not put up buildings, and now that some one owned it who would, people were kicking and grumbling because they thought these men might make a little money out of the transaction. He thought that a man who invested his money

HAD A RIGHT TO MAKE SOMETHING.

He could see no more in the by-law than the exemption of buildings to be erected; he had understood it thoroughly, and had asked the Mayor privately about what was not mentioned in it.

Councillor McClelland remarked that Mr. Hartley had got himself well "posted."

"Yes, not like you," replied Mr. Hartley, "but Councillor McClelland thinks nobody knows as much as he does."

"I don't know half as much as you," retorted Mr. McClelland.

Mr. McClelland, said Mr. Hartley, continuing, thought members of the Council did not know anything if they failed to agree with him and obey his mandates. But Mr. McClelland must not think he could run the Council.

"If I don't run the Council I'll run it into law," blurted out the worthy Councillor from No. 2 Ward at this juncture.

Mr. Hartley went on to say that he did not think Mr. Kelly's resolution covered the ground any better than the existing by-law.

Mr. Kelly remarked that the by-law was illegal.

Mr. Hartley thought the resolution pointed to another by-law equally illegal. He felt convinced that if another by-law were drawn up in exactly the same terms Mr. McClelland would be quite satisfied, so long as the present one was repealed and he had his way. For his own part he used his own judgment and when the ratepayers of No. 4 Ward didn't want him in the Council they had only to say so, but he was going to do what he believed to be in the interests of the town. The voting away of $500 to the Agricultural Association that Councillor McNaughton had been so prominent in, meant a great deal more than the town would forfeit from the exemption from taxes of the Dickson property. He hadn't come to the Council to make personal references, but Mr. McClelland's action compelled him to speak out boldly; he was going to STICK TO THE BY-LAW.

Councillor Kendry was of opinion that it required a by law to repeal a by-law, and asked that Mr. Kelly's motion be read. After that was done he said he thought the matter should be left in the hands of the Council. The present by-law had been prepared by a solicitor, and how were members to know all the legal technicalities

Janitor Beavis, who had been nodding and dozing in a chair within the railing, suddenly woke up at this point, and after winking and blinking for a moment, made a charge at the audience and enjoined silence on them, though no one seemed to be making any noise.

Mr. Kendry, continuing, said another by-law should be prepared in such a way that the Council might know what they were doing. In following Mr. Kelly's resolution an even worse error than the present might be fallen into. Mr. McNaughton had inquired who was to pay the taxes and what would our own people do for work if two thousand people were attracted to the town by manufacturing industries. He was surprised that Mr. McNaughton should think that increasing the population would drive out our own people; he could not have a very high opinion of when he would make such a remark as that. He thought Mr. Kelly's resolution should not pass, but that the by-law should be prepared and properly discussed.

THE INTELLIGENCE OF THE COUNCIL

Mr. Cahill moved the following amendment to Mr. Kelly's motion:—

"That by-law 495 be not repealed until a new one be prepared to the satisfaction of the Council."

This thought would probably satisfy the people who were objecting so much, and he was anxious to please them. He had at one time thought of referring to the personal remarks of Mr. McNaughton, but perhaps the best thing he could do would be to follow the example of the man who was kicked by a jackass, and take the allusions from whence they came.

Mr. McNaughton strenuously objected to being compared to an animal that, as he put it, "was not a human creature." He hadn't spoken to this motion yet, and his turn was coming. He would give $5 to any citizen who would undertake to institute legal action against the by-law.

Mr. Rutherford asked Mr. McNaughton if he did not help to pass the by-law.

Mr. McNaughton said yes, he did, but he had taken all the mayor said for grated, and held he had a right to change his mind; a wise man sometimes changed his opinion.

BUT A FOOL NEVER.

"Did I make you believe anything untrue?" enquired Mr. Cox.

TOWN COUNCIL.

"Well, Mr. Mayor, you carried your point, anyhow," evasively retorted Mr. McNaughton.

Councillor Yelland did not feel like voting for either resolution or amendment, neither of which suited him exactly. He would like to know what was meant by a new industry.

Councillor Green thought the meaning of that term should be defined. If it meant something we had not already, he would support it, but he believed the ratepayers wanted the by-law repealed, and should vote in favour of Mr. Kelly's motion.

The mayor enquired if a wholesale shoe factory or hub and spoke works would in the opinion of the council constitute a new industry.

Mr. McClelland said it would.

Mr. Cahill thought if the Council were sincere in their wish to support new industries, they would accept his amendment, which did not commit them to anything, and would leave them at least in as good a position next week as to-night.

Mr. McClelland said he wanted to get the sense of the Council.

Mr. Cahill replied that Mr. McClelland and Mr. McNaughton wanted to get the sense of the Council by making them believe they would be stuck for costs but the Council

WASN'T GOING TO BE FRIGHTENED;

it would be unfair and unmanly of the Council to stick to the by-law until they found it was illegal, and then to make another in nearly the same terms and make it legal.

Mr. Kelly again advanced his position at some length, but on the question being put, Mr. Cahill's amendment carried by the following vote. Yeas:—Cahill, Davidson, Hartley, Kendry, Rutherford and Yelland. Nays:—Kelly, McNaughton, McClelland.

Mr. Cox said that had it not been for the impertinent interference of a few ratepayers at the meeting on Monday night he should have voted for the amendment of the by-law himself.

Councillor Cahill, seconded by Councillor Davidson, moved,—"That the Collector be directed to hand in the roll for 1884, and deposit his bonds for 1885."—Carried.

Councillor Cahill called attention to the articles referring to the fire department that had recently appeared in THE EXAMINER in regard to

THE HOSE QUESTION.

He did not pay very much attention to everything said in newspapers, which, like many other people, often said more than the Lord's Prayer. This, however, was a matter in which the town was interested. He did not understand it very thoroughly, and would move the following resolution,—"That the Fire, Water and Light Committee be requested to report to the Council any facts in their possession respecting any guarantee of hose belonging to the town, the prices paid for hose and any other facts they may be able to obtain.—Carried.

Councillor Hartley, seconded by Councillor Kendry moved that Inspector, Wilson be instructed to put down a sidewalk in front of Mr. Short's house on Dublin street. He complained that Inspector Wilson did work that he had no authority to do, and neglected and refused to do that ordered by the Council. He thought if he was going to act in that way, it was time to put him out of office.

The motion carried and the meeting adjourned for two weeks.

Explanation.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In Wednesday evening's issue of your paper is an article over the initials T. G. H., accusing some one of forging the names of several ladies on that appeal to the electors of the town. Will T. G. H. please give the forged names, so that the committee may have an opportunity of defending themselves.

The only unsolicited names upon that list were those of the members of the W.C.T.U. To have asked any one of these ladies for her signature would have implied a doubt regarding her loyalty to the cause, as it was in view of this campaign that the society was orgainsed.

Modern Times.

A Sermon Delivered in the Square Hall, Edinburgh, Scotland, By the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., the Brooklyn Preacher.

EDINBURGH, Aug. 24.—Dr. Talmage delivered a sermon on "The Wonders of These Times," this morning, in the Square Hall, Edinburgh, to an immense audience, which comprised a large proportion of the leading people of the city and surrounding places, upward of twenty thousand being present. His discourse was heard with the utmost interest. The opening hymn begins with the line: "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun." Mr. Talmage's Scripture lesson was taken from the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, the passage having reference to the second coming of Christ. He took for his text: "I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth."—Joel ii., 5, 30. The following is a full report of the sermon delivered:

Our eyes dilate and our heart quickens its pulsation as we read of events in the third century, the sixth century, the eighth century, the fourteenth century; but there are more far-reaching events crowded in the nineteenth century than into any other, and the last quarter bids fair to eclipse the preceding three quarters. We read in the daily newspapers of events announced in one paragraph, and without any especial emphasis—of events which a Herodotus, a Xenophon, a Gibbon would have taken [illegible] to elaborate. Looking out upon our times we must cry out in the words of the text, "Wonders in the heavens and in the earth!"

I propose to show you that the time in which we live is wonderful for disaster, and wonderful for blessing, for there must be lights and shades in this picture as in all others. Need I urge this day that our time is

WONDERFUL FOR DISASTER?

Our world has had a rough time since by the hand of God it was bowled out into space. It is an epileptic earth; convulsion after convulsion. Frosts pounding it with sledge-hammer of iceberg, and fires melting with furnaces seven hundred times heated. It is a wonder to me it has lasted so long. Meteors shooting by on this side and grazing it, and meteors shooting by on the other side and grazing it, none of them slowing up for safety. Whole fleets and navies and argosies and floatillas of worlds sweeping all about us. Our earth like a fishing smack off the banks of Newfoundland, while the Gallia and the Bothnia and the Arizona and the Great Eastern rush by. Besides that, our world has by sin been damaged in its eternal machinery, and ever and anon the furnaces have burst, and the walking-beams of the mountains have broken, and the islands have shipped a sea, and the great bulk of the world has been jarred with accidents that ever and anon threatened immediate demolition. But it seems to me as if our century were specially characterized by disasters—volcanic, cyclonic, oceanic, epidemic. I say volcanic because an earthquake is only a volcano hushed up. When Stromboli and Cotopaxi and Vesuvius stop breathing, let the foundations of the earth beware. Seven thousand earthquakes in two centuries recorded in the catalogue of the British Association. Trajan, the emperor, goes to ancient Antioch, and amid the splendors of his reception is met by an earthquake that nearly destroys the emperor's life. Lisbon, fair and beautiful, at one o'clock on the 1st of November, 1755, in six minutes sixty thousand have perished, and Voltaire writes of them: "For that region it was the Last Judgment; nothing wanting but a trumpet." Europe and America feeling the throb; fifteen hundred chimneys in Boston partly or fully destroyed.

But the disasters of other centuries have had their counterpart in our own. In 1812 Caracca was caught in the grip of the earthquake; in 1822, in Chili, one hundred thousand square miles of land by volcano forces upheaved to four to seven feet of permanent elevation; in 1854 Japan felt the geological agony; Naple shaken in 1857; Mexico in 1858; Medosa, the capital of the Argentine Republic, in 1861; Manila terrorized in 1863; the Hawaiian Islands by such force uplifted and let down in 1871; Antioch in 1872; California in 1872; San Salvador in 1873; in 1882 what subterranean excitements! Ischia, an island in the Mediterranean, a beautiful Italian watering place, vineyard clad, surrounded by all natural charms and historical reminiscense. Yonder, Capri, the summer resort of the Roman emperors; yonder Naples, the paradise of art—this beautiful island suddenly toppled into the trough of the earth, eight thousand merry-makers perishing, and some of them so far down beneath the reach of human obsequies that it may be said of many a one of them, as it was said of Moses, "The Lord buried him" Italy weeping, all Europe weeping, all Christendom weeping where there are hearts to sympathize and Christians to pray. But while the nations were measuring that magnitude of disaster, measuring it not with golden rod like with which the angel measured heaven, but with the

BLACK RULE OF DEATH,

Java, of the Indian archipelago, the most fertile island of all the earth, is caught in the grip of the earthquake, and mountain after mountain goes down, and city after city, until that island, which produces the healthiest beverage of all the world, has produced the ghastliest accident of the century—one hundred thousand people dying, dying, dead, dead.

But look at the disasters cyclonic. At the mouth of the Ganges are three islands—the Hattian, the Sundeep and the Dakiu Shabozpore. In the midnight of October, 1877, on all those three islands the cry was, "The water! The waters!" A cyclone had arose and rolled the sea over these three islands, and out of a population of 340,000, 215,000 were drowned. Only those were saved who had climbed to the tops of the highest trees.

Did you ever see a cyclone? No? Then I pray God you may never see one. I saw one on the ocean, and it swept us 800 miles back from our course, and for thirty-six hours during the cyclone and after it we expected every moment to go to the bottom. They told us before we retired at 9 o'clock that the barometer had fallen, but at 11 o'clock at night we were awakened with the shock of the waves. All lights out. Crash went all the lifeboats. Waters rushing through the skylights down into the cabin and down on the furnaces until they hissed and smoked in the deluge. Seven hundred people praying, blaspheming, shrieking. Our great ship poised a moment on the top of a mountain of phosphorescent fire, and then plunged down, down, down, until it seemed as if she never would be righted. Ah! you never want to see a cyclone at sea. But I was in Minnesota, where there was one of those cyclones on land that swept the city of Rochester from its foundation, and took dwelling houses, barns, men, women, children, horses, cattle, and tossed them into and lifted a rail train and dashed it down, a mightier hand than that of the engineer on the air brake. Cyclone in Kansas, cyclone in Missouri, cyclone in Wisconsin, cyclone in Illinois, cyclone in Iowa. Satan, prince of the powers of the air, never made such cyclonic disturbances as he has in our day. And am I not right in saying that one of the characteristics of the time in which we live is disaster cyclonic?

But look at the disasters oceanic. Shall I call the roll of the dead shipping? Ye monsters of the deep answer when I call your names. Ville du Havre! the Schiller! City of Boston! the Atlantic! the President! the Charley! That navy should go on calling the roll when none of them answer, and the roll is as long as the white scroll of the Atlantic surf at Cape Hatteras breakers. If the oceanic cables could report all the scattered life and all the bleached bones that they rub against in the depths of the ocean, what a message of pathos and tragedy for both beaches. Eighty fishermen perished off the coast of Newfoundland, and whole fleets of them off the coast of England. God help the poor fellows at sea, and give high seats in heaven to the Grace Darlings and the Ida Lewises, and the life boatmen hovering around Goodwin's sands and the skerries. The sea, owning three-fourths of the earth, proposes to capture the other fourth, and is bombarding the land all around the earth. The Dead Sea rolls to-day where ancient cities stood. Pillars of temples that stood on hills, geologists now find three-quarters under the water, or altogether submerged. The sea having wrecked so many merchantmen and flotillas, wants to wreck the continent, and hence disasters oceanic.

LOOK AT THE DISASTROUS EPIDEMIC.

I speak not of the plague in the fourth century that ravaged Europe, and in Moscow and the Neapolitan dominions and Marseilles wrought such terror in the 18th century; but I look at the yellow fevers and the choleras and the diptherias and the scarlet fevers and the typhoids of our own time. Hear the [illegible] Memphis and Shreveport and New Orleans and Savanah of the last two decades. From Hurdwar, India, where every twelfth year three million devotees congregate, the caravans brought the cholera; and that one disease slew 18,000 in 18 days in Bassorah; 12,000 slain by it in India, and 25,000 in Egypt. Disastrous epidemic. Some of the finest monuments in Greenwood and Laurel Hill and Mount Auburn are to doctors who lost their lives battling with Southern epidemic.

But now I turn the leaf in my subject and I plant the white lilies and the palm tree amid the nightshade and the myrtle. This age is no more characterized by wonders of disaster than wonders of blessing. Blessing, blessing of longevity: The average of human life rapidly increasing. Forty years now, four hundred years once. The average of human life practically greater now than when Noah lived his 950 years and Methusaleh lived his 969 years. Blessing of intelligence; the Salmon P. Chases and the Abraham Lincolns and the Henry Wilsons of the coming times will not be required to read by pine-knot lights or seated on shoemakers bench, nor will the Fergusons have to study astronomy while watching the cattle. Knowledge rolls its tide along every poor man's door and his children may go down and bathe in them. If the philosophers of the last century were called up to recite in a class with our boys at school, those old philosophers would be sent down to the foot of the class because they failed to answer the questions. Historical alcoves and poetic shelves and magazine tables for all that desire to walk through them. Blessings of quick information: Newspapers falling all around us thick as leaves in a September equinoctial. News three days old, rancid and stale. We see the whole world twice a day—through the newspaper at the breakfast table, and through the newspaper at the tea-table with an "extra here and there between."

BLESSING OF GOSPEL PROCLAMATION:

Do you not know that nearly all the missionary societies have been born in this century? and nearly all the Bible societies, and nearly all the great philanthropic movements? A secretary of one of the denominations said to me in Dakota: "You were wrong when you said our denominations averaged a new church every day of the year; they established nine in one week, so you are far within the truth." A clergyman of our own denomination said: "I have just been out establishing five mission stations." I tell you Christianity is on the march, while infidelity is dwindling into imbecility; that was demonstrated recently in one of the American cities, where, after the blowing of the trumpets and the gathering of all the clans, there assembled a small group of semi-idiots to denounce the Christian religion and eulogize one of their dead patrons, a libertine, arrested in New York and Boston again and again for scattering obscene literature—that dead man the patron saint of the whole movement. While infidelity is thus dwindling and drooping down into imbecility and indecency, the wheel of Christianity is making about a thousand revolutions in a minute. All the copies of Shakespeare, and Tennyson, and Disraeli, and of any ten of the most popular writers of the day, less in number than the copies of the Bible going out from our printing presses. Two years ago, in six weeks more than two million copies of the Bible purchased; not given away, but purchased, because the world will have it.

More Christian men in high official position to day in Great Britain and the United States than ever before. Stop that falsehood going through the newspapers—I have seen it in twenty—that the judges of the supreme court of the United States are all infidels, except Judge Strong. By personal acquaintance I know three of them to be old-fashioned evangelical Christians, sitting at the sacrament of the Lord Jesus Christ, and I suppose a majority of them are staunch believers in our Christian religion. And then hear the dying words of Judge Black, a man who had been Attorney-General of the United States, and who had been secretary of the United States—no stronger lawyer of the century than Judge Black—dying, his aged wife kneeling by his side, and he uttered the sublime and tender prayer: O Lord God, from whom I derived my existence, and in whom I have always trusted, take my spirit to Thyself, and let Thy richest blessing come down upon my Mary."

THE MOST POPULAR BOOK TO-DAY

is the Bible, and the mightiest institution is the church, and the greatest name among the nations, and more honored than any other, is the name of Jesus.

Wonders of self-sacrifice! A clergyman told me in the Northwest that for six years he was a missionary in the extreme north, living 400 miles from a post office, and sometimes he slept out of doors in winter, the thermometer 60 and 65 degrees below zero, wrapped in rabbit skins woven together. I said: "Is it possible? You do not mean 60 and 65 degrees below zero?" He said: "I do, and I was happy." All for Christ. Where is there any other being that will rally such enthusiasm? Mothers sewing their fingers off to educate their boys for the Gospel ministry. For nine years no luxury on the table until the course through grammar school and college and theological seminary be completed. Poor widow putting her mite into the Lord's treasury, the face of emperor or president impressed upon the coin not so conspicuous as the blood with which she earned it. Millions of good men and women, but more women than men, to whom Christ is everything. Christ first and Christ last, and Christ forever.

Why, this age is not so characterized by invension and scientific exploration as it is by gospel proclamation. You can get no idea of it unless you can ring all the church bells in one chime, and sound all the organs in one diapason, and gather all the congregations of Christendom in one "Gloria in Excelsis." Mighty camp meetings, mighty ocean groves, mighty Chautauquas, mighty conventions of Christian workers, mighty general assemblies of the Presbyterian church, mighty conferences of the Methodist church, mighty associations of the Baptist church mighty conventions of the Episcopal church. There may be many years of hard work yet before the consummation, but the signs are to me so encouraging that I would not be unbelieving if I saw the wing of the apocalyptic angel spread for its last triumphal flight in this day's sunset, or if to-morrow morning the ocean cable should thrill us with the news that Christ the Lord had alighted on Mount Olivet or Mount Calvary to proclaim universal dominion.

Modern Times.

OH, YOU DEAD CHURCHES, WAKE UP!

Throw back the shutters of stiff ecclesiasticism and let the light of the spring morning come in. Morning for the land. Morning for the sea. Morning of emancipation. Morning of light and love and peace. Morning of a day in which there shall be no chains to break, no sorrows to assuage, no despotism to scatter, no woes to compassionate. Oh! Christ, descend! Scarred temple, take the crown! Bruised hand, take the scepter! Wounded foot, step the throne! "Thine is the kingdom."

These things I say because I want you to be alert. I want you to be watching all these wonders enrolling from the heavens and the earth. God has classed them, whether calamitous or pleasing. The divine purposes are harnessed in traces that cannot break, and in girths that cannot loosen, and are driven by reins they must answer. I preach no fatalism. A swarthy engineer at one of the depots in Dakota said: "When will you get on the locomotive and take a ride with us?" "Well," I said, "now if that suits you." So I got on one side the locomotive and a Methodist minister, who was also invited, got on the other side, and between us were the engineer and the stoker. The train started. The engineer had his hand on the agitated pulse of the great engine. The stoker shoveled in the coal and shut the door with a loud clang. A vast plain slipped under us and the hills swept by, and that great monster on which we rode trembled and bounded and snorted and raged as it hurled us on. I said to the Methodist minister on the other side of the locomotive: "My brother, why should Presbyterians and Methodists quarrel about the decrees and free agency? You see that track, that firm track, that iron track? That is the decree. You see the enginer's arm? This is free agency.

HOW BEAUTIFULLY THEY WORK TOGETHER.

They are going to take us through. We could not do without the track, and we could not do without the engineer." So I rejoice day by day. Work for us all to do, and we may turn the crank of the Christian machinery this way or that, for we are free agents; but there is the track laid so long ago that no one remembers it, laid by the hand of Almighty God in sockets that no terrestrial or Satanic pressure can ever affect. And along the track the car of the world's redemption will roll and roll to the Grand Central Depot of the Millemum. I have no anxiety about the track. I am only afraid that for our idolence God will discharge us and get some other stoker and some other engineer. The train is going through with us or without us. So, my brethren watch all the events that are going by. If things seem to turn out right, give wings to your joy. If things seem to turn out wrong, throw out the anchor of faith and hold fast.

There is a house in London, where Peter the Great of Russia, lived awhile when he was moving through the land incognito and in workman's dress, that he might learn the wants of the people. A stranger was visiting at that house recently, and saw in a dark attic an old box, and he said to the owner of the house:

"What's in that box?"

The owner said: "I don't know; that box was there when I got the house, and it was there when my father got it; we haven't had any curiosity to look at it; I guess there's nothing in it."

"Well," said the stranger, "I'll give you £2 for it."

"Well done." The £2 are paid, and recently the contents of that box were sold to the Czar of Russia for $50,000. In it were the lathing machine of Peter the Great, his private letters and documents of value beyond all monetary consideration. And here are events that seem very insignificant and unimportant, but they incase and eternities of meaning, which after awhile God will demonstrate before the ages as being of stupendous value. As near as I can tell from what I see, there must be a God somewhere about.

TREASURES OF DIVINE PROVIDENCE

When Titans play quoits they pitch mountains; but who owns those gigantic forces you have been reading about the last two months? Whose hand is on the throttle valve of the volcanoes?. Whose foot suddenly planted on the footstool, makes the continent shiver? God! God! He looketh upon the mountains and they tremble. He touches the hills and they smoke. God! God! I must be at peace with him. Through the Lord Jesus Christ this God is mine, and he is yours. I put the earthquake that shook Palestine at the crucifiction against all the down rocking of the centuries. This God on our side, we may challenge all the centuries of time, and all the cycles of eternity.

Those of us who are in mid life may well thank God that we have seen so many wondrous things; but there are people here today who will see the twentieth century. Things obscure to us will be plain yet. The twentieth century will be as far ahead of the nineteenth as the nineteenth is ahead of the eighteenth, and, as you caricature the habits and customs and ignorance of the past, others will caricature this age. Some of you may live to see the shimmering veil lifted. Magnetism, a word with which we cover up our ignorance, will yet be an explored realm. Electricity, the fiery courier of the sky, that Benjamin Franklin hatched, and Morse and Bell and Edison tried to control, will become completely manageable, and imposition will be swiftened and a world of practical knowledge thrown in upon the race. Whether we depart in this century, or whether we see the open gates of a more wonderful century, we will see these things. It does not make much difference where we stand, but the higher the standpoint the larger the prospect. We will see them from heaven if we do not see them from earth.

BETWEEN THE MATERIAL AND THE SPIRITUAL WORLD

I was at Fire Island, Long Island, and I went up in the cupola from which they telegraph to New York the approach of vessels hours before they come into port. There is an opening in the wall, and the operator puts his telescope through that opening and looks out and sees vessels far out at sea. While I was talking with him he went up and looked out. He said: "We are expecting the Arizona to-night." I said: "Is it possible you know all these vessels? Do you know them as you know a man's face?" He said: "Yes, I never make a mistake; before I can see the hulks I often know them by the masts; I know them all. I have watched them so long." Oh, what a grand thing it is to have ships telegraphed and heralded long before they come into port, that friends may come down to the wharf and welcome their long absent loved ones!

So, to-day we take our stand in the watch-tower, and we look off and through the glass of inspiration or Providence, we look off and see a whole fleet of ships coming in. That is the ship of Peace, flag with one star of Bethlehem blazing from the top. That is the ship of the Church, mark of salt wave high up on the smoke-stack, showing she has had rough weather, but the Captain of Salvation commands her, and all is well with her. The ship of Heaven, mightiest craft ever launched, millions of passengers, waiting for millions more, prophets and apostles and martyrs in the cabin, conquerors at the foot of the mast, while from the rigging hands are waving this way as though they knew us, and we wave back again, for they are ours; they went out from our own households. Ours! Hail! hail! Put off the black and put on the white. Stop tolling the funeral bell and ring the wedding anthem. Shut up the hearse and take the chariot.

Now, the ship comes around the great head-land. Soon she will strike the wharf, and we will go aboard her. Tears for ships going out. Laughter for ships coming in. Now she touches the wharf. Throw out the planks. Block not up that gangway with embracing long lost friends, for you have eternity of reunion. Stand back and give way until other millions come on! Farewell to sin. Farewell to struggle. Farewell to sickness. Farewell to death. All aboard for Heaven!

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Fuego" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

The Daily Examiner.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 26, 1885.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Home from Camp.

The members of "C" Troop, No. 3 Regiment of Cavalry, returned home this morning by the C.P.R. They look much improved and "set up" by their twelve days' drill and discipline. They are parading through the principal streets as we go to press, and are the observed of all observers. The Battery boys arrive this evening.

Pushing Kidd.

Mr. R. J. Kidd has been appointed General Agent for Central Ontario for the London and Lancashire Life Assurance Company, with headquarters in Peterborough. Mr. Kidd was very successful while in Lindsay, and we have no doubt that the business of the London and Lancashire will be pushed with good success.

Return of the Favorite

Miss Jessie Wartz, the American Star, whose reputation in Canada is well known, assisted by Chas. McKinney, the Champion of Professionals, will give an exhibition unsurpassed on the little wheels, at the Lansdowne Rink, on Saturday and Monday evenings. Do not fail to witness this Exhibition, as it will be the last opportunity this season.

Market Items.

The market to-day is a large one, both sellers and townspeople being out in large numbers. The following are the ruling prices: Butter, 20c; eggs, 14c; chickens, 40 to 60 cents. Tomatoes, 35c a peck; apples, by the peck, from 20cts, by the bag 60, to 70c; potatoes, 60c per bag. Large quantities of garden stuff were being offered.

The Hotel Men Kick.

The hotel men have taken the first steps in the warfare against the Scott Act. At a meeting held last night, they decided to charge the following rates for accommodation. Shed room, 15c.; stabling, without feed, 15c.; bus fare, both ways, 25c.; meals, 40c. This course may seem rather premature, the act not yet being in effect, but a little consideration will convince any fairly minded person that it is no more than equitable. Let every man pay for what he gets: the temperance man is only paying for accommodation that is worth the fee, and if the liquor drinker chooses to add to his expenses by spending money over the bar, that is his own affair, and the hotel keeper is not to blame for it.

We Would Like to Know.

If the Antis really contemplate attempting to upset the Scott Act voting.

And what grounds they are working on.

How long the hotel men will stick to their new programme.

And how the commercials will like it.

If a finer list of entries than that of the P. A. A. A. sports was ever made outside Toronto or Montreal.

If the Liberal Temperance Union will thrive in Peterborough.

If Councillor McNaughton found out what a crank is yet.

And if he was invited to Mr. Dumble's meeting.

What that new by-law is going to be like.

What We May Expect.

Great racing between J. S. Robertson and D. D. McTaggart, the Montreal champions, and Christian and Hussey, the Irish boys.

Close listed farmers to wish they hadn't voted for the Scott Act.

The new hotel tariff to keep folks away from the fair next week.

The ladies in force at the P. A. A. A. sports on Monday.

More wrangling when Mac gets the new by-law drafted.

And capitalists to give Peterborough the go-by in the meantime.

The church driving sheds to be opened to the temperance public.

What they are Saying.

I am the workingman's representative.—Councillor McNaughton.

A few cranks.—Councillor Cahill.

McClelland knows it all.—Councillor Hartley.

If I can't run the Council I can run it into law.—Councillor McClelland.

You pays your money and you takes your chance.—The hotelkeepers.

Same here.—The Ontario Temperance House.

Great gosh!—The farmers.

It should make a boom in soft drinks, O. K.

Home again.—The bold soldier boys.

I've established a flourishing branch of the Liberal Temperance Union.—Moses.

Enter me for the mile race.—D. D. McTaggart, M. A. A. A.

And me for the 100 and 440 yards.—J. S. Robertson, M. A. A. A.

"Cable."

The oldest and most reliable brand of cigars in the market. Free from all chemicals and artificial flavourings. 12d-25w-1y

ATHLETICS.

Games of the Peterborough A. A. Association.

MONTREAL CHAMPIONS ENTERED.

We give below a full list of the entries for the fall games of the P. A. A. A. It will be seen that we were right yesterday in conjecturing that some of the Montreal cracks would be found at the scratch on Monday. J. S. Robertson and D. D. McTaggart of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, the latter of whom is one of the finest mile runners in America, have sent their entries, and between them, the Irishmen, and our own fleet-footed flyers, the racing will be the finest ever seen between Montreal and Toronto. The Association are to be congratulated on the magnificent list of entries, and the favorable auspices under which their first annual meeting will be held. The only thing now needed to make the gathering a grand success is fair weather, which there is promise of. The Ashburnham grounds will surely be crowded on Monday.

LIST OF ENTRIES.

100 YARDS RUN.—A. F. Tytler, G. F. Orde, P. E. S. Cooper, W. H. Dayman, A. Elliott, C. A. Lawford, J. Morris, and Carter.

ONE MILE BICYCLE RUN.—Gibson, McClelland and Brillinger.

440 YARDS RUN (open).—G. D. Christian and J. E. Hussey, Irish team; P. E. S. Cooper, James Sheehy and J. S. Robertson, M.A.A.A.

TWO MILE BYCICLE RUN (open).—Brillinger, Gibson and McClelland.

220 YARDS RUN.—A. F. Tytler, G. F. Orde, P. E. S. Cooper, C. A. Lawford, and A. Elliott.

ONE MILE RUN.—J. Morris, C. A. Lawford, A. Elliott.

120 YARDS OVER HURDLES.—A. F. Tytler, A. Elliott, G. F. Orde, W. H. Dayman.

CAMPBELLFORD V. PETERBOROUGH.

A game will be played between the above teams on the Association grounds on Wednesday next. The visitors are expected at about 11 o'clock and the wickets will be pitched at once on their arrival.

Rifle Match.

A friendly rifle match having been arranged for between teams from the Peterborough and Norwood Associations, it was shot over the range of the latter on Friday, the Peterborough team winning by 48 points. All the more credit is due our team, as it was not by any means the best which can be put in the field. Three of the best shots were in camp at Kingston, and others could not leave home. Our boys like the Norwood range very much, and the revolving target works admirably. It is hoped a return match will take place shortly. The ranges were 200, 400 and 500 yards, five (5) shots each range. Kneeling, at 200 and 400 yards, and lying down at 500 yards. The following is the score:

PETERBOROUGH TEAM.

Saved Army.

What next! We understand that a Quaker's meeting will be held this (Saturday) evening in connection with the Saved Army, and we have no doubt many will attend out of curosity. General Lindsay will be present.

St. Andrew's Social.

A very pleasant and successful social was held in St. Andrew's Church school room on last evening. There was a fair attendance—ladies predominating. Mr. J. D. Tully occupied the chair and after a short address, an excellent programme was presented, as follows: instrumental duett, the Misses Lech; song, "Waiting," Miss Ballantyne. At this stage an intermission was utilized to serve peaches and cream, other fruits, etc., followed by a song, "The light-house light," Miss Stevens; song, Miss Begley. After a pause for refreshments and a sale of fancy articles, then succeeded an instrumental duett, the Misses Lech; another song by Miss Ballantyne, and song, "The ballad singer," Miss Begley. The programme closed by a song, "The Tar's Farewell" by Miss Empey, Toronto, accompanied by Mr. C. C. Hampshire, of St. John's. Miss Albertina Lech played the accompaniments for the lady vocalists. The financial outcome added handsomely to the organ fund of St. Andrew's Church.

Voluminous Gratitude.

The Orange Association Present Rev. I. Tovell a Small Library.

A very pleasing and interesting ceremony took place in the Orange Hall, Simcoe street, last evening. The members of the Orange Society, in token of gratitude for two sermons preached in their interest, presented Rev. Mr. Tovell with an address and 23 volumes, consisting of the poetical works of Moore, Byron, Shelly, Cowper and Mrs. Hemans, eight volumes of Milman's and ten volumes of Parkman's historical works.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams, County Master, occupied the chair, the Rev. Mr. Tovel at his right. On the platform was Mr. Wm. King, District Master, Mr. R. Weir, Past County Master, Mr. Thos. Brown, Master No. 80, and Mr. F. W. Weir, Master of McWilliams Lodge of True Blues.

The chairman said that he had taken the liberty of calling the Orangemen and True Blues together to take part in the presentation to Rev. Mr. Tovell; although the Rev. gentleman was not a member of the Order, yet by his kindness he had won the good will and affections of all the Orangemen and True Blues in this district, who must all feel that they owe him a deep debt of gratitude for the kind manner in which he had always responded to any request made by these societies. Nothing they could give would be a suitable reward for the eloquent sermon delivered by him last 12th July. Although they could not give him any valuable present, yet what they did give would be accompanied by the best wishes of every member of the association. As chairman, it would be unnecessary for him to say anything in support of the presentation, for every man in the room fully appreciated Mr. Tovell's kindness to the societies.

Mr. J. A. Davidson, of Nassau Lodge, read the following

ADDRESS:

Rev. I. Tovell, Pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough:

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,—We the undersigned members of the Orange and True Blue Society desire to express, on behalf of the membership of the Order, in this town and vicinity, our deep sense of the obligations under which you have placed us.

In addition to a generally friendly attitude towards us, we have to specially thank you for the preaching of two excellent anniversary sermons, and to assure you of our deep sense of the great good they have accomplished in strengthening our faith in the glorious principles, which, we, as a body, exist to promote, and in assisting the propagation of the cause of civil and religious liberty.

Your eloquent presentation of the results of your scholarly researches, have won our gratitude, and in earnest of that gratitude, permit us to present you with these volumes, with the hope that they, in adding to the treasures of a well-stored mind, may also be a perpetual memento of the thankfulness which our words fail to express.

With heartiest wishes for your success in your ministerial career, with the hope that you may be spared to a long life of usefulness, and with the prayer that the practice of the great truths you preach so eloquently may earn the reward of a life of endless happiness, we again reiterate our expressions of gratitude and thankfulness, and remain,

Sincerely yours,

JOHN A. DAVIDSON, Secretary. J. B. McWILLIAMS, County Master.

Mr. Tovel made the following

REPLY:

He said that it gave him much pleasure to meet the members of the Orange and True Blue societies in their own attractive hall. It was the first time he ever had the privilege of seeing inside an Orange lodge room, when the members were present in their uniform, as witnessed to-night. He must thank them for inviting him to make them a visit; and as for the flattering address, it deeply affected him, for it was full of kind and appreciative words, and it prompted within him grateful feelings towards Him who, through His Infinite Spirit, enabled him to preach the word, on the occasion referred to, so as to do some little good. This presentation of over twenty volumes of excellent historical and poetical literature, he regarded as an act too generous on their part, and quite unmerited by him. It was, he said, a testimonial which he should ever greatly appreciate, especially as it came from a body of which he had not the honor of being a member. Amongst this selection of books he saw Milman's and Parkman's works. It is said that Parkman's history is as charming in style as though a Macaulay had written it, while Milman, as a Christian historian, has few equals, so that he anticipated much pleasure and profit from the study of these pages. The whole collection would be placed in his library to stand as a perpetual memento of a friendly feeling on their part which he assured them is cordially reciprocated. Again he thanked them for their kindly worded address and for the noble gift.

Mr. Tovell concluded his reply by dwelling on the real mission of the Orange Brotherhood in this land, which was frequently applauded by the large number of members present. The National Anthem was sung and the benediction given by Mr. Tovell, and thus was closed a most interesting and pleasing session of the Lodge.

Russia Preparing to take part in the Struggle.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—A Turkish force has occupied a small village near Mustaphapasha, a town in Roumelia on the Maritza River. There were no Bulgarian troops on the ground when the place was entered by the Turks. St. Peterburg advices state that Russia will demand that the conference of the signatory powers to the Berlin Treaty shall depose Prince Alexander and will suggest Prince Karageorgevitch, son-in-law of Prince Nicholas of Montenegro, as his successor. Prince Karageorgevitch is desirous of leading an armed force against Servia and hopes to gain the support of Austria to such a movement. Servian army corps are marching from Nisch-Kurschoni and Alexinatez towards the Macedonian frontier. The Prime Minister of Greece has prepared a decree ordering the mobilization of the army, but is waiting for the King's arrival at Athens before issuing it. The Roumelians have formed an entrenched camp at Hermanli to defend the route from Adrianople. Servia is raising loans for the purchase of material with which to complete her railways. The Bulgarians in the Timok district are asking permission to enter Servia in the event of a Turkish invasion of Bulgaria.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. R. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

Explanatory.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—I learn that some one is giving currency to a rumor that the accounts incurred in the Dunkin campaign have not been all paid. Please allow me, through your columns, to give an unqualified denial to any such rumor or statement, no matter by whom made or circulated. All the accounts incurred in that campaign, or known to be incurred, were paid at the time, except a balance of $21, due for use of the Opera House. The whole amount for use of the Opera House, rooms adjacent, and stores on ground flat, was $140. Of this sum $120 was paid at the time by the Treas, Mr. W. Eastland. No settlement of the balance could be obtained for over seven years, the money being in the Bank of Ontario all the time. Mr. Eastland, before his decease, placed a cheque to order of the owner of the Opera House in my hands, with instructions not to pay it until accepted as payment in full. The cheque was for $24.87 (from memory). It was a full year before I could get a settlement or an account of claim. The latter I never obtained. I had the cheque presented to him again and he accepted it, for which I have a receipt in full of all accounts due to him.

I am, yours etc.,
J. STRATTON.

Interesting to Business Men in Peterborough.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—As a newspaper is a suitable medium through which to ventilate the wants and grievances of a people, I will now ask a small space in your valuable columns to expose a much felt want in this district.

Your readers are doubtless aware that Pigeon Lake is crossed by a floating bridge, which at different times has been improved by grants from Peterborough and Victoria county respectively. Of late, however, both counties have been shirking the responsibility of keeping it in repair, and as a consequence the bridge is now in a very bad condition—quite unsafe and unfit for traffic. Unless compelled, Victoria will not aid the bridge, as they know it facilitates people going to Lindsay, and I should have said prevents their going where there is a market, for Lindsay has no market.

Merchants and citizens of Peterborough, there are 300 farmers in this and the neighboring township of Verulam, who are willing to deal with you. Aldermen of Peterborough and members of the County Council, the above number of farmers, a complement to the already large attendance at your market, and grain depots, are eager to contribute to the commercial intercourse of your town. Hpoing that the merchants of Peterborough will take some action in the matter, for a mutual benefit.

I remain,
Yours, etc.,

Miss Mary Sanderson's "Explanation" (?)

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—Your correspondent, Miss Mary Sanderson, in Saturday's EXAMINER, gives what she calls an "explanation," but as I am sufficiently obtuse not to understand the acceptation of the term as here employed, "I wish she would explain her explanation," and thereby enable me to explain intelligently.

Miss Sanderson, like many others, quizzically inclined, "inquires the way she already knows," and naively admits that she is now in possession of the information she asks from me.

Her admission that there were "unsolicited names upon the list," removes any further necessity for supplying others—and emphatically proves the correctness of my assertion. It is no answer to my charge to say "that they were the names of the members of the W. C. T. U," and that—"to ask any of the ladies for her signature would have implied a doubt regarding her loyaly to the cause."

This would be a poor plea for a man who had used "unsolicited" his friend's name to a bill of exchange—and when placed in the dock for forgery had no better defence to offer. To such the penitentiary would loom up in dangerous proximity.

But the ethics of the commercial community—and those of the supporters of the Scott Act—differ widely. In the commercial world honesty is enforced not only by law, but also by the force of public opinion. But in the Scott Act community, "the end justifies the means," and their tactics, like their ethics, only keep the end in view.

In the world of commerce a man cannot use his friend's name without his knowledge and approbation, else he becomes liable to penitentiary. But in the Scott Act community women do use their friends' names wholesale, without either their knowledge or approval, in matters, which, according to their own showing, are of infinitely greater importance than the almighty dollar.

But, sir, as the end justifies the means, "Let us do evil that good may come."

Yours, &c.,
T. G. H.

260 Deaths in One Week.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—There were 32 deaths from smallpox yesterday.

At a meeting of the Board of Health this evening it was stated that there were known to be 3,000 cases of smallpox in the city, of the most virulent type. Over 100 dwellings and stores have been closed by order of the Provincial Board of Health. This was brought about by the detectives employed to ferret out cases. The deaths to-day were 45. There were 250 deaths during the week.

"A Thorn in Prince Bismarck's Side."

VIENNA, Sept. 26.—The Tagblatt to-day revives the rumor that England is about to cede Heligoland to Germany. The possession of the islet by England has long been a thorn in Prince Bismarck's side, and diplomats have many times asserted that friendship between the powers was out of the question so long as England retained possession of Heligoland. It is not stated what price is to be paid for the, island, but it is generally believed that Germany will surrender her new colonial possessions in New Guinea in return for the cession of Heligoland.

Alleged Attempt to Blow Up a Warship.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—Considerable excitement was occasioned here yesterday by the report that an attempt had been made to blow up H.M.S. "Constance" with an infernal machine, which had been smuggled aboard, but Mr. Stanley, the British consul, said as far as he knew, no attempt had been made to get an infernal machine placed on the ship, for none had been reported to him. The "Constance" arrived last Sunday and left yesterday afternoon on a cruise.

Hard on the English.

Violent Speech by a Frenchman at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—A Riel meeting was held this afternoon, when a resolution was passed asking for money to take the appeal to the Privy Council. Mr. Fitzpatrick, Riel's counsel, was present, and defended himself against the charges made against him. He said that Riel's insanity plea was of no avail, as in a charge of treason no justification was admitted.

L. O. David said that Sheppard of Toronto had the courage to say in open court that we should only have one law and one nationality here, and he would remind them that to save Riel was to save the French nationality, and those who hindered him were worse than Sheppard and that he was the best Catholic and Canadian who sacrificed most for the cause of justice. He claimed that the Englishmen were the cause of the smallpox epidemic here and if it had not been for cvilizing work done by the French people Englishmen would be still in the slums of London. The Orangemen, he said, wanted to drive out the French, but they would not be able to do so, as while a century ago they were 60,000 strong, they numbered 2,000,000 to-day. He said that the one Englishman who had been sentenced at Regina had been sentenced by mistake. It was stated at the meeting that $2,043 had been collected.

Cavan.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Council met pursuant to adjournment, on Tuesday, September 22nd, 1885. Members all present, the Reeve in the chair; the minutes of the last meeting were read, approved and signed.

Councillor Sanderson reported that the committee appointed at the last meeting to meet and confer with a committee of the North Monaghan council for the purpose of making an examination of the bridge on the boundary line between the townships of North Monaghan and Cavan, opposite the 13th concession of Cavan, had met and together made the necessary examinations of the said bridge. They found that it would be necessary to have a new bridge built in place of the old one, which was in a very dangerous condition, and accordingly had advertised for tenders for building the same. They had accepted the tender of Mr. D'Arcey Dunlop, who agreed to build the bridge according to the plans and specifications for the sum of $89.50, and also to furnish all necessary cedar timber required for the same, at 4½ cents per foot for large, and 1½ cents per foot for small timber. The bridge to be completed by the 20th of October next.—Approved and adopted.

Mr. Ferguson, Deputy-Reeve, reported that Councillor Sanderson and himself had made an examination of the work done by Thos. Bullen on the middle road, in the long swamp, 12th Con., and refused to pass it, as it was not done according to agreement.—Approved.

On motion of Councillor McNeil, seconded by Councillor Donaldson, Mr. Thos. Bullen was heard by the Council.

Mr. Bullen said in regard to the work done by him, and which the committee had refused to pass, he thought it was done nearly according to contract. He would admit that it was not a very fancy job, but it was a good, rough, substantial piece of work, and he thought the committee should have passed it, especially as the timber furnished him was very rough and crooked and it was impossible to make a nice job with it.

After a lengthy discussion on the above subject, it was moved by Councillor Sanderson, seconded by Councillor McNeil, that so soon as Mr. Bullen completes the job satisfactory to the committee, and it is passed by them, that the Reeve be authorized to sign an order on the Treasurer in favour of Mr. Bullen for the amount agreed upon.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor Sanderson, seconded by Councillor McNeil, that the Reeve be appointed a committee to examine into the sufficiency and validty of the collector's bonds.—Carried.

On motion, Mr. Ferguson, deputy reeve, and Councillors Sanderson and McNeil, were appointed a committee to let a job of repairing the 9th concession line road, east of the middle road.

A number of orders were issued on the Treasurer.

The council then adjourned until Friday, November 13th.

In a Reading-Room.

I suppose there is an immense amount of misery in some lives. There is some in all. The other day, early in the morning, a friend of mine went into the reading-room of the free library to look at a paper. It was engaged. He went back to work, and worked on until lunch time, when he walked into the library once more. The same man sat there reading the same paper. He thought it was curious, but he did not disturb him. He went again at 3 o'clock. The same man sat in the same place reading the same paper. He walked up behind him and took a look. The paper was upside down. There is a chance for speculation over what condition that man's mind was in. The successful man of business would naturally say he was lazy and lacked energy, and would despise him. It is so easy to believe because you make money easily everybody ought to be able to do it. I am a believer in luck. I have seen a great many men whose abilities were far beyond the average, whose energy was unceasing, struggle, and fight, and work, and—fail. I have seen men in seedy clothes, poor and hungry, starving half the time, upon whom their successful fellows looked with contempt, who were purely the victims of bad luck. They are men who never complain. If you meet a man who whines over his condition and his luck you may set him down as entirely at fault himself. But the charity of this world takes no account of temperament, of physical conditions, or of mental eccentricities. Some people are broken all to pieces by shocks that would hardly effect others. Some people will break where others only bend. There are good Samaritans today, as 2,000 years ago, but the good Samaritans of this age are very apt to pick up the wrong man, and there are many lying by the wayside.

Who is to say what misery this man who sat for seven hours with the paper upside down was enduring? Who can say what he was thinking about—how many accusations he was making against himself—how grateful he was even for the convenience that reading-room afforded him to be quiet and hidden? There are many men wandering through San Francisco. They are kicked from bar-room to bar-room; they are driven from post to pillar. They are called bummers and loafers. Many of them have gone too far to be drawn back to respectability. But somehow the worst of them can offer some excuse for his downfall. A wise dispensation of Providence has deadened their sense of shame and made them forget the life of brightness, of manhood, they once led. And nobody is so hard on them as those who helped them to their ruin—nobody so kind to them as those who have endured poverty and hunger themselves. —San Francisco Chronicle.

His Sarah Althea Hill.

Some few years ago an eccentric Frenchman died possessed of a million or so. He had no heirs here, but there were a score of nephews and nieces in France. When his will was opened it was found that the old man had provided liberally for all, and to Sallie Hinchley, a former well-known actress, who had lived here many years, he had left an annuity of $200 a month to be paid her so long as she lived. But Sallie pooh-poohed this provision. She began suit at once, and claimed to be the wife of the old man, and to have dower rights, and all that, and she made such a hubbub as to scare the French heirs out of their wits, and they gladly compromised. Sallie took $80,000 in cash, in lieu of her annuity, and $100,000 in cash besides. She now lives in fine style here, and though no longer a young woman by any means, is attractive and leads a quiet and respectable life. —San Francisco Bulletin.

THE NEW CABINET SHUFFLE.

The people naturally desire to know by whom they are ruled, or rather misruled, at Ottawa. But the changes of portfolios, the doubling of portfolios and other peculiar tactics have given the Dominion cabinet so much of a kaleidoscopic character that it requires actuarial keenness to follow up changes and keep advised of the exact condition of matters. In the last grand shuffle it has been aimed to reconstruct the cabinet on as permanent a basis as is posslibe, when it is considered that a policy of political trickery and expediency renders frequent adjustments necessary. The recent changes which fill every vacant position are as follows:—John Henry Pope becomes Minister of Railways; John Carling, Minister of Agriculture; Judge Thompson, Antigonish County, N. S., enters the Cabinet as Minister of Justice, and Sir Alex. Campbell becomes Postmaster-General.

The new Cabinet will be constituted as below:—

Premier, President of the Council, and Chief Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Sir John A. Macdonald.
Minister of Finance, Sir Leonard Tilley.
Minister of Railways, John H. Pope.
Minister of Agriculture, John Carling.
Minister of Justice, John S. Thompson.
Minister of Customs, Mackenzie Bowell.
Minister of Public Works, Sir Hector Langevin.
Minister of Marine and Fisheries, A. W. McLelan.
Minister of Militia, Sir A. P. Caron.
Postmaster-General, Sir Alexander Campbell.
Minister of the Interior, Thos. White.
Secretary of State, J. A. Chapleau.
Without portfolio, Frank Smith.

One of the worst features of the reconstruction is the appointment of Hon. Mr. Pope as Minister of Railways. Since Sir Charles Tupper's retirement Mr. Pope has been illegally acting as Minister of Railways, and the manner in which he has mal-administered the affairs of that department, has led to a Tory senator breaking the silence that party loyalty imposed on him, and declaring that the Department of Railways, under the new minister's management, is a seething sink of corruption! And that is not the worst feature. Hon. Mr. Pope virtually owns the International Railway—commonly known as "Pope's road"—and as Minister of Railways he will be placed in a position of signing the order for the payment of a Government subsidy to himself—that is, to a railway in which he has the chief interest. This position would be a terribly tempting one to a man of stoical honesty, but to Hon. John Henry Pope it is a positive invitation to him to make the most of the position. No honest and honorable man would accept an office in which he would be perpetually subject to the imputation of dishonest motives in discharging its duties. Yet, without some such outrage on decency as the appointment of Hon. Mr. Pope, the new shuffle would not have been characteristic of Sir John Macdonald. Hon. Mr. Pope has been "acting" long enough to get the Government to cause to be voted a subsidy of five million dollars to a railway project whose line runs through a foreign country—through Maine, a state of the American Union. And now he has been placed in a position that will enable him to personally see that he gets it, and he is not the man to hesitate to sign an order to cause to be paid to himself four million dollars of the Canadian taxpayers' money, for the benefit of this Yankee railway.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. John White, M. P., says he will vote against the Government if Riel is pardoned.

The Canadian Pacific Railway tariff has been amended by the Government so as to enable the company to charge 10 cents extra for tickets sold on board a train.

"The Ottawa Paving and Roofing Co." give notice in Saturday's Canada Gazette of application for letters patent of incorporation. The capital of the company is $50,000.

Joseph Rymal, ex-M. P., South Wentworth, has been for some days in a very critical state, and it is feared will not survive if not soon relieved, and a change for the better secured.

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, of Guelph, has been chosen by Hon. Attorney-General Mowat as the latter's deputy. The new incumbent's legal experience, learning and ability qualify him well for the discharge of the important duties of the position.

The census of the North-West is to be taken during the next few months, and it is hoped that the returns will be ready to lay before Parliament at the next session of the House.

Sir Richard Cartwright will address his constituents on public questions during next month. His meetings will no doubt attract large audiences, for Sir Richard is an able, eloquent, well-informed and cutting speaker, and he will throw floods of light on the dark transactions that have occurred in the administrative course of the present government.

The Tory cause is not making very brilliant progress in Quebec. The election for the Provincial House in Joliette on Friday resulted in the return of the Tory candidate by the slender majority of 14. It was a great Conservate victory, if the loss of about 590 votes since the last election is deserving that name. At that time the Conservative majority was 605. It was a straight party vote, too. Quebec electors are getting tired of being bowled on the road to ruin, at the terrible pace the Bleus have been going.

Negotiations tending to the transfer of the B C. church on Cambridge street, to the trustees of the Baptist church have advanced a stage further. An adjourned meeting of the trustees of the Methodist church was held at Mr. Dundas' office on Monday morning, at which an offer was made for the B. C. church on behalf of the Baptist congregation by Mr. George Matthews, of $3,700. During last week, in reply to an enquiry, the trustees had named $3,750 as the sum for which the building could change hands. However, it is not at all unlikely that the offer made by Mr. Matthews will be refused, though selling the church at the price named is what is commercially known as "a tremendous sacrifice off cost." It is well known it cost over $8,400 to build the church, which is now practically as good a building as when erected, and is worth, as property goes, between $6,500 and $7,000. Our friends of the Baptist church—should their offer be accepted—may be congratulated on acquiring a good, comfortable and fine-looking church, and in a very convenient locality, and one that will be a source of pride and gratification to the congregation and members of that body.—Post.

A Fire Extinguisher.

Peculiar use to which Hand Grenades are put in Kansas.

"I've seen some peculiar things in my time," said a merchant traveller, but the queerest notion I ever came across was down in Kansas one day last week. I was in a little town selling some goods and made a call at the 'general store,' the chief business place of the village. There were lots of countrymen coming and going there, and standing around and talking crops and horses and politics. I noticed that a good many of 'em bought these hand grenade fire extinguishers—some as many as half a dozen. That struck me as being a little curious, and so I enquired of the storekeeper.

"'Oh, that's all right," he said; 'they use 'em to put out prairie fires with.'

"That didn't satisfy me, and so I tackled a farmer on the sidewalk, and asked him what he was going to do with the hand grenades.

"'I'm buying these to put in our schoolhouse,' he said.

"Think's I that's a little funny, and so I made enquiry of an old chap, whom I had met on a former trip, and knew to be a deacon of the church and a shining light in his community.

"'Well," he says, in response to my enquiry, but a little confused like, 'we thought it would be a good idea to have some of them in our meetin' house in case of fire.

"Just then I stepped around to the back end of the store to see a new threshing machine, and, would you believe it? there between two big corn cribs was a countryman with one of those fire-extinguishers up to his mouth and drinking out of it!

"'Great heavens, man,' I exclaimed, 'That will kill you!'

"'That's all right, stranger,' he replied with a grin; 'You kin have your little joke if you want to, but I 'spect yer come out after a snifter. Ther prohibitionists are right smart strict in this town, ye know. Try a little o' this gin, eh?"—Chicago Herald.

If I had known whose face I'd see
Above the hedge, beside the rose;
If I had known whose voice I'd hear
Make music where the wind flower blows—
I had not come; I had not come.

If I had known his deep "I love"
Could make her face so fair to see;
If I had known her shy "And I"
Could make him stoop so tenderly—
I had not come; I had not come.

But what knew I? The summer breeze
Stopped not to cry, "Beware! beware!"
The vine wreaths dropping from the trees
Caught not my sleeve with soft "Take care!"
And so I came; and so I came.

The roses that his hands have plucked
Are sweet to me, are death to me;
Between them, as through living flames,
I pass, I clutch them, crush them, see!
The bloom for her, the thorn for me!

The brooks leap up with many a song—
I once could sing; like them could sing.
They fall; 'tis like a sigh among
A world of joy and blossoming—
Why did I come? Why did I come?

The blue sky burns like altar fires—
How sweet her eyes beneath her hair!
The green earth lights its fragrant pyres
The wild birds rise and flush the air;
God looks and smiles, earth is so fair.

But ah; 'twixt me and you bright heaven
Two bended heads pass darkling by;
And loud above the bird and brook
I hear a low "I love," "And I,"
And hide my face. Ah God! Why? Why?
—Anna Katharine Green.

A Tale of the Commune.

The famous Napoleon column in the Place Vendome, Paris, was constructed by order of the great soldier from cannons captured in his wars, and was designed to illustrate in bronze the wonderful career of the Corsican boy. It was modeled after the Trojan column, and is to-day one of the conspicuous and notable landmarks of the French capital. But it has had a curious history. In 1871, when Paris was held by the commune, it was resolved to pull down the pillar, and steps were immediately taken to undermine its base, the idea being to cause it to fall with one grand crash, symbolical of that national fall which the communists hoped to see take place as a result of their misguided efforts.

A bed of sand, fagots, and manure was prepared for the huge mass to fall upon, that the concussion to the surrounding buildings might be lessened. The Official Journal, on the morning of May 16, announced that the column would positively fall that day at 2 o'clock. At the hour named a large crowd of spectators assembled. The members of the commune and their staff, amounting to two hundred, attended on horseback. Bands played and everything was done to give the occasion a festive character. Colonel Mayer, commanding in the Place Vendome, ascended to the top of the column and waved a small tricolor flag. He then tore the flag, cried "Long live the commune!" tied the flaghead to the rails at the summit of the pillar, and descended. When the ropes were tightened the band struck up the "Marseillaise," and all eyes were fixed on the doomed monument. "It falls!" exclaimed the onlookers, and the great mass bowed slowly toward the Rue de la Paix. As it fell it broke into pieces in the air and struck the ground in four portions. A loud yet dull report followed, and clouds of dust rose into the sky, but the concussion was nothing like so bad as most people had expected. The column forced itself some way into the ground, but no windows were broken, nor was the square in any way injured.

As soon as the huge fragments had settled themselves, Col. Mayer mounted them and waved a red flag, the populace cheering and shouting, "Long live the commune!" At nearly the same moment there was posted at Versailles, the headquarters of the government troops, a brief yet significant dispatch, dated Mount Valerian: "The top of the Vendome column has disappeared from view."

The excited communists immediately set about making the indignity to the memory of Napoleon even greater than it had been, by breaking the bronze pieces of the column and throwing them into the Seine and carrying them into hiding in distant parts of the city, so that by nightfall of the following day not a piece weighing so much as twenty pounds of the once magnificent monument which towered into the air 105 feet remained in the Place Vendome, or was anywhere to be found.

But the fortunes of war changed. The communists were driven from the city, and order once more reigned. Immediately an effort was made to restore the many ruined public and private portions of Paris, the Napoleon column among them. Rewards were offered for the finding of the missing pieces, under the stimulus of which the Seine was dragged and thousands of out-of-the-way places explored. Strange to say, every piece of the great monument was found. It was once again raised, and to-day the heroic figure of the great emperor stands as proudly on the summit of the magnificent pile in the Place Vendome as though it had not been plunged piecemeal into the Seine by an angry populace.—Cassell's Magazine.

THE BIG BRIDGE.

Some Observations on the Practical Value of the East River Bridge.

Gen. H. W. Slocum, of Brooklyn, in a recent interview, said that, in his judgment, the bridge would be worth to the two cities more than ten times its cost, but its real value will not be realized until it is made absolutely free to all except those who ride over it in the cars. It must be paid for by the people of the two cities, and the most convenient, safe, and economical method of collecting the funds to do this is not by placing irresponsible men on the bridge to collect them in driblets, and return to the city what their consciences shall dictate, but to have them collected annually by men who cannot steal any portion of them. It is real estate that is to derive the great benefit resulting from the bridge, and therefore it is fair that real estate should be taxed to pay for it. If it is made free, it will be paid for by the increase in rents and the advanced value in real estate. The speaker referred to the operation of the elevated roads in this city to show how the value of property is affected by rapid transit. In 1877, he said, the assessed values of real estate in New York was $686,063,000; in 1882 it was $1,040,803,000, and increase in five years of $145,740,000, the two wards in the upper part of the city, the twelfth and the nineteenth, being most affected by the construction of the elevated roads. "In view of these figures," said Gen. Slocum, "who can doubt the effect of a free bridge on the property of both cities? An increase in the valuation of the real estate of Brooklyn of 2½ per cent, will at once repay the city for its investment in the bridge. No reasons can be urged for the collection of tolls on the bridge which do not apply with equal force to our other highways and to our parks."

"The two sections of London," said Gen. Slocum, "separated by the Thames are not so closely allied as are Brooklyn and New York. The two sections of London are united by eight bridges, besides two or three built exclusively for the use of railroads. The most celebrated of these is the London bridge, which cost the city just about the amount which Brooklyn has contributed to our bridge—say $12,000,000. It is built upon piers, with granite arches. Its entire length is but 928 feet, less than two-thirds the river span of our bridge; its width is but forty-four feet, while ours is eighty-five. Twenty thousand vehicles and 110,000 pedestrians pass over it every day. It is a free bridge. The most beautiful of all the structures over the Thames is the Waterloo bridge, constructed by a private corporation at a cost of $5,000,000, and opened on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, June 18, 1817. It yielded in tolls about $100,000 per annum. In 1878 it was purchased by the city of London from the corporation which built it, and was made free to the public. The other bridges, the Blackfriars, the Vauxhall, the Chelsea, the Albert, and the Battersea were all constructed by private corporations, and all charged toll till the year 1879, when this system of taxing the public became so obnoxious that the city of London purchased all of them and made them free bridges. This is the result of the experience of a great city, which in the past has been governed with as much intelligence and certainly as much economy as either New York or Brooklyn. Not only has London abolished this system of collecting money, but even in the rural districts the toll-gate has been abolished with other nuisances. Many of us were born and reared in the country and can recall the time when we could not go to school or pass from one village to another without taking a few pennies with us to meet the demands of the toll-gatherer. The East river bridge will be made free. It only remains for us who have had the care of its construction to decide whether we will adopt the wise and popular policy dictated by the experience of others, or whether we will leave to others the honor of inaugurating this policy.—New York Times.

Drawing Drafts on the Future.

A man in China endowed with much forethought can make some provisions for his own future comfort. The priests have considerately organized a bank for the spirit world. To this the provident may remit large sums during their lifetime, and can draw on the bank as soon as they reach the dark country. The priests periodically announce their intention of remitting money on a certain day, and invite all who have any to deposit to bring it. All who feel doubtful of the generosity of their next heirs accordingly come and buy from the priests as much as they can afford of the tinfoil paper money which is current among the spirits. It is an excellent investment, as for a handful of brass cash, altogether worth about one penny, they will receive sycee, i. e., the boat-shaped blocks of silvery looking tinfoil, bearing a spiritual value of about $30. Paper houses, furniture, and clothes may in like manner be purchased and stored beforehand in the happy security that neither moth nor rust shall corrupt them; neither shall thieves break through and steal. When the depositor (probably a poor coolie or an aged beggar) has invested his little savings in this precious rubbish in the ecclesiastical bazaar he delivers it to the priest, together with a sum of real money as commission. For this the priest gives a written receipt. All this din is thrown into a large boat. It is a framework of reeds with bamboo mast, and its sails and planking are of paper. When all the depositors have made their payments, the priests walk several times round the boat, chanting some incantation, then simultaneously set fire to both ends, and the paper fabric vanishes in a flash of flame. The priests bid the depositors keep their certificates with all care, and give them to some trustworthy person to burn after their decease, whereupon the said certificates will reach them safely in the dark world, and they can draw their money as required. All this seems to be implicitly believed by a whole great nation, who in all other respects are probably the most astute business race in the world. Such is the strange power of a groveling superstition!—The British Quarterly Review.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Safe at Home.

This morning a party consisting of Mrs. Archer, Mrs. T. B. Clementi, and Mr. G. V. Clementi arrived in town from a visit to England. They had a rather stormy passage home, but all arrived in good health, and much improved by the trip.

Prob'e Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office:—North and east winds; generally fair weather; stationary or slightly lower temperature.

A Lesson for Our Local Legislators.

Montreal neglected to employ the expedient of compulsory vaccination, and now she is writhing under a scourge that costs her, according to the estimate of the Witness, a million dollars a month! If the citizens of Montreal had been generally protected by vaccination, the present visitation of smallpox could never have taken place. Any unprotected town is liable to the same calamity, in a degree proportionate to its size, as that which is paralyzing Montreal, socially and commercially. Will the Board of Health, at its meeting on Monday night, take hold of the matter in earnest?

Improvements on Hunter Street.

Hunter Street, in the vicinity of George Street has for some time past been assuming a business-like appearance, vieing with that more pretentious thoroughfare, and a number of stores with fine plate glass fronts, have one after the other been completed. The latest improvement is the change being made by Mr. G. A. Cox in the Darcy Block, where two stores with modern plate-glass fronts, are rapidly approaching completion. One of these will be occupied as a drug store by Mr. McCrae, and the other will be taken by a leading grocer. Mr. Cox is to be congratulated on his enterprise in this important thoroughfare.

Grand Organ Recital.

A grand organ recital from the works of the great composer, Handel, will be given in St. Paul's church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mrs. Agnes Corlett Thompson, Toronto's favorite singer, and Miss Swan, from Woodstock, will sing some of Handel's choicest soprano solos; also Messrs. Craven, Peterborough, and Mr. McClenighan, of Woodstock, will also sing some equally choice solos; a highly trained chorus will render two of Handel's choruses, and Prof. Parker will play some rare and rich selections from the same composer. Popular prices, 25 cents, and children 15 cents. It is hoped that the music loving public of Peterborough will avail themselves of this golden opportunity to hear some of the magnificent music of this great composer.

At the Lansdowne.

Miss Jessie Wartz, whose clever and graceful feats on roller skates made such a favorable impression when she last visited Peterborough, reappeared at the Lansdowne Rink on Saturday evening, accompanied by Prof. Chas. McKinney, champion of Rhode Island. The first part of their programme consisted of an exceedingly graceful skating performance, in which both skaters took part. This was followed by an exhibition of fancy skating by Mr. McKinney, after which Miss Wartz gave her skipping rope act. Mr. McKinney then, on a pair of skates with single wheels, and which were not fastened to his feet, save by his weight standing on them, gave a truly wonderful exhibition, winding a serpentine course backward and forward between a number of bottles placed at short intervals. He then jumped over a number of chairs, and crowned the whole performance by a marvellous flying leap over twenty chairs piled up four feet high and not less than fifteen feet across. The graceful gyrations of Miss Wartz and the daring dash of Mr. McKinney's performance called forth frequent bursts of applause from the large audience.

Remember the Date of Hall, Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, 29th and 30th September.

Personal.

Messrs. J. S. Robertson and J. D. McTaggart, of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, who are to compete at the sports to-day, arrived in town last night and are registered at the Oriental.

Don't Fail to Visit Hall Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 29th and 30th.

There was quite an influx of travellers in town this morning, the hotels being all well filled up. To the Oriental alone more than 40 pieces of baggage were hauled up from the O. & Q. station.

The Way the Weather Has.

At the Lansdowne.

The managers have always something new, novel and worth seeing. For the 29th and 30th September and the 1st of October they have secured the celebrated La Rue Brothers and the Boy Wonder. The reputation of these great performers has preceded them, and the patrons of the Rink will be treated to an exhibition as good as any (and there have been some rattling good ones) ever presented at this popular place of amusement.

A Beautiful Piano.

I have shipped on Saturday, 19th inst., at the close of the Industrial Exhibition, Toronto, to L. E. Horning, Esq., Peterborough, the very fine upright Goldstring piano, which was the object of so much admiration by musical experts during the exhibition. I am satisfied that Mr. Horning would be pleased to show the piano to any one desirous of seeing a fine piano, as I think there is no finer piano made in the United States, or any other country in the world. We Would Like to Know.

What the Irish Athletes think of the Canucks now.

And why Christian and Hussey failed to make their appearance as promised.

When the Antis are going to bring on their action to quash the Scott Act voting.

Or if they are only talking.

How many farmers swore at their wives and kicked the dog when they got home on Saturday night.

And how many of them went without dinner on Saturday and spent twice its cost for whiskey.

Who owned the parasol and cane found on Chambers street this morning.

And what the rumpus was all about.

When the hotel men are going to play that game of baseball.

Trouble in the House.

The slumbers of dwellers on Chamber street were awakened about one o'clock this morning by the loud screaming of women, and execrations of men, as if a struggle of some kind were in progress. Those who arose and went to their windows saw some men and women fighting about midway down the street, but by the time they got dressed and down to the street the row was over, and the belligerents had retired into one of the houses. They left behind them, however, a broken cane and parasol and a pool of blood, which gave evidence of the severity of the struggle. The rumpus is believed to have been the result of a domestci disagreement, and as no policeman was on hand at the time it occurred, it is not likely to be ventilated in court.

Improved Mill Machinery.

Messrs. W. and J. G. Greey, the well-known mill machinists of Toronto, have undertaken the contract for converting the Dominion and Clegg's mills into roller mills of the latest and most approved pattern. Clegg's mill, which before had only a capacity of 40 barrels a day, will now be capable of turning out a daily quantum of 100 barrels. Preparations for the change by an increase of power, have been made by constructing a new flume with an increased head of water, and a new building has been erected to receive part of the machinery and for store house purposes. Messrs. Greey will proceed with the work at once, and from the widely known energy with which work entrusted to them is prosecuted, it may be expected that the work will be speedily completed.

Busy at the Count.

The Scott Act returning officer, held court in the Council chamber here to-day, surrounded by his little host of deputies. They were busy examining the ballot boxes and trying to arrive at a statement of the returns, but they had not been able to complete their work up to the hour of going to press.

Good Music.

At the evening service in St. John's last night, Mr. Arthur W. Impey, of Toronto, sang splendidly the solo, "Abide with Me." The choir also sang, very effectively, Barnby's anthem, "O Lord, How Manifold are Thy Works," giving evidence of good training in their rendering of it.

New Central School Buildings.

Any visitor to town, passing the Central School buildings, would infer that beautiful new buildings had just been completed, so marked is the improvement in appearance, resulting from tuck-pointing the brick work and repainting the wood work and windows. The tuck pointing was done by Mr. John Schubert, the artist who did the similar work on St. Paul's Church and who painted the spire. Inside there has been a considerable amount of repairing done. In the Collegiate Institute block the "dark room" has, by the addition of a new window and the cutting away of part of the platform, been converted into a well lighted and, with the addition of suitable furniture, comfortable apartment. It was to-day occupied by Mr. Earl, English master, whose former room will be used by the new lady teacher. A good deal of other repairs to floors, stairs, etc., has also been effected. The work has been well done, under the supervision of Mr. W. H. Wrighton, chairman of the Property Committee, at a cost of about $300.

HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL.

On Friday the South Monaghan Agricultural Society held a very successful and pleasing Harvest Home at Centreville.

In the afternoon large crowds congregated from the surrounding country in the grounds annexed to the Agricultural hall. The first event of the day was a lacrosse match between the two professional lacrosse teams of Centreville. Millbrook was to have shown up, but the expectation of a bad defeat tended to dampen their ardor and they did not appear on the grounds. The second event was a between Frazerville and Bensfort. Great jealousy has heretofore existed between these organizations. On Friday they met to settle the question of superiority. Both teams were in the pink of condition, although it was noticeable that two or three of the old players had a slight surplusage of flesh which tended considerably to break their wind. After a hot contest, in which no casualties worth mentioning happened, the match was declared by the umpire to be slightly in favor of Frazerville. From 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. dinner was supplied by the ladies.

FOOT BALL MATCH

[illegible] er, was the caterer and did everything up in fine style.

In the evening

A GRAND CONCERT

was held in the hall, which was packed with a handsome and appreciative audience. The Fire Brigade Band opened with an overture. Mr. Lowe followed with a song which was encored, and subsequently in the evening again appeared in the same duty. Messrs. Anderson, Gillett, Dr. Ough and Miss Gillett both individually and collectively contributed greatly to the enjoyment of the day. A reading by Mr. J. Hicks was attentively listened to. Mr. Charlie Gillett, an infant prodigy from Millbrook, was a prime favorite. The special feature of the evening was the really splendid singing of Messrs. T. and M. Dunn, of Peterborough. The former sang "The Last Man," and was rapturously encored, when he gave as a repeat, "The Sunlight of our Home." The latter gentleman gave "The Old Fashioned Homestead," with critical impression, and also received well-merited applause. The reading of Mr. Harry Strike, "Josh Billings' Advice to Young Ladies," was both funny and instructive. The Fire Brigade Band was present during the day and evening, and acquitted themselves in their usual manner.

What We May Expect.

A curlers' conclave next Tuesday.
And the members to "scoop her up."
Fakirs at the fair.
And fools to be caught by them.
Dan Belleghem to paint the town—with his furniture announcements.
A good cricket match to-morrow between town and Campbellford.
All football players to turn out for practice to-morrow morning.

We Would Like to Know.

What the deuce the curlers announce meeting this weather.
Who started the dog fight on Hunter street last night.
And why Charley, of the George street squad, wasn't around.
How the ladies liked the sports yesterday.
That McTaggart and Robertson were coming to next year's sports.
If Frank Karch thought he was going to ride over the cow as easily as Charley McClelland did over Geale's dog.

What they are Saying.

Your cinder track is as good as Toronto.—J. S. Robertson and J. D. McTaggart.
Which counts one for me.—Jim Norley.
I'm the champion wheelman.—Alick.
But you can't jump a dog like I did.—Charley.
Three firsts for me.—G. F.
But it takes the old war horse to top hurdles.—A. F.
We broke the s—lowest mile record.—C. A. and Jim.
'Twas a grand success.—A. St. A.
Not bad for the first time.—The Doctor.
Those Montreal fellows are bricks; we want to see them again.—All the fellows.
So do we, but you might give us an introduction next time.—The young ladies.
George Dunsford is going to run for No. 2 ward next year.—The knowing ones.
Maybe I am.—George Dunsford.

Fresh Faces at the Lansdowne.

Mr. E. Brown, ever on the lookout for new attractions at the Lansdowne Rink, have secured for three nights, the services of the famous La Rue brothers and the Boy Wonder, who open their engagement there this evening. The La Rue's are in the very front rank of their profession and their performance should attract large crowds of spectators. Band and skating before and after performance.

Artistic Talent.

Mr. G. W. Morgan, druggist, has on exhibition in his window a collection of pictures, executed by local artists, that makes a very fine display and reflects great credit on the artistic talent of Peterborough. Mr. F. Cashel's contributions to the collection consist of paintings in oil entitled, "In the Fields," a picture of two young ladies reposing in a meadow, "In the River Flowers," a lady and gentleman in a boat gathering river flowers, and "The Amulet Seller." Mr. J. Palmer's portion of the exhibit consists of several of his spirited equine sketches in oil and a very clever etching. The remainder of the exhibit is plaques, landscapes and marine views, and a very handsome floral design painted in satin and some roses in water color. Mr. Morgan intended exhibiting the collection at the Fair, but not being able to secure a suitable structure decided to utilize his store window.

The New Williams Sewing Machine.

"What is a home without a baby?" asks some modern humorist, and truly enough the absence of a little one in the house is always keenly felt. But supposing baby to be there, what is a home without a sewing machine? We don't want to be in such a house for the thought of it conjures up a vision of slip-shod wife with untidy dress and unkempt hair and general slovenliness. No, a sewing machine in these days is an absolute necessity in every house, no matter how poor, and the question now is not shall we buy a sewing machine, but what sewing machine shall we buy? This all important question is, nine times out of ten, after careful consideration, settled in favor of the New Williams Machine, the product of native industry and genius, being manufactured at Montreal and sold by our enterprising townsman, Mr. D. Smart. This machine, for strength, durability, lightness of running, and rapidity of work, stands to-day without a rival among the many machines in use. This fact is amply attested by the numerous first prizes and medals awarded to it over all competitors in every part of the Dominion. The scene of its latest triumph was at Belleville the other day, where it was awarded two first prizes and diploma. Persons visiting the Fair should not fail to see Mr. Smart's fine display of these machines at the exhibition, or at his fine show rooms on George street, where a collection of sewing machines, organs and pianos of rare merit may always be seen. Don't forget the address. D. Smart & Son, George street, Peterborough.

PETERBORO' CENTRAL FAIR.

The Entries Filling up Rapidly and Exhibitons Flocking to the Grounds.

Delightful Weather and Prospects Fair.

The Arrangements.

THE FIRST DAY—TUESDAY.

The dusty stretch of road leading from the town to the new exhibition grounds has all morning been rendered doubly dusty by the presence of numberless buggies, spring waggons, carts, vans and drays, all hurrying as by one accord to the tract of ground upon which the sheds and tents of the Peterboro' Central Fair have been erected. And a heterogeneous freight it was that the myriad conveyances were carrying thither. The farmer's democrat waggon, bearing a load of mammoth potatoes, huge pumpkins, rosy cheeked apples and jars suggestive of honey, and preserve, placidly jogged by the heavier farm waggon containing cooped up an exhibit of pigs or calves, and was in turn passed itself by the dashing waggon of some impetious sewing machine agent or dealer in musical instruments, eager to reach the grounds and arrange his display for the benefit of the visitors. Heavy drays, carrying fanning mills, plows, reapers, and other agricultural implements creaked and groaned beneath their load, while ever and anon an agriculturalist driving a prize bull, or leading a handsome horse or team of horses, wended his way to

THE GATES.

Here one's eye was at once attracted by D. Belleghem's big sign, reared over the top of the entrance way, staring him in the face, and telling that as usual Belleghem was foremost among advertisers. Inside the grounds all was turmoil and bustle. All along the sheds at the eastern side of the grounds horses and rigs were tied up, while their owners in a three deep throng eagerly besieged the wicket of the secretary's office, clamoring for entry tickets, stable tickets, information as to where their quarters were to be, etc. Inside the office Mr. W. H. Hill, the energetic secretary, and his assistants in their shirt sleeves were almost distracted by the stream of of interogatories and requests that were being fired in at them with Gatling gun-like radidity by the impatient exhibitors outside, but nevertheless they got on with the work of issuing tickets for stabling, entrance tickets and other requisites, with astonishing rapidity. A walk along the sheds showed that every preparation has been made for the incoming fat stock, pigs and horses; teams with hay were being unladen, and in many of the stalls were piled up bags that told expressively of the fattening food to be fed to the prize animals. The Association have made ample provision for

THE SUPPLY OF WATER

by making two wells, above which have been set up three of Forsyth's famous force and lift pumps, a couple of motions of the handles of which will fill a bucket. Close by the wells large wooden drinking tanks have been built, also by Mr. Forsyth, and at the south side of the grounds an additional supply of fluid has been provided by sinking an artesian well. The stock that have already arrived are not yet on view to the general public, but it was expected, as the entries were coming in so rapidly, that they would be closed and the exhibition opened this afternoon. In the centre of the grounds three spacious marquees, specially procured from Ottawa for the occasion, were erected. In the southern one the exhibits of dairy and farm produce, which are being brought in in large quantities, will be displayed, and there is already a tempting display of honey, canned fruits and other dainties, representing the efforts of matronly hands. In the centre one a creamery is being set up, and in that at the north side, the vegetable products, which, if they may be judged by the forerunners already there, will be large individually as well as collectively. The

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY

with their accustomed enterprise, have erected their own marquee, in which is what will prove one of the most interesting displays of the show. In addition to the ordinary canoes, they show one of their famous decked in cruising canoes, fully rigged and fitted with patent folding centre-board and reefing gear, and a small canoe, which though of great strength, and capable of comfortably and safely conveying a solitary paddler, may be lifted and carried anywhere in one hand. The beautiful finish on these canoes is alone enough to render them famous. Then over at the west end of the grounds Mr. G. A. Mitchell has established what he facetiously termed his wigwam, in which he proposes to exhibit the many excellencies of the famous Wheeler and Wilson sewing Machines. Close by, Mr. W. Forsyth has an exhibit of his fanning mills. The refreshment stands, of which two have been erected, will be under the management of William Kennealy and John Craig. Messrs. Baptie Brothers have also a well-stocked refreshment booth. The grounds, though not as inviting in appearance as they may be expected to look another year, still speak volumes of the labor that has been bestowed on them, and reflect much credit on Mr. Wm. Collins, who is in charge of them. In addition to the gate connecting the grounds with the driving park an entrance has been made in about the middle of it so that access between the two grounds will be easy. If the present weather continues, large numbers of visitors may be looked for and the success of the fair will be assured.

FAIR GROUNDERS.

The directors were hard at work to day getting things in shape.

The wells in front of the cattle pens and horse boxes are much appreciated.

At noon to-day a brobdignagian blanketed bull principally monopolised the cattle pens.

The refreshment stands had a most respectable lot of patrons to-day, the owners and directors, but their turn will come to-morrow.

If the exhibitors would confer a great benefit on visitors by having the street watering on George street continued to the grounds.

A band stand has been erected in the centre of the grounds at the west end and the two town bands will at times enliven the proceedings by musical selections.

A languishing director, as he finished the feat of lifting a hundred-pound pumpkin to its place on the table was heard to call for a dose of Scott Act beer, or anti-Scott, he didn't care which.

D. Smart & Son have a fine booth at the centre of the northern side of the grounds. It is frescoed outside with "Bells," and tomorrow the belles will be pounding music from organs, etc.

The race-track is looking well, and exhibitors of fast animals will be able to show their pacers to great advantage on it. Access between the track and grounds has been made easy, and some very interesting speeding may be expected.

Mr. J. Flavelle has opened a flour and feed store in a temporary building at the south-east corner of the grounds, where peas, oats, bran, chopped stuff, rock salt and Thorley's cattle food will be kept, so that exhibitors will not need to go off the grounds to get fodder for their animals.

The Scott Act.

A Final Majority of 390 in Favor of the Act —The Full Returns.

The final returns of the voting on the Scott Act were made to Dr. Ford, of Norwood, the Returning Officer, yesterday afternoon. It will be seen that the appended figures show a majority of 511 in favor of the Act. This, however, is not altogether correct, the actual majority being 390. One of the Deputy-Returning Officers for Ennismore by some means transposed his majority, thus creating the error. The total vote polled fell far below the number of voters in the County, not much more than half of whom cast their votes.

R. W. MUNCASTER,

The Daily Examiner.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 29, 1885.

AN APPRECIATED ENDORSATION.

Recently the EXAMINER dealt with the testimonial nuisance, selecting a time of lull in the epidemic so that no special occasion might be taken as affording a text. We notice that our sentiments on the subject are shared by the Globe as shown by the follower's remarks on our little article. The Globe says:—"The Peterborough EXAMINER enters a strong protest against the testimonial nuisance. Hundreds of persons in all classes and conditions of society will endorse its utterances. The testimonial business has become a positive tax on the people. The employees of almost every large establishment, the members of almost every organization, the acquaintances of almost every individual who decides to "accept a more lucrative position" are regularly dunned for contributions for testimonial objects. Very often many of those solicited are really unable to respond without financial embarrassment, but they must either do so or be branded by the testimonial promoters as mean, shabby, and close-fisted. Many of these testimonial are distinctly the product of bulldozing, and as evidences of the esteem in which the recipients are held are a fraud and a delusion. The thing is not bad in itself. It is the extent to which it is carried that does the mischief. In not a few cases these testimonials are charity in disguise. In many others they are projected from interested motives. In the case of almost every one of them somebody is imposed upon. The whole business is deserving of a liberal amount of discouragement."

The Bobcaygeon Independent, an advanced Liberal paper, advocates compulsory life insurance to the extent that the head of every family should be compelled to insure his life for the benefit of his children. It would make him pay part of the premium in the form of an income tax, the balance to be paid by the state. It advocates it on the ground that society has a right to protect itself.

Effect of Vaccination.

Dr. Hastings, the Toronto public vaccinator, points out that almost every physician holds that there is no surety that the efficacy of vaccination is retained after the lapse of from seven to twelve years. Thus re-vaccination can alone insure the immunity of adults. The force of this contention has been proved in Europe, where, it is said, upwards of 60,000 persons die from the scourge every year. The mortality is, in the overwhelming majority of cases, confined to civilians, as owing to constant vaccination and re-vaccination the armies are almost wholly free from disease.

The Potato Crop.

We regret to hear that the potato crop in many parts of the Province is, like the spring wheat, very disappointing to growers. In various localities the crop will be almost a total failure. From Peel county the report is that whole fields are found to be diseased, and will not be fit food for even pigs. In Lincoln county, farmers who have been digging for the market report that over one-half the potatoes harvested by them are unfit for sale, and from Welland county our advices are not more favorable. The rot is prevalent on many farms. In Wentworth county, though the damage as yet reported is not so great as in the counties named, farmers are apprehensive that the crop will be much below the average. The failure of the potato crop would result in great loss to the farming community, and entail corresponding, if not greater hardships on the working classes, to whom an increase in the price of this almost absolutely necessary article of diet would be a very serious matter.—Hamilton Times.

Eureka Recitations.

We have just received from the publishers a copy of a new series of recitations, called "The Eureka Recitations and Readings."

It is a very good collection and has been compiled and prepared by Mrs. Anna Randall-Diehl, whose reputation as a writer of standard works on elocution, and also as a teacher of the art, is second to none. It is especially adapted for day and Sabbath schools, all adult and juvenile organizations, young people's Associations, reading clubs, temperance societies, and parlor entertainments. They comprise prose and poetry—serious, humorous, pathetic, comic, temperance, and patriotic. All those who are interested in providing an entertainment should have this collection. The very low price asked for these books must ensure a large sale. Each one contains 128 pages, and is bound with a handsome lithograph cover printed in four colors, and will be mailed to any address, post-paid, on receipt of twelve cents in stamps, by J. S. Ogilvie & Co., the publishers, 31 Rose street, New York.

The Eastern Embroglio.

Fighting Begun.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 28.—A Bulgarian revolutionary committee has been discovered at Adrianople. Four arrests were made.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 28.—The English Government is considered here to have sustained a defeat in the formation of the new Turkish Ministry. Said Pasha, the Turkish Foreign Minister, is known to sympathize with Russia. The Government journals here are rejoicing over the new aspect of affairs.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Advices from Bucharest report that fighting occurred on Friday near Roumelia. During the engagement thirty Roumelians were killed and three hundred wounded.

The Turkish losses in the two days fighting at Dwakova were two hundred men. The Albanians lost over one thousand killed.

No Respecters of Persons.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 28.—Major Trotter, the military attache of the British legation here, and Mr. Fawcett, the English Consul-General, have returned from Roumelia. They narrate that on their arrival at Phillipopolis they were arrested. After having an interview with Prince [illegible] they were blindfolded and escorted to the frontier, and left in an open field at nightfall in a carriage. They wandered about for several hours, and finally reached the tent of a pasha, who treated them well and forwarded them to Constantinople.

A British Loan.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Ottoman Bank has loaned the Turkish Government 250,000 lires. Advices from Beyrout say there is great excitement throughout Syria in consequence of the sudden and urgent orders from Constantinople to mobilize the reserve forces, which have been free from active duty for the last six years. The Mussulmans are distracted. Mobilization is being effected with severity.

The Cholera.

MADRID, Sept. 28.—There were 560 new cases of cholera and 203 deaths from the disease in Spain yesterday.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Reports from various parts of the Alpes-Maritimes, the south-easternmost department of France, show that cholera is spreading throughout the district.

Ottawa.

SEPT. 28.—The Hon. J. S. Thomson, Minister of Justice, left this morning to enter upon an election campaign in Antigonish county, N. S.

The quantity of sawn lumber exported from Ottawa to Montreal and Quebec this summer was larger than usual. The Blanchard & Williamson Barge Company had sixty barges employed in the business all summer as against twenty the preceeding season.

Bensfort.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The report of the explosion in Dynamite Swamp was distinctly heard here. I haven't had a chance of saying so before.

Crop reports here correspond much with those of other localities. Fall wheat will yield best, while the bulk of spring wheat for marketing will resemble what was left at home other seasons for the hens.

The Otonabee Sunday school of Balsam Grove had an excursion, by steamer Golden-Eye, on Thursday, 10th, to Idyl-Wild. The day being very favorable, many again saw the far-famed resort, and passed the while enjoyably.

The teachers and other officers of the Sunday school here held a pic-nic in the grove at Benafort on Thursday, 17th. This was a departure from the usual custom, which has been to hold an anniversary, having in connection with it a tea, and proceeding funds appropriated.

Camping by the river has been freely indulged in by a larger number this season than known for some time. The majority were from Peterborough, though other places of note were represented. The anxiety for camping, of those who can enjoy it, appears to be for a few weeks' entire freedom. All the cosy little spots between Wallace Point and Campbelltown have, until recently, resembled miniature canvass towns, since 15th of last month.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

Somebody's Dude.

Into a rink with four bleak walls,
That blazed with a glare like midday light,
Where never a shadow of sorrow falls,
Somebody's dude strolled in one night;
Somebody's dude so young and so white,
Wearing upon his innocent face
Never a sign of manhood's might,
But his scarf-pin showed a suspicion of paste.

Carefully combed are his raven curls
That lightly lie on his delicate brain
And in his fingers he languidly twirls
In ceaseless motion a gold-headed cane;
Somebody carefully combed his hair;
Was it his mother, whose night now fades?
Was it a blushing maiden fair,
Or a barber as black as the ace of spades?

There's never a doubt he is somebody's pet;
Somebody's heart has enshrined him there;
Maybe the dude has a father yet,
Or a mother, who waits at the head of the stair;
Maybe a maiden, with cheek of rose,
Is sadly awaiting this missing link,
And there he stands in a beautiful pose,
In the glamour and glare of the skating-rink.

But there comes a man full of honeyed guile
And fastens the cruel skates to his feet;
Then stands aside with a cynical smile,
And waits for his head his heels to meet.
* * * * * * *
Kiss him once for his grandmother's sake;
It's doubtful if ever she kisses him more;
The skates from his feet so tenderly take,
Sweep out the debris and close the door.

—Times-Democrat.

Dear Little Hands.

Dear little hands, I loved them so!
And now they are lying under the snow—
Under the snow, so cold and white,
I can not see them, or touch them to-night.
They are quiet and still at last, ah, me!
How busy and restless they used to be!
But now they can never reach up through the snow,
Dear little hands, I loved them so!

Dear little hands, I miss them so!
All through the day, wherever I go—
All through the night, how lonely it seems,
For no little hands wake me out of my dreams.
I miss them all through the weary hours,
I miss them as others miss sunshine and flowers;
Day time, or night time, wherever I go,
Dear little hands, I miss them so!

Dear little hands, they have gone from me now,
Never again will they rest on my brow—
Never again smooth my sorrowful face,
Never clasp me in a childish embrace.
And now my forehead grows wrinkled with care,
Thinking of little hands, once resting there,
But I know in a happier, heavenlier clime,
Dear little hands, I will clasp you sometime.

Dear little hands, when the Master shall call,
I'll welcome the summons that comes to us all—
When my feet touch the waters so dark and so cold,
And I catch my first glimpse of the City of Gold.
If I keep my eyes fixed on the heavenly gate,
Over the tide where the whitted-robed ones wait,
Shall I know you, I wonder, among the bright bands,
Will you beckon me over, oh! dear little hands?

—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Somnambulist.

Jesse Miller, a farmer, living in Greenville Township, Somerset County, Pa., is ready to swear that his household is afflicted with a witch. Some time ago he found a saddle hanging on a hook in the chimney. He had placed it on the balusters. This occurred three times, and every member of the family accused solemnly declared that they had not touched the saddle. Miller took it to the woodshed, and again it was displaced. He then removed the saddle to a sawmill and spiked it to a standard. It stays there. His wife was washing one day, and stepped out of the apartment for a few minutes. Returning, she was amazed to find the articles which she had left in the tub thrown about over the floor. Miller was aroused one night by terrible screams in his front yard. He bounded out of bed, and rushed out and found his daughter there alone. She had no knowledge of how she got there. Every window and door in the house was locked and bolted as when the young lady went to bed. Twice since she has been spirited out of the house in broad daylight, in the presence of her mother and others. The spirit of darkness, that exerts this influence over the young lady is invisible to all others. She described the witch as resembling an old woman, with hoary, hairy face, and wearing a white cap. The Miller family is thoroughly terrified, as is also the entire community. Miller intends to leave the locality as soon as possible. Meanwhile he has been in Meyersdale in quest of a witch doctor, to make the place tolerable for a short time at least. He is firm in his witch belief.

[Solution: the girl is a somnambulist.]

A New Story of Grant.

Drifting off to other matters, this curious, and, I believe, new story about General Grant came out. Grant had just been appointed to the command of all the armies in the West. In the East he was not so well known as afterward, and men began to make close inquiries about him. Judge Porter asked an old friend who had been made a pension agent what he knew about him. "Only this," was the reply, "and it has singularly impressed me. An old gentleman came to my office about his pension whose name proved to be Jesse Grant. I asked him if he knew this new General. He asked, 'You mean "Lis"?' And then he told me that he was his son, and he had just received a letter from him, which he showed me. It read something like this: 'You are perfectly right in thinking that I recognize my unfitness to command this great army. But I look around me and wonder who is more fit. I may not succeed. But if I am beaten, it will be so badly that I will never be heard of again.'" That certainly sounds like Grant.—New York Tribune.

Courted Her Like $900.

There was a man named Watkins in a Confederate regiment during the war, who was well on toward middle life; but when his wife came up to camp one day she seemed to make him young by comparison. There seemed to be a century's difference between them; and the man, who was as ugly as a Georgia cracker usually is, was handsome beside his wife. "How did you ever come to marry such an old witch as that?" asked one of his superior officers, taking him aside. "Well, you see," said the man, rather sheepishly, "her mother kept a little grocery store down on the corner of the street where I lived, and I used to go in there to get what I wanted to eat. One day I found the old woman's ugly daughter all alone in the store. Just as I came in I heard the clink of silver through the loose rafters overhead, and the old woman counting: 'One two, three,' and so on. I sat down and made love to the girl, and the old woman up-stairs kept on counting. By-and-by she was away up in the hundreds—four hundreds, four hundred and fifty, five hundred. I courted that girl harder and harder as the old woman got higher. Finally she stopped at nine hundred. 'Great Scott! I said to myself. 'Nine hundred dollars!' Beloved Sukey, will you be mine? She said she would, and we were married that same day." "Well, is that all?" "No; there were only thirty of those silver dollars; the old woman counted them over thirty times." Perhaps it would be well to investigate a little every time.

The Great British Channel Tunnel.

The English liberal public have recently been paying high honors to John Bright. The great Quaker orator has now been in Parliament a quarter of a century, and unlike other public men, he has not grown more conservative with advancing years. He is as ardent a liberal as he was when he first entered public life. He resigned from the Gladstone ministry because he could not conscientiously approve of the bombardment of Alexandria, and the unprovoked war upon the people of Egypt. In his answers to the congratulatory addresses of his admirers, he took occasion to refer to the project for uniting Great Britain to the Continent, by means of a tunnel under the channel which separates England from France. The enterprise, which would be of incalculable benefit to the business interests of all Western Europe, and most of all to great Britain herself, has been opposed by all classes of public men in England, because they fear that the tunnel, if constructed, would put the British islands at the mercy of the various armies of the continental nations. Mr. Bright ridiculed these fears as being chimerical benefits, which would follow the connection between the British railway system and that of the continent. Sir John Hawkshaw, a famous engineer, stated that there are no engineering difficulties in the construction of the tunnel which could not be easily surmounted. It could be finished in eight years, and the cost would not exceed $40,000,000. He estimates there will be 2,000,000 of passengers passing through it annually, and that the freight business would not be less than 1,200,000 tons. The income, he estimates, would be nearly $5,000,000 annually, and allowing forty per cent for working expenses, there will be a profit of nearly seven per cent. The tunnel will be nearly one hundred and eighty feet below the bed of the channel, and in case a war should break out it would be an easy matter to make it useless to an invading force. It does not require any great amount of imagination to show how important would be the practical annexation of England to the Continent of Europe. True, a vast amount of shipping would be rendered useless, but then the transportation of passengers and merchandise would be cheapened, and much valuable time saved. The powerful material interests involved will necessitate in time the construction of this tunnel, and when completed, it will be one of the wonders of the world.—Democrats Monthly.

"There is no class of workmen in the country," says the New York Journal of Commerce, "so miserably fed, clothed and paid as the clergy. There is no class of men to whom others, high or low, rich or poor, faithful or unbelievers, so uniformly go, and from whom they so uniformly receive help in physical as well as mental suffering and need."

A traveler in Montana, while suffering from the cold at 25 degrees below zero, offered to bet $100 that no human being living could ascend the Big Hole Mountain, 1,200 feet high, without any other clothing than a pair of boots, and return alive. A native accepted the bet, put up the money, and started, being absolutely naked above the tops of his rubber boots. He carried a whisky bottle in the left hand and a twig of long-leaved pine in the other. A rousing applause of the crowd of spectators greeted the hero when he reached the top. He did not stop long, but returned on the jump. His face was red-hot from the whisky, his back by scourging himself with the pine twig, and the uncovered parts of his legs were blue with chilliness.

The Daily Examiner.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 29, 1885.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Sale Postponed.

The sale of articles under the auspices of the ladies of St. John's south ward Sunday school, announced to be held next Wednesday in Mr. W. H. Rackham's house, corner Reid and Charlotte streets, has been postponed till Wednesday, October 7th, at the same time and place; open afternoon and evening.

The Hand of Death.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. E. J. Toker, which took place on Monday evening. The deceased lady was ill just one week, having been stricken down with an aggravated attack of inflammation. By her demise several young children are orphaned. Mr. Toker has the warmest sympathy of the community in his very sad bereavement.

The Fire Brigade Band Reinforced.

The EXAMINER, in its friendly attitude towards the Fire Brigade Band, has had occasion to remark that the one deficiency in this excellent organization was the lack of reed instruments. This want is now supplied to a large extent. Mr. McEwan, of Bowmanville, a first-class clarionet performer, has become a resident of this town and a member of the band.

The Irish Athletes.

Though many were disappointed yesterday at not seeing the two members of the Irish Athletic team at the P.A.A.A. sports, they can have the pleasure of seeing an excellent photograph of that team of mighty men, which is on exhibition in the window of Mr. Thomas Kelly. The portrait is a splendid product of the photographers art, by Bruce of Toronto, and was brought here by Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, P.L.S., who kindly loaned it to Mr. Kelly to put on exhibition.

Notice of Visit.

I have the pleasure of announcing to the residents of Peterborough and vicinity that Mr. P. H. Morris, formerly of the firm of Lazarus & Morris, and now from the establishment of B. Laurance, of Montreal, and London, England, will be at my store during the three days on which our Central Exhibition is held, viz., Tuesday and Wednesday, the 29th and 30th Sept., and on Thursday, the 1st of Oct., for the purpose of adjusting the B. Laurance genuine pebble and other spectacles and eyeglasses for every requirement of the eye. He is especially qualified by his long experience and thorough knowledge of his profession, to give just such spectacles, &c., as are best suited in each case, however difficult, and afford relief where relief is possible. This, added to the acknowledged superiority of the B. Laurance pebble spectacles and eyeglasses, assures to wearers and others needing aids to sight, great advantages not otherwise attainable. Remember dates of visit to my store. John McKee, chemist and druggist.

The Beautiful "Bell."

Among the many industries in which of late years Canada has attained to a proud pre-eminence that of organ manufacturing may safely be assigned to a leading place. And among the many factories, justly famed for their productions in this line, that of W. Bell & Co., of Guelph, Ont., stands proudly and without a rival to the front. The Bell organ has not merely found its way into every Canadian home, but its sweet flute-like notes and deep diapason are heard alike in the happy homes of merry England, among our cousins over the border, floating over Australian wilds, and even in the heart of Conservative Japan. None but the highest degree of excellence could secure so wide-spread a fame, and the fact that the Bell, which has been on the market since 1864, has invariably carried off highest honors wherever exhibited, is an indication of its rare qualities. Messrs. D. Smart & Son, of George street, are the agents in Peterborough for this rare instrument, and persons contemplating the purchase of an organ should not fail to call at the ware-rooms, where, in addition to the matchless Bell organ, may be seen the Williams piano and the new Williams sewing machine, as well as a collection of all kinds of musical instruments. D. Smart & Son, George street, Peterborough.

ATHLETICS.

The P. A. A. A. Games.

A HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL INAUGURAL MEETING.

If the first annual games held under the auspices of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association may be regarded as a criterion by which to form an estimate of its probable growth and influence in the future, it is quite safe to say that the next annual meeting will be an even greater success than the highly interesting series of games held yesterday afternoon.

Although for unexplained reasons the two members of the Irish team, Christian and Hussey, who telegraphed their entries last week, did not turn up, there was a sufficient number of entries in most of the events to render them interesting, and the presence of Montreal's two famous runners, J. D. McTaggart and J. S. Robertson, both of whom came here bearing fresh laurels of victory, gained at the Toronto championship meeting, afforded the pleasure of witnessing the athletic exploits of two amateurs of the highest standing. More favorable weather could not have been desired; the grounds were in splendid condition, and the attendance was large; the ladies, with their usual appreciation of manly sports, almost monopolizing the grand stand. The management was excellent, every race being called on time and run off with commendable promptitude, not a hitch or accident of any kind occurring to mar the afternoon's pleasure. Mr. R. B. Rogers, himself a veteran athlete, handled the pistol, despatching the contestants in each race in a way that left no cause of complaint, and Hon. R. Hamilton and Dr. Geo. Burnham officiated at the tape line. Mr. J. E. Hammond, Secretary of the Association, discharged his duties with all his accustomed energy. The Band of the Fire Brigade enlivened the intervals between the races with choice musical selections that added greatly to the pleasure of the programme.

The first event called was the

HUNDRED YARDS RACE,

open to members of the Association only. A. Elliott, P. E. S. Cooper and George F. Orde faced the starter. All three got off well at the crack of the pistol, Elliott with a trifling lead. Orde, however, soon began to force him, and in spite of a gallant effort, passed him at about 75 yards, coming in a winner by three or four yards, Cooper finishing close behind Elliot. Time, 11 seconds. The followed. For this Gibson, McClelland and Brillinger were entered, but McClelland did not start. Gibson went away with the lead, and though Brillinger made several attempts to pass him, was never headed, winning easily by almost a lap in 3-min. 40-½ sec. The

ONE MILE BICYCLE RUN

OPEN QUARTER MILE,

was contested by J. S. Robertson, M.A.A.A., A. Moore, and A. F. Tytler. As was anticipated it proved a soft thing for the famous Montrealer, who, at the crack of the pistol, jumped off with a mighty spring that at once put him several yards ahead. This position he maintained with the utmost ease, winning by several yards in 56½ seconds. The second place was taken by Moore.

The next event was the

TWO MILE BICYCLE RUN.

Brillinger, Gibson and McClelland trundled up to the starting line for this, and McClelland took the lead, which, however, he only maintained for one lap, when he was passed by the wiry little Gibson who was going for all he was worth. Brillinger stopped to fix something that went wrong with his wheel and was left hopelessly out of it. McClelland stuck gamely to his task but could not, though in the attempt he ran clean over Geale's dog, which got on the track, get near his opponent, who crossed the winning line about a lap ahead of him in 8 min. 40 sec.

One heat of the boys' 200 yard race was run off before the bicycle race started, and was won in capital style by R. Wood, W. Revell 2nd, and G. Boucher 3rd. The second heat was run after the bicycle race, and this time Wood got left on the scratch, Revell getting 1st, and Boucher 2nd.

Starters were then called for the ASSOCIATION 220 YARDS.

A. F. Tytler, G. F. Orde and P. E. S. Cooper answered the bell. Orde took the lead from the start and won handily, though Cooper was close at his heels. Time 25 sec.

The association mile was between J. Morris and C. A. Lawford, who seemed to have a mutual understanding that it was not to be too fast. They started off at about a six minute gait, Lawford leading, and this order was maintained until within 150 yards of the winning line, when both began to sprint. Lawford was too strong for Morris and won by about a couple of yards. At the earnest request of the competitors the time is suppressed, as neither of them trained for a record.

THE 100 YARDS HURDLE RACE

brought out only two starters, but was one of the best races of the day. George F. Orde and A. F. Tytler were the contestants, and getting off well together took the ten hurdles almost side by side. Orde tipped the last hurdle very slightly, but enough to retard him a little, they both breasted the tape line so closely together that every one but the judges thought it was a dead heat. Those gentlemen, however, allowed that Tytler was a nose ahead, and the race went to him.

THE OPEN 100 YARDS.

There had originally been a pretty full field of entries for this, but owing to the presence of J. S. Robertson, all backed out but J. Hamly and A. Moore. "I can win second," said Hamly, and he, Moore and Robertson toed the scratch. Hamly's prediction was correct. Robertson led all the way, finishing several yards ahead of Hamly. The time was 11 seconds, which may seem slow, but the 100 yard races were run on the turf, which accounts for it.

The final heat of the boys' race was won by R. Wood, W. Revell, second. Wood again ran in a style that would have been no discredit to many of his seniors on the field, making the 200 yards in 25 seconds.

THE FIVE MILE BICYCLE RUN.

C. A. Lawford and A. Gibson were the competitors in this race. Lawford led for the first few laps, but had at last to give way to his energetic opponent, who seemed not to know what it was to tire out. As lap after lap was reeled off the little man increased his lead on the big one, until he had almost put a lap between them. Once Lawford drew up even with Gibson, but could not brush him for inside place, and he finished an easy winner by almost a lap.

THE OPEN MILE RACE

which followed was chiefly of interest, owing to the presence of J. D. McTaggart, winner of the two mile champion race at Toronto on Saturday. A. Rose was the only one who had the courage to toe the mark with him, and after taking the measure of his stride for one lap, concluded to let him run the balance against time. McTaggart is a grand runner, and though suffering from a blister, and without an opponent to force him, ran the mile in magnificent style, finishing up with a gallant spurt that took him over the tape in 4 min. 48 sec. This is several seconds above his record for the distance. Some gentlemen measured the length of his [illegible]

The last race on the list was the

ASSOCIATION QUARTER MILE,

and it was without exception the best run race of the series. Tytler, Orde and Cooper were the starters. Orde and Cooper started at a cracking pace that made Tytler glad to fall out when half way round. Orde was leading, and Cooper crowded him for all he was worth every inch of the way. George, however, let himself out gallantly, and his persistent and plucky rival could not make an inch on him, but finished close on his heels, the time being caught at 55⅗ seconds.

At the conclusion of the games Messrs. McTaggart and Robertson were shown through the Ontario Canoe Factory by Mr. R. Rogers. Mr. Robertson is somewhat of a paddler, and both he and Mr. McTaggart evinced much interest in the process adopted at the canoe works. These gentlemen expressed surprise at finding in a place like Peterborough such a flourishing athletic association, with such well equipped grounds. They say that the cinder path, though perhaps not constructed with as much care, is a better one to run on than that at Rosedale, Toronto, generally supposed to be one of the finest in the Dominion. During their short stay here they have made a number of friends, who will anxiously hope to see them, accompanied by other members of the M.A.A.A., at the next meeting of the home association.

Football.

KICKERS, TO THE FRONT; ATTENTION!

The football members of the P. A. A. A. are going to commence practice on Wednesday, and as the match with the Torontos is to be played on the 10th Oct. every player is expected to turn out. There will be practice every day at 6 o'clock in the morning and again in the afternoon.

Don't Fail to Visit Hall Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 29th and 30th.

The Williams Piano.

The evolution of music, if one had time to follow it up, would be an interesting study. To trace its varied rise in this wooden country, from the time when a jews-harp twanged by some horny handed backwoodsman in his log cabin, was the only melody that woke the echoes of the primeval forest, up till to-day, when in the comfortable home of every farmer in the land may be heard the ravishing strains of Gottschalk's or Schubert's exquisite music, played by the hands of Canada's own fair daughters, on a piano of rare excellence manufactured by the skill and industry of our own ingenious sons. The Williams Piano, manufactured by R. S. Williams & Sons of Toronto, and sold by D. Smart & Son of this town, stands in the very front rank of these instruments, and wherever exhibited has been successful in carrying off valuable prizes and awards. It is distinguished for the purity of its tone; the deep resonance of its bass, and the clear ringing notes of its higher keys, being among the most noticeable of its many excellencies. Piano virtuosi have unanimously agreed that the Williams piano has few equals in America, the home of the world's greatest piano making industry. A call at Mr. Smart's well-stocked ware-rooms on George Street, will be amply repaid, for one of the finest stocks of Pianos, Organs and Sewing Machines to be found in the Dominion, may be seen there.

Ambitious Artillerymen.

The annual meeting of the Dominion Artillery Association began in Toronto to-day, and a considerable contingent from the Field Battery took the morning train, to enter the target shooting competition and the ordinance shifting competition. The following members represent Peterborough at this meeting:—Sergeant-Major Metherall, Quarter-Master Sergeant Ferguson, Sergeant Sharp, Corporal Kincaid, Corporal Cregan, and others from Fraserville and Millbrook, go to make a contingent of nine. The prize for which the boys are competing are: 1st, the Gzowski cup and $30; 2nd, $20 cash; 3rd, $10 cash. We heartily hope the boys won't win $30 or $10.

An Engineering Feat.

The Water Works company in laying their mains on Charlotte street have had serious difficulties to contend with, which have added greatly to the expense of the work. At the crossing of George street immense boulders were encountered in the trench, huge granite boulders, which made a deal of blasting necessary. Further west living springs were met with, and the trench [illegible] point a running stream. The crossing of the creek opposite English's canoe factory was another expensive piece of work, and the difficulties were very ingeniously overcome. A light dam was constructed, intersected by a sluiceway of planks to allow of the main body of water passing over. The trench was dug about three feet under the bed of the creek, and this was kept clear of water by a novel application of the siphon principle. A five inch T main was placed with the lower end of the T in the trench, which received the spring water and the leakage of the dam. Connection was made by hose with the hydrant, and this ended in a ¾ inch jet forced through the horizontal portion of the T pipe. A vacuum was thus created, and the water from the trench followed and poured forth the full capacity of the 5 inch main, keeping the trench practically dry enough to admit of working. Work was carried on all Saturday night, and the mains were successfully placed under the bed of the creek, and a great difficulty surmounted. The work was done under the immediate supervision of Mr. R. B. Martin, superintendent of pipe laying, who devised the ingenious application of the siphon principle alluded to above. He was also assisted by the ready witted ingenuity of Mr. James English, who being near by, was ready with a word in season, and a helping hand. The water works company show and have shown a great deal of pluck in the various difficulties which have confronted them from time to time. Their energy and persistence is worthy of all praise, and we hope that it will meet with abundant public appreciation.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1300.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can get their logs to their mills; the adjoining lake affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 30, 1885.

Personal.

Mr. E. Phenix, of the Mail, is in town doing the exhibition.

Mr. P. C. Foy, of Toronto, formerly of Foy & Star, Peterborough, is in town.

Mr. E. R. Parkhurst, of the Toronto Mail, is in town reporting the fair.

Mr. Robt. Jaffray, of Toronto, accompanied by the manager of the Globe, was in town yesterday.

Mr. H. C. Rogers, postmaster, has gone to Welland, in connection with the prosecution of the notorious "Clutch" Donoghue, who is being tried for the post office robbery and other similar crimes.

The Reeve of Burleigh, Anstruther and Chandos, Mr. F. Elmhirst, and the ex-Reeve, [illegible] evening about eleven o'clock driving into town together. They appeared sound; coats not torn nor faces blackened.

Mr. John Cameron, of the Globe, was in town yesterday afternoon and we had the pleasure of a friendly call from him. He was the guest of Mr Geo. A. Cox, who took advantage of Mr. Cameron's presence to drive him about the town and show him its chief points of interest. He visited the Barnardo Home, the Nicholls Hospital and other places. Mr. Cameron speaks highly of the appearance and go-aheaditiveness of the town, and says it's a perfect little city. We regret that Mr. Cameron's business engagements prevented him remaining over and seeing our town on a gala day, or at night, when our electric lights, in their brilliant superiority, would furnish Mr. Cameron's paper with a text for a slashing denunciation of the inferior and costly electric lights of the Queen City.

What We May Expect.

The Agricultural Association to put up a main building for next year.

Visitors to go and see the LaRue Bros. and the Boy Wonder.

A splendid prize list and good shooting at the rifle meeting next week.

More hose agents in town.

Lots of fun at the bycicle races to-morrow.

And another crowd of visitors.

We Would Like to Know.

What our friend "hose" would have said if he had been in town last night.

And if he won't be down here as soon as he hears of it.

Who fired Tommy Beavis' building.

How the visitors like the fair.

The use of 200 feet of hose that can't be coupled to any hydrant in town.

Why they don't appoint a gatekeeper who knows a newspaper man when he sees one.

Who is the Toronto World's Peterborough correspondent.

Or whether "Moses" hasn't been revenging himself.

What they are Saying.

A fine exhibition.—The visitors.

Peterborough is a pretty and lively town. —Manager Cameron of the Globe.

'Twas set on fire.—Mr. Beavis.

I will make an example of rowdies.—Police Magistrate Dumble.

Didn't we tell you it was going to be a big thing.—The exhibition directors.

The town is getting its $500 worth.—Councillor Mac.

Who says we don't want new hose?—The hose boys.

You had plenty last night.—Town Councillors.

If we only had our lines running now.—The Street Car Company.

Y. M. C. A. Anniversary.

This gathering, to be held on Thursday night in St. Paul's Church, promises to be very successful. The Rev. Dr. Potts, who is to be the chief speaker, is well-known throughout Canada as a very able man. The musical part of the programme, under the charge of Prof. Parker, will be very good.

The LaRues and the Wonder.

The LaRue brothers and the boy wonder opened their engagement at the Lansdowne rink last evening, in the presence of a large audience. The LaRue brothers give an exceedingly pleasing exhibition of double skating and acrobatic tricks, while the Boy Wonder, in his marvellous feats of contortion on rollers, proved himself to well deserve the cognomen by which he is known. His wonderful feats are beyond description, and everyone should see him for themselves before he leaves. The LaRues and the Boy Wonder will be at the Lansdowne this and to-morrow evening, giving a complete change of programme at each performance.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

Mr. Dumble's Decrees.

The Police Court, in common with the rest of the town, seemed to be enjoying a boom this morning, and there was more stir than has been seen for some time.

James Hepburn and Wm. Dodds pleaded guilty to drunkenness and were each fined $2 or in default 10 days in gaol.

A hulking looking ruffian, named William McCullough, was arraigned on three distinct charges. First, with having been drunk and disorderly; second, with disturbing the services of the Salvation Army, and third, with creating a disturbance in Bradburn's Opera House while a performance was in progress. P. C. Adams proved the first charge, for which the prisoner was mulcted in $2 and costs with the alternative of ten days. Mr. Heather, a soldier of the Army, made good the second, and this time Mr. Dumble decided that a fine of $20, to be paid forthwith, or a month in gaol, would be the correct thing. The third charge was sustained by Mr. Bradburn, and resulted in McCullough being fined $20, or 20 days. He evinced neither inclination nor ability to pay the fine, and will probably have 50 days to reflect on the error of his ways within the cool shades of Castle Nesbitt.

Directors and Visitors De-[illegible]

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY.

The weather for the second day of the Peterborough Central was all that could be desired and it was an augury of the splendid success the show promises to be in every department. The grounds present a far different aspect from the appearance presented yesterday. All the exhibits were placed in position and although there were few visitors in the morning, there were enough of exhibitors and their satellites to give the grounds

AN ANIMATED APPEARANCE.

The several refreshment booths were doing a briak trade, and here and there, the numerous exhibitors were putting finishing touches and settling exhibits into final shape. Perspiring grooms were rubqing down, to the sibilant whistle of their class, their charges, or taking flowing manes and tails "out of curl papers," and dreaming of red tickets. Among the the cattle pens bucolic guardians were currying their already silkenly sleek charges.

Nowhere is the success of the inaugural Central Exhibition shown so much as in the

SPLENDID SHOW OF HORSES AND CATTLE

which the boxes and pens appropriated to this class of stock contains.

The exhibitors are numerous in all classes, and the animals generally above the average of excellence. In going the rounds, the first exhibitor encountered is

James Montgomery, of Bridgenorth, whose general purpose stallion "Young Favorite Stranger" attracted considerable attention.

T. Eastwood, of Buckhorn, was justifiably proud in giving the pedigree and points of his black general purpose stallion "Whitby Conqueror."

Henry Staples, Cavan, had a beauty on exhibition in his tidy roadster stallion, "Rifleman."

Messrs. R. & W. Bothwell, Cavan, monopolised two boxes with a fine family of horses, consisting of a four year old Clyde mare, with a four months old colt of unusual size. This fine pair comes of good stock on the sire's side, "Norseman," and on the dame's "Royal Exchange." A two-year old filly, sired by "Statesman" was a rest to the eye.

Mr. Peter Molloy, of Emily, exhibits a fine two-year-old, in the roadster class, that boasts of imported ancestry.

Mr. A. McQuade, Emily, takes honest pride in "Honest Sandy," a fine agricultural stallion.

Sylvester Isaacs, Baltimore, Haldimand township, comes to the front with a fine pair of dark bay matched general purpose horses.

Messrs. Donaldson, Lightfoot & Co., South Monaghan, show a beautiful brown imported English shire stallion, bred by Sir Walter Gibson, Essex, England.

Mr. Robert Edwards, Mariposa has a fine stud of first-class horses, consisting of "Old Toronto Chief," a roadster stallion; "Dan Tucker," an imported blood racing horse, with silken coat, delicate throat and eye of fire; a two-year colt, owing its existence to Dan Tucker and an Abdallah mare; two Toronto Chief mares in the roadster class, which are entered for the special prize. This collection would make a little exhibition in itself.

Samuel Graham pointed out with pride his imported Clydesdale stallion, "Scottish Champion," a magnificent ton of muscle, bone and sinew; and a bay mare in the roadster class.

J. K. Stabler, Smith, shows a two-year old brown gelding—general purpose horse.

W. H. Lough, of Ida, Cavan, shines forth with the agricultural stallion, "Comet."

T. M. Willan shows a three-year old saddle mare.

Fisher & Heaslip, of Baillieboro, showed a victor gold dust stallion, bred from imported stock.

George Seeney, Mount Pleasant, exhibits a Norman Percheron stallion.

Johnston Stewart, of Cavan, is on hand with the 2 years agricultural stallion "Blackmate."

Harry Nesbit, of Cavan, shows a pair of carriage horses.

John Carnegie, M. P. P., occupied a pair of stalls with his team of Clyde mares.

D. Scully, Emily, shows a good 2 years draft mare.

Wm. Shearer, of Otonabee, shows a fine agricultural stallion, "Centennial Jock."

Mr. Swinton, Smith, shows a pedigreed Durham bull yearling.

James Hull, Otonabee, had reason to feel proud of a twenty months blood Durham bull.

John Garbutt, Smith, contributes a fine herd to the Durham class, consisting of cow, 2 years' heifer, yearling heifer and heifer calf.

Robert Leary, North Monaghan, wasn't ashamed to have a "chiel taken' notes" of his "Robbie Burns," a thoroughbred Durham 2 year bull.

G. W. Curtis, Lindsay, was quietly eating a melon, and with considerable pride answering the many enquirers about his splendid stallion "Ivanhoe." This general purpose horse took first prize at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition as a Canadian draught.

John Bothwell, Cavan, had a fine mare and foal, a yearling filly got by Enterprise.

Jas. Moore, Asphodel, who always takes an active part in anything that will tend to the improving of stock, exhibited a very fine 2 year old stallion, got by "Lothair," a heavy draught team and a year old Percheron.

George Harper, of Rosenath, took considerable pride in his very fine thoroughbred imported Normam Percheron stallion "Lothair." There were in all 8 colts exhibited by different persons from this horse, and it would be very hard to find 8 colts from any other horse that would surpass them. They were greatly admired, and the red cards on the doors attracted the attention of a great many to this part of the stock buildings.

George Ingham, Alnwick, exhibited a two year old filly by "Lothair."

John Brown, Rosenath, from the same horse, had a yearling stallion.

Mr. Wilson, near Port Hope, had a 2 year old stallion.

A. R. Kidd, reeve of Dummer, exhibited a splendid 2-year-old iron gray filly, got by Harper's imported French horse, "Sothiar," ten Southdown sheep and eight Essex breed of pigs.

H. Staples, Cavan, was there with his team of mares and foals and a yearling colt.

Ralph Richardson, of Millbrook, had a fine 2-year-old bay stallion, "Sir Charles Tupper," from an imported horse, also a draft mare and foal.

Deanis Scully, Emily, was busy grooming a span of mares and foals, a bay and brown, and a 2-year-old draft colt.

Wm. Walie, Manvers, showed a bay mare and foal, general purpose.

Mr. S. Curtis, of Alnwick, made a splendid display of imported Holstein cattle. The herd consisted of a 2-years bull, 2 eight-months calves with thoroughbred pedigree, two imported cows 3-years old, one 2-years [illegible] above, five were imported directly from Holland, the native heath of the Holstein.

Jas. Campbell, Walkerfield, also makes a fine exhibit of Durhams, thoroughbred. These consist of four fine calves, one heifer, two cows and two yearling bulls.

Geo. A. Cox makes a splendid display of thoroughbred Durhams, whose thorough breeding suggests itself at a glance. His herd consists of one bull calf, three heifer calves, one yearling heifer and one fine grade Durham. These beautiful animals were prize takers at London, Toronto and Lindsay. Mr. R. J. Dundas, is the custodian of the herd, and he has reason to be proud of the appearance of his byres, which are by far the most neatly kept, and contained the best groomed and tended cattle on the grounds.

John Muncy, Fraserville, does well in thoroughbred Durhams, comprising 2 cows, 2 yearling heifers, and a bull calf.

James Stothart can well be proud of his thoroughbred two-year old Holstein bull, who is the living picture in marks and contour of his sire, who won the sweepstakes in Holland for best bull of any age.

Richard Birdsall, Asphodel, shows a mare and foal, the foal being from Lothair.

Joseph Redmond, Otonabee, the most enterprising breeder in the Midland District, had a very fine exhibit:—One general purpose 2-year old colt; 1 brood heavy draught mare and foal; 1 yearling colt heavy draught; and one yearling road and carriage colt; a pair of Scotch heifers, which were not in good condition, having raised a pair of calves this summer; 4 calves, not entered, but only on exhibition—raised from imported Scotch heifers, and which he exhibited at Toronto Industrial, and the same breed that were sold for such large prices at Toronto. He has Berkshire pigs in three classes—extra good quality. One of the sows got 2 Provincial first prizes. His exhibits will be hard to beat.

Charles Fairbairn, Verulam, exhibited 8 Leicester sheep, two rams and 6 ewes, 1 two-year old thoroughbred Durham bull with pedigreee and two Berkshire boars.

John Garbutt, one of the most obliging and popular Directors of the Exhibition, had a one year old colt and a two year old colt, four Durham cattle and a cow and calf.

Robert Hannah, Bethany, had ten head of Shropshire sheep.

Geo. Elliott, Smith, exhibited an aged bull, also a single carriage horse.

Hugh Fife, Otonabee, occupied two stalls with two Durham heifers and a bull calf.

R. C. Strickland's thoroughbred cow and calf, two year old Durham bull and yearling heifer were greatly admired—all first-class animals.

Hugh Davidson, another of the Directors, had a one year old Durham bull two cows, with calves, and two colts.

Messrs. Redmond & Campbell, Cavan, exhibited the following thoroughbred stock:—One 2 year old Durham bull, three bull calves, two heifer calves, one cow and bull calf, imported from Scotland, also a thoroughbred Durham cow.

Wm. Collins, an active Director, had a splendid show of Durham cattle, as follows: Yearling Durham bull, thoroughbred cow and calf, one bull calf, pair 1 year old heifers and a pair of heifer calves.

Geo. Fitzgerald's exhibit in stock consisted of a pair of driving horses.

F. G. Cox had entered his pretty driving mare and team. "Fly" will be hard to get over.

R. Vance, Ida, exhibited four registered Berkshires, one of which swept the field at the New Orleans exhibition, and 13 Cotswold sheep.

IN THE AFTERNOON

the people begun to pour into the grounds, and they were rewarded with a splendid exhibition of horses, the grand parade and a fine show of horses in halter and led bulls, in the horse ring.

Dr. Kincaid, the Esculapian agriculturist, doesn't show anything—but the wildest exultation at the success of the show.

Every few minutes the Directors get into a corner and exchange handshakes and congratulations.

The artesian well was sunk and furnished with pump for the public convenience, by Wright & Payton, free of charge. That's Wright, Payton.

The directors should cut a club and see that the caretakers of cattle should not make the promenade in front of the pens unfit for the use of visitors.

Director Collins pointed out with pride that every stall and pen was occupied and that for lack of room several horses and cattle had to be tethered out.

PRISON TREATMENT.

Not long ago we were greatly struck with a remark ascribed to a prominent philanthropist respecting crime and its causes. He emphatically declared it as his firm belief that the method in which prisoners are generally treated in this Country, while serving their terms of imprisonment, is one of the chief causes of American crime.

At first sight the statement may appear a gross exaggeration, but a little reflection, we feel convinced, will prove it is not so very far astray.

Every one who has observed the habits of criminals in some of our communities must know that many of them count upon the shelter and good fare of the prisons during winter and deliberately commit crime for the purpose of getting into good quarters. For this purpose they always select a jail that has a good reputation for looking after its inmates.

We well remember hearing a capital illustration of this point not very long since. An intelligent and skilful mechanic had been incarcerated in a certain jail, not a hundred miles from this county, in the early part of the winter. During his confinement his handicraft was taken advantage of in burnishing up the interior of the venerable pile where he received free rations. Before his work was quite completed he gained his freedom and left for parts unknown. But not very long afterwards he thoughtfully sent word to the Warden of the prison that he would finish the task of cleaning up during the coming winter, as he intended to be sent up again!

It is a well known fact that in many of our jails the criminals have more comforts and better care than the honest poor outside, and in the majority of instances they have not a single thing to do in the way of labor.

Criminals who have had the audacity to make themselves notorious, are often objects of marked attention from a sympathetic public. Flowers and dainties of all kinds, choice novels, illustrated papers, etc., are provided for them by their admirers, and everything is done to make their stay in the jail agreeable and pleasant.

We have lately noticed that our neighbors south of us have, on Sundays and holidays, provided fine music to relieve the ennui of the desperadoes who have been convicted of crime, the bare mention of which makes a man shudder. Even a course of lectures are sometimes given them during the winter to furnish the prisoners pleasing instruction and intellectual entertainment.

We wonder what will come next?

We do not for a moment advocate vigorous or cruel treatment of the most hardened criminals. Every effort should be made to reclaim the hardened and depraved, and above all things else, prisoners should be carefully classified. The most habitual criminal should undergo sterner, severer punishment than the tyro in crime.

Plainly a distinction should be made between the man of forty or fifty, who has passed years in prison, and the young lad who has been convicted of a first offence.

For the latter, let there be clemency, fair treatment, and skilful training in useful knowledge. Keep him apart from vile criminals. Encourage him to start afresh and have him aided, as soon as he leaves the prison doors, to enter in the right path again.

But the hardened and cruel offender, who has been given many chances, should feel increasing severity in his punishments, and instead of being the object of attention in the way of kindness, especially from the outside public, might perhaps become a better man if he perceived that his wickedness repulsed all men, and made him an object of detestation rather than a notoriety.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. D. Macintosh, a prominent physicial, will, it is said, oppose the new Minister of Justice at the approaching election in Antigonish, N. S.

The London Spectator says Sir Charles Dilke's constituents have determined to accept as absolutely true his assurance that the charge brought against him is untrue, and to stand by him at the general election.

The Ottawa Free Press says:—"The Tory representatives of Nova Scotia in the House of Commons must be of an inferior class. When Sir John wants a Cabinet Minister for that Province he either goes to the Senate or to the bench! When he wants a County Judge he is forced to go to the ranks of the Liberal representatives from Nova Scotia in the House of Commons—there was no Tory competent to fill the position."

Notwithstanding the involved foreign relations of Great Britain and the distraction of legislative attention, the last Imperial Parliament was essentially a Reform Parliament. It enfranchised two millions of people; redistributed about two hundred seats to equalize representation with population, and passed the Irish Land Act; the Arrears Act, the Burials Act; the Ground Game Act; the Employers' Liability Act; the Tenants' Improvements Act; the Bankruptcy Act; the corrupt Practices Act; the Criminal Law Amendment Act; the Land Purchase Act; and the Medical Relief Disqualification Act.

We have understood for some time that an appeal was about to be to Canadians for subscriptions to the national memorial which is to be raised to the late Gen. Gordon. The memorial will be in the shape of a training school for waifs and strays of boyhood in England. In this connection the Montreal Witness says:—"One of General Gordon's greatest pleasures in life was the rescuing of boys and the training of them for sailors. A better memorial, or one which would have pleased the great hero more, could not have been proposed. The appeal, coming from Lord Tennyson, whose works have been enjoyed by Canadian readers with but little return to the poet himself, should come with double force. Mr. George Stewart, jr., of Quebec, has been asked by Lord Tennyson to receive voluntary subscriptions.

An Error.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Please allow me space in your paper to contradict a statement which appeared in this morning's Times. It says that Mr. Gibson, of Peterborough, and Mr. Kent, of Newcastle, are going to have a race on Thursday afternoon. Now, sir, I know positively that no such a race is agreed upon, nor has there been any negotiation to that effect.

Thanking you for your valued space,

I remain yours,

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

Archdeacon Farrar's Sermon.

An Eloquent Appeal to Young Men—Thou Shalt Tread Upon the Lions—Illustrations Drawn from the Heathen Mythology—A Message of Warning and Hope.

Ven. Archdeacon Farrar, of Westminster, preached a special sermon to young men in St. James Cathedral last evening. The great church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and some who came, seeing that it was impossible to get seats, turned away. The sermon was a powerful one. Archdeacon Farrar's utterance is rather rapid, but exceedingly clear. He is earnest but not demonstrative, and his gestures are few and light. He took for his text the words, "Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder, the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under foot." Psalm xci., 13.

There are lions in the path of life which the slothful man will not encounter, but which the brave man fights, and in the end slays. There are perils which come to us from the world, the flesh, and the devil; perils from lives of outward and public wickedness, which we have to face as citizens and as men. In his struggles against the varied forms of sin and vice which are without and around him, the brave man may often be, or seem to be, defeated, for in such a cause his every defeat carries with it the germs of future and of certain victory. When the good man seems to be conquered the powers of evil have still to serve their short-lived triumph, and to say as Pyrrus said when he defeated the Romans: "Three such victories would utterly ruin me." To-day, however, we have to speak of a different slaying of lions and of not without us; of a contest in which, if we would not be lost, we must, God helping us, win the victory—a personal, an assured, and, if not in this life, an absolute and final victory. It is a subject which we may make intensely practical, a subject which directly affects every one of us, whatever our age or our circumstances. For upon the issue of this contest the strength and majesty and blessedness in every other contest must depend. May the Holy Spirit above who sendeth forth His seraph with a live coal from the altar, touch the lips of whom He will, and so teach me to speak and so open your ears and touch your hearts to hear, that by His mercy every one of us may leave this church awakened and solemnized, more resolute, more hopeful, more determined to make his stand against the power of evil and work out his own salvation, with fear, indeed, and trembling, yet with indomitable energy and the strongest concentration of every power of his will. We learn from Scripture and from experiences that especially if it be unhackneyed, may sometimes bring great truth or a pressing duty home to the heart and conscience when a more unimaginative inculcation of it may fail to furrow the trodden ground of our familiarity. Such an allegory is found in the words of my text, and in many other passages of Scripture. The definite promise, "Thou shalt tread upon the lion and the dragon," was a reference not only to reptiles and wild beasts of outward evil, but to evils in which the deadliness of vice is concentrated in our individual hearts—evil thoughts and deeds and habits which assail and hurt the soul. When the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews says of some of the Old Testament characters, that they stopped the mouths of lions, he doubtless meant his words to be understood metaphorically as well as literally. So, too, does St. Paul, when he says that he fought the beasts at Ephesus, and that God delivered [illegible]

So, too, St. Ignatius, when he says that on his way to martyrdom he was fighting with wild beasts all the way, and describes the Roman soldiers as ten leopards with whom he was travelling. So when David speaks of the jawbones of the lion he is not thinking of actual lions, but of human and spiritual enemies. If, therefore, we can adopt the metaphor, we are no more guilty than those of using language which is fantastical or sensational language, and the fitness of the metaphor is shown by the fact that we find it also in the heathen mythology. Let us not follow the ignorant prejudice which would regard the

as if they were not worthy of our Christian interest. We have learned more and more in our own day that there is an ethnic as well as a Hebrew inspiration. The noble study of comparative religions is widening the horizon of our thoughts, and revealing to us that God spoke in old times to the Greek and the Roman and Persian and the Hindoo, as well as to the Jew. All wisdom is not hid in Moses' law. Now in the old and uncorrupted springs of Greek mythology we find the purest moral intuitions of that wonderfully gifted race. If there was one virtue which the ancient Greeks admired above all others, it was sober-mindedness, which is also earnestly impressed upon all, especially upon young men, by St. Paul and St. Peter. Now, if Paul, even on the Scripture page, quotes the Greek poets, why should we not also refer to the pure lessons of Greek mythology, and the Greek type of this noble

VIRTUE OF SOBER-MINDEDNESS,

the ideal type which they set before themselves, of a life strong in self-control and almost divine in its self-sacrifice? The type of a deliverer of the world is their hero Hercules. Grossly as that idea was dwarfed and stunted by the polluted imaginations of the latter poets, the hero stands in the old mythology as the grand representative of toiling, suffering, persecuted, victorious manhood, the embodied conception of a life raised to immortality by mighty toil for the good of others. And they saw, as we see, that he who would indeed conquer evil in the world must first conquer it in his own heart. To him it must never be said, as to the Pharisee of old, "Thou therefore that teachest others, teachest thou not thyself?" This is the meaning of that fine apologue of the choice of Hercules. The young hero in his opening manhood, makes his choice of self-denying virtue, and not for voluptuous pleasure. But the moral is yet more finely conveyed in that legend of his conquest of the Nemean lion, what is the first of his great labours. The great hero in his adolescence is always represented arrayed in the pelt of this conquered wild beast. Doubtless the slaying of an actual lion is something. The Scriptures deem it worthy of record that lions were slain by the youth Samson and the youth David. But neither Samson nor David wore the lion's skin in memory of their victory all their lives. The skin of the lion which the Greek hero slew was held to make him invulnerable and well-nigh invincible. It was difficult to get this skin. The lion must be fought in the darkness and dealt upon without weapons, but by the grip of the throat. What is the meaning of that? It means that the Nemean lion is the first great adversary. Whatever that may be to Hercules or to any one of us, then or now, the first monster we have to struggle with and strangle, or be destroyed, is to be fought in the dark with no man helping us, for

EVERY MAN'S NEMEAN LION

lies in the way for him somewhere. All future victories depend upon that. Kill it, and through all the rest of your lives what was once terrible becomes your armor; you are clothed with the virtue of that conquest. [illegible] the darkness and in the cavern, and with no earthly weapons. It is not the stout club, it is not the keen arrows that can slay it. You must block up the entrance to its cave, you must plunge through the murky gloom, and there, by sheer force of arm and by resolute might, by the will which God has given to every one of you, and which makes it your chief human privilege to say I ought, I can, I will, strengthened, as you will be by the grace of Christ, you must fearlessly and pitilessly meet and strangle this lion. The lion is that inward sin, that special impulse and temptation to evil which is most directed against your individual heart. Are you at this time willing, or are you not, to conquer the sin, whatever it may be, which doth most easily beset you? Remember that God will have no reservations. Remember that His law is that you must keep all His commandments. Not all but one. Do not deceive yourself with the fancy that which you may cherish for yourself; one law to be violated with impunity. On the tree of death, as on the tree of life, there are twelve manner of fruits; but God will not suffer you so much as one of them, because in each one of these fatal fruits is infused the deathfulness of all. Millions of men would be saved almost without an effort but for one sin—the drunkard, but for his drink; the envious man, but for his inworking malice; the unclean, but for his guilty love of desecrating vice. And the man who does not struggle and overcome is losing himself more and more hopelessly in the pathless morass; he is sinking deeper and deeper in the unfathomable sea; he is fettering himself with heavier and heavier chains. Therefore, my brethren, as your lives, enter with resolution the dark caverns of your hearts and face the lion who is lurking there. Lay aside the fancy that he can lie there undisturbed without destroying, that you can fence yourself round against him by reason or philosophy, or by prudential reserve, or by any procrastination of the struggle. Nothing will save you but a resolute effort, putting forth the gathered force of your life intensified with grace and prayer. Give that lion but one fatal wound, and though its flaming eye may glare upon you, and its relaxing claw may have power to rend you, each subsequent blow, each tightening grip on its throat, will find it weaker, and you growing from strength to strength, until at last you will fling him out of his lair.

THERE IS ONE SIN

THE HUGE AND HIDEOUS CARCASS,

and turn the cavern into a holy temple and Christ shall enter there. Further, observe the infinite superiority which Christ has granted to us in these days. The Greeks had noble ideals, but their conduct fell as short of those ideals as ours does. But often their ideals are as grievously corrupt. Human strength and knowledge is at the best but perfect weakness. But it is the mercy of God that he has given us in the life of our Lord Jesus Christ an ideal not human, but divine. But notice that the more early this battle is undertaken the more surely it is won. Hercules, while yet an infant, strangles the serpents sent to slay him. He who strangles serpents in his youth will slay monsters in his manhood. He who has early had strength to conquer temptations will not be so likely to lose his self-reverence and his self-control. If in the flush of youth he has sat at the foot of law, he is little likely to rebel afterwards. And these were the truths which the Greeks succinctly expressed by representing their hero in the skin of the lion he has slain. Thus in early life men can best win this victory while yet they are not dominated by a corrupt present, and are still unhampered by a faithless past. Victory is won more easily at fifteen than at twenty, more easily at twenty than at twenty-five; and ten thousand times more easily at thirty than at sixty. Samson while he is young, while yet the sunny locks of his obedience to the moral law lay in waves upon his illustrious, could meet the young lion that rose against him as easily as if it were a kid. He could do so no longer after his locks were shorn, after his life was sullied, after he had yielded to sensual temptations. When his heart had been corrupted, his will made effeminate his hopes depraved, you will see him rending lions no longer, but toiling as the drudge of his enemies, the companion of slaves in turning the mill at Gaza. And David, while he is a pure and ruddy shepherd, while his heart was white as the lilies he twined round his harp-strings, and his thoughts as pure as the dew upon their leaves; when a young man uncontaminated by the life of cities, he could fight for his lambs, and with unaided arms overcome

THE LION AND THE BEAR,

he could not do it after that sin with Uriah and with Bathsheba. Then the rustle of a shaking leaf was enough to terify him, and the crown fell from his head; he became weak as water and fled before his own worthless son, sobbing, barefooted, cursed by his enemies, and followed by those dark spirits of lust and murder. Which of us has not been in one way or other defeated as Samson and David were? Which of us can encounter that poison-breathing lion in the dark caverns of his heart, and strangle it as fearlessly as he might have done? How grandly has Milton expressed this idea that sin is weakness, when in in "Paradise Lost" he gives Ithuriel's rebuke to Satan, and proceeds:—

"So spake the cherub, and his grave rebuke,
Severe in youthful beauty, added grace
Invincible. Abashed the devil stood
And felt how awful goodness is, and saw
Virtue in her shape, how lovely; saw and pinned
His loss, but chiefly to find here observed
His lustre visibly impaired."

And again, in the case of our first parents, and their unrest and weakness after their first sin. An American writer of genius describes the first transgression which he can remember. "Time," he says, "has led me to look upon my offence more leniently. I do not believe it or any other childish wrong is infinite, as some think, but infinitely finite, but often think—had I but won the battle!" Oh, my brothers, we may be unable to recall the first time we do wrong; the memory of your first transgression may be clouded over by time, but is there one here who does not feel his heart regret that he did not win that battle? But let us not despair. It is never too late to fight, never impossible to slay that lion, or to feel that you should tread the young lion and the dragon under foot. If the grace of God shows exquisitely in some soul pure from its youth upwards, growing, like the Lord Jesus, in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man, that grace of God shows yet more mightily in the case of those who have been in the fight, those who have lain prostrate in the bloody contest, who have felt the fierce lion's merciless teeth and merciless claws, yet have sprung up again and gathering their strength have turned rout into resistance and resistance into victory. Who are the special proofs of the irresistible love of Christ and of the irristible power of God's grace? In whose cases is the grace best shown? Not in Enoch the Immaculate, not in Abraham the friend of God, not in John the hermit of the desert, not in John the exile of Patmos, not in Stephen with his face like the face of an angel no, but in the Son who was lost and is found, who is

RESCUED FROM THE RAGS

and the far land and the husks and the swine and returned to the pure, rejoicing home, in the Magdalen out of whom he cast seven devils; in the harlot who washed his feet with her tears and wiped them with the hairs of her head; in the publican whom [illegible] monise sitting at His feet clothed and in his right mind. These are the products of His grace, these are the lost, torn sheep over whom the Good Shepherd rejoices, these are the repentant sons for whom the angels strike their harps. You may be weak, you may be bad, you may be corrupt, you may be

A DEFEATED MAN,

all your life hitherto may have been wasted. You may have sunk deeper and deeper into the awful abyss and mire of sin. Yet I would give you hope. I would fain kindle your courage, I would fain awaken a spark and rouse it to a glow and then into a clear and leaping flame. Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow. Do not allow the devil to make you listen to those words as though to you they meant nothing. They are God's words to you, they are Christ's message to you, they are the Spirit's appeal even to you. Are you a drunkard? There is not a drunkard here who may not die a forgiven and a temperate man. Are you dishonest? Have you for years been making profits by the lies and base conventionalities of this or that profession? You can this very day smash your balance; you can melt your unjust weights, and abandon your unfair practices. Is your heart burning with bad passions? Are you a profane person, or a fornicator? or are you laying waste by any sin the inner sanctuaries of your being? There is not one but may become strong and pure in Christ. To some it may be there are smouldering by day, lurid by night. But if you will put away the evil thing and seek God on your knees; if you will summon the shamed and routed and scattered forces of your being to the great battle of God, He will so help you that far as the east is from the west, so far will from you be the sin which burns your heart. My brethren, because Satan knows that despair is fatal; he will try hard to keep you forever indifferent or to drive you to despair. He will whisper to you that you are too far gone, that these hopes, these promises, are for others, not for you. But O, my brethren, they are for you. If you will not but them from you then you, even you, can still strangle that full-fed lion, whose claw is in your heart. It is a true saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ came into the world to save sinners. To save sinners and therefore to save you, to save the guilty and therefore to save you, to save the bad and therefore to save you, and if you will take no words but His very own, take it in these: "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the House of Israel; I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance.

SINS LIKE LAVA

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

An Omission.

In speaking yesterday of the art exhibit in Mr. Morgan's window, the name of Mr. W. B. Sabine, one of the artists, was omitted. The two handsome plaques, "Morning" and "Evening," a moonlight scene, a panel with roses in oil, and two capital marine sketches, together with a beautiful floral design on a satin footstool, are all the product of that gentleman's pencil.

A Complete Music Emporium.

A view of Smart & Son's music store, George street, should be one of the sights that persons coming to town during exhibition week should make it a point to visit. Here will be found, at prices the most reasonable and on terms most favourable, the best musical supplies kept in any establishment of the kind. Their stock and agencies include the Karn and Bell organs, musical supplies of all kinds, violins, flutes, etc., sheet music, instruction books, pianos, particularly the celebrated Williams instrument, which has few equals and still fewer superiors. Anything in the line of music will be found in stock, or can be procured by this enterprising and commercially well-connected firm. Be sure and visit their branch music store at the exhibition grounds. In addition to complete music supplies they have the agency of the best family sewing machines made —the Light Running Domestic and the New Williams sewing machines. They are a reliable and trustworthy firm, and any goods supplied by them may be depended on implicitly. Make a note of their head-quarters and warerooms, George street, Peterborough.

Only Buy the "Williams."

Because the new Williams Sewing Machine has all the first-class points attainable in a first-class sewing machine. It has lightness of running, ease of operation, rapidity and perfection of work, simplicity of construction, and variety of uses, that have made it a favorite, wherever it has been used. Because it has stood the severest competition tests against the best machines made anywhere, and has time and again secured numerous victories. Its latest triumph was at the West Hastings Exhibition in Belleville, where it was awarded two first prizes and a diploma. The importance of these prizes is palpable from the fact that they are the results of the superior working of the New Williams Sewing Machine, in actual tests by expert judges, and its repeated triumphs is the highest praise. The Williams is on exhibition at the fair grounds by the local agents, Messrs. D. Smart & Son, agents also for the Bell Organ, the leading instrument in the world of its kind, the Karn Organ, the Williams Piano, and any other meriterious instrument in any of those lines. Another reason why the Williams Machine should be bought in preference to all others, is, that while it is inferior to none, it is the product of Canadian industry and skill, being manufactured in Montreal. Encourage home enterprise, especially when in so doing you get the best sewing machine made anywhere.

Notice of Visit.

I have the pleasure of announcing to the residents of Peterborough and vicinity that Mr. P. H. Morris, formerly of the firm of Lazarus & Morris, and now from the establishment of B. Laurance, of Montreal, and London, England, will be at my store during the three days on which our Central Exhibition is held, viz., Tuesday and Wednesday, the 29th and 30th Sept., and on Thursday, the 1st of Oct., for the purpose of adjusting the B. Laurance genuine pebble and other spectacles and eyeglasses for every requirement of the eye. He is especially qualified by his long experience and thorough knowledge of his profession, to give just such spectacles, &c., as are best suited in each case, however difficult, and afford relief where relief is possible. This, added to the acknowledged superiority of the B. Laurance pebble spectacles and eyeglasses, assures to wearers and others needing aids to sight, great advantages not otherwise attainable. Remember dates of visit to my store. John McKee, chemist and druggist.

Fair, VanEvery & Co.

Fire.

Thomas Beavis' Storehouse Completely Destroyed—A Loss of More than $2,000.

About 1 o'clock this morning a large frame building, built some years ago for a grain storehouse by Mr. Thos. Beavis, and fronting on the G. T. R. track between Charlotte and Simcoe streets, was discovered to be on fire. An alarm was at once sounded and before many minutes the members of the fire brigade were on hand with their hose reels and the Silsby, the latter, however, not being called into requisition. The fire had been burning fiercely for some time when discovered and by the time they arrived on the scene the flames had got so much hold that no chance whatever remained of saving the building in which the fire originated, and they at once turned their attention to preventing a further spread of the conflagration. Fortunately there was not a breath of wind and the flames shot up in to the sky, apparently hundreds of feet high, shedding abroad a glare that illuminated the whole town and country around; and consequently the danger to surrounding property was considerably lessened, although the heat was so intense, and the falling sparks so thick, that some fears were entertained for Mr. James Stevenson's large warehouse just across the track. The hose of the G.T.R. was brought into play and with that of the department, although at first the water pressure was managed to keep the fire within limits on the west side, although part of a G. T. R. siding and the telegraph line running close to the burning building were badly burned. On the east side, however, abutting on Mr. Beavis' warehouse, was a row of sheds and stables belonging to Mr. Thos. Bradburn, and to these the fire soon spread. The occupants of the houses facing Charlotte street, who use these stables and sheds, managed to get all their movable and live property out of them, and the fire brigade by strenuous efforts managed to stay the progress of the fire about half way along the row. Mr. Beavis's building had been burning fiercely for some time, but the lessening flame and the shower of sparks that flew rocket-like upward, showed that the fire had almost exhausted itself; and soon nothing was left but the blackened and charred timbers of the framework, along which the flames licked greedily, as if looking for fresh food to devour. These timbers at length fell out to the east, and nothing was left of the building but a few blackened rafters. The firemen worked with a will, and much credit is due to them for their efforts. As is usual

QUITE INADEQUATE,

"THE MAN WHO KNOWS IT ALL"

was promptly on hand, to interfere and criticize their doings. If the boys did what was right, they would suppress this nuisance at once by turning a stream on his ear.

So far as can be learned there was no insurance on any part of the property consumed, which will be a total loss. In Mr. Beavis' building there was stored a quantity of building material, sash, etc., and he estimates his loss at from $1,200 to $1,500. It is also believed that a quantity of second-hand building material owned by Mr. Bradburn was stored in part of the sheds burned, and a quantity of hay and doubtless other property of the tenants was consumed or rendered worthless by water. Had the night been stormy there is no telling what the extent of the fire might have been as the vicinity is surrounded by buildings of a highly inflammable character; even as it was, burning shingles that had been thrown up into the air and carried off by an upper current, floated over and were picked up fully half a mile from the scene of the fire. The hose, of which 900 feet were laid out, seemed to stand the pressure fairly well, though small leaks here and there were visible. As was said before, however, the pressure was very low. Large crowds of townspeople aroused from their beds flocked to the fire, only retiring when about two o'clock it had burned itself out. Mr. Bradburn's loss will be in the neighborhood of $2,000, as he had a quantity of new and second-hand plate glass stored away among the building material burned.

Remember the Date of Hall, Innis & Co's. Millinery Opening, Tuesday and Wednesday, 29th and 30th September.

Genuine Bell.

In yesterday's issue we referred in words of praise to the Bell organ, the now justly celebrated instrument, which has been on the market for the past ten or twelve years, and its merits are such that too much cannot be said in its favor for the benefit of those who desire a really first-class household instrument of music. Such has been its success and so greatly has its merit contributed to its popularity, and the public demand for it, that dealers without principle have stolen its name, and on the strength of it have endeavoured to foist worthless, or at least comparatively valueless instruments, upon a confiding public. The public, to protect themselves, should notice that the trade mark of the Bell Organ Company (two bells) is on the name board of every genuine Bell organ. Every genuine Bell Organ is made in Guelph. The excellence of this musical instrument is shown by the severe tests to which the makers are willing to put it. Every organ is guaranteed for six years from the date of manufacture, and such a guarantee from a house of known responsibility, is a condition that every shrewd purchaser can at once see the value of. Another reason that the Bell organ has secured so great a popularity is the fact that it is made in hundreds of different styles and at varying prices, from the simplest cottage instrument, within the reach of the humblest, to the elaborate and finely finished instruments, fit for the drawing rooms of the wealthiest, or the most sumptuous of chapels. All those styles can be secured through the pushing and enterprising local agents, Messrs. D. Smart & Son, George street Peterborough. The hundreds who will visit the fair to-morrow should not fail to visit and admire their fine display on the exhibition grounds, where splendid samples of the Bell organ will be shown.

MARRIAGE BELLS.

Mr. James Davidson Marries Miss Maggie McKee.

Nuptials of Mr. John Lynch and Miss Jennie Lynch.

Mr. John Grady Leads Miss Kate Roach to the Altar.

DAVIDSON—MCKEE.

Yesterday Mr. James Davidson, of Smith, was married by Rev. Mr. McFarlane, of Lakefield, to Maggie, daughter of George McKee, Esq., of Lawrencevale. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, and Misses Garbutt and Deane officiated as bridesmaids, while Messrs. R. E. McKee, brother of the bride, and J. H. Garbutt were bestmen to the groom. The happy pair, who left for an extended trip to New York, per G.T.R., were the recipients of a large number of beautiful presents, and the hearty good wishes of their friends, whose name is legion.

Yesterday evening, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mr. John Lynch was married by Rev Father Conway to Jennie, eldest daughter of the late Mr. James Lynch. Miss Maggie McFadden acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. L. Lemay as groomsman, and the interesting ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends, and the bride, who was a valued member of St. Peter's choir, was presented with the following address and a handsome pickle cruet by the members of that body:

DEAR MISS LYNCH,—The members of the choir of St. Peter's Cathedral cannot permit this happy day of your life to pass without offering to you their heart-felt congratulations, together with their most fervent prayer that the new destiny opening before you may be one of unbroken happiness and that you as well as he whose cares you are henceforth to share, may enjoy all earthly blessings together with those higher joys which only truly Christian families may hope for.

But your past, as well as your future, calls for one word of felicitation, your constant and assiduous labours to fulfil your part in rendering our services worthy of the motive with which we offer them to God, merit for you our deepest esteem. Please accept, dear Miss Lynch, this little token of our sincere affection. Its intrinsic value you will find in the souvenir it will recall to you of those who have been for so many years co-laborers with you in the holy work. Hoping that you will not leave us too promptly, but that you will continue to favour us with your presence as constantly as your new conditions will permit, we beg you to believe us

Ever most sincerely yours,

George Ball,	" A. Delaney,
W. Morrow,	" E. Hurley,
P. Corkery,	" M. McFadden,
T. Dunne,	" T. Tangney,
W. Hurley,	" A. Dunne,

Mr. L. Lemay.

The happy bride was the recipient of a number of other beautiful presents, her connection with the choir and her many social qualities having made for her a host of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch left town last evening for the west, where, after calling at Toronto, they will spend several days.

GRADY—ROACH.

Mr. John Grady and Miss Kate Roach were married last evening by Rev. Father Conway at St. Peter's Cathedral. The bride's sister filled the part of bridesmaid, and the bridegroom's brother supported him. After dining at Mr. Grady's residence, the newly made husband and wife left on the 6:30 C.P.R. train for Toronto, from whence they will proceed to Rochester, N. Y., for a few days. They were followed by the best wishes of a numerous circle of friends. The bride was the recipient of a large number of costly and beautiful presents.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1300.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can get their logs to their mills; the adjoining lake affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to

PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

A Most Gratifying and Successful Exhibition.

Fine Weather Throughout.

Magnificent Exhibit of Horses and Cattle.

Other Departments Well Filled.

Large Attendance of Delighted Visitors.

The Full Prize List.

A Circumstantial Report of the Inaugural Central.

THE FIRST DAY—TUESDAY.

The dusty stretch of road leading from the town to the new exhibition grounds has all morning been rendered doubly dusty by the presence of numberless buggies, spring waggons, carts, vans and drays, all hurrying as by one accord to the tract of ground upon which the sheds and tents of the Peterboro' Central Fair have been erected. And a heterogeneous freight it was that the myriad conveyances were carrying thither. The farmer's democrat waggon, bearing a load of mammoth potatoes, huge pumpkins, rosy cheeked apples and jars suggestive of honey, and preserve, placidly jogged by the heavier farm waggon containing cooped up an exhibit of pigs or calves, and was in turn passed itself by the dashing waggon of some impetious sewing machine agent or dealer in musical instruments, eager to reach the grounds and arrange his display for the benefit of the visitors. Heavy drays, carrying fanning mills, plows, reapers, and other agricultural implements creaked and groaned beneath their load, while ever and anon an agriculturalist driving a prize bull, or leading a handsome horse or team of horses, wended his way to

THE GATES.

Here one's eye was at once attracted by D. Belleghem's big sign, reared over the top of the entrance way, staring him in the face, and telling that as usual Belleghem was foremost among advertisers. Inside the grounds all was turmoil and bustle. All along the sheds at the eastern side of the grounds horses and rigs were tied up, while their owners in a three deep throng eagerly besieged the wicket of the secretary's office, clamoring for entry tickets, stable tickets, information as to where their quarters were to be, etc. Inside the office Mr. W. H. Hill, the energetic secretary, and his assistants in their shirt sleeves were almost distracted by the stream of of interogatories and requests that were being fired in at them with Gatling gun-like raddidity by the impatient exhibitors outside, but nevertheless they got on with the work of issuing tickets for stabling, entrance tickets and other requisites, with astonishing rapidity. A walk along the sheds showed that every preparation has been made for the incoming fat stock, pigs and horses; teams with hay were being unladen, and in many of the stalls were piled up bags that told expressively of the fattening food to be fed to the prize animals. The Association have made ample provision for

THE SUPPLY OF WATER

by making two wells, above which have been set up three of Forsyth's famous force and lift pumps, a couple of motions of the handles of which will fill a bucket. Close by the wells large wooden drinking tanks have been built, also by Mr. Forsyth, and at the south side of the grounds an additional supply of fluid has been provided by sinking an artesian well. The stock that have already arrived are not yet on view to the general public, but it was expected, as the entries were coming in so rapidly, that they would be closed and the exhibition opened this afternoon. In the centre of the grounds three spacious marquees, specially procured from Ottawa for the occasion, were erected. In the southern one the exhibits of dairy and farm produce, which are being brought in in large quantities, will be displayed, and there is already a tempting display of honey, canned fruits and other dainties, representing the efforts of matronly hands. In the centre one a creamery is being set up, and in that at the north side, the vegetable products, which, if they may be judged by the forerunners already there, will be large individually as well as collectively. The

with their accustomed enterprise, have erected their own marquee, in which is what will prove one of the most interesting displays of the show. In addition to the ordinary canoes, they show one of their famous decked in cruising canoes, fully rigged and fitted with patent folding centre-board and reefing gear, and a small canoe, which though of great strength, and capable of comfortably and safely conveying a solitary paddler, may be lifted and carried anywhere in one hand. The beautiful finish on these canoes is alone enough to render them famous. Then over at the west end of the grounds Mr. G. A. Mitchell has established what he facetiously termed his wigwam, in which he proposes to exhibit the many excellencies of the famous Wheeler and Wilson sewing Machines. Close by, Mr. W. Forsyth has an exhibit of his fanning mills. The refreshment stands, of which two have been erected, will be under the management of William Kennealy and John Craig. Messrs. Baptie Brothers have also a well-stocked refreshment booth. The grounds, though not as inviting in appearance as they may be expected to look another year, still speak volumes of the labor that has been bestowed on them, and reflect much credit on Mr. [illegible] Collins, who is in charge of them. In addition to the gate connecting the grounds with the driving park an entrance has been made in about the middle of it so that access between the two grounds will be easy. If the present weather continue, large numbers of visitors may be looked for and the success of the fair will be sured.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY.

The weather for the second day of the Peterborough Central was all that could be desired and it was an augury of the splendid success the show promises to be in every department. The grounds present a far different aspect from the appearance presented yesterday. All the exhibits were placed in position and although there were few visitors in the morning, there were enough of exhibitors and their satellites to give the grounds

AN ANIMATED APPEARANCE.

The several refreshment booths were doing a brisk trade, and here and there, the numerous exhibitors were putting finishing touches and settling exhibits into final shape. Perspiring grooms were rubbing down, to the sibilant whistle of their class, their charges, or taking flowing manes and tails "out of curl papers," and dreaming of red tickets. Among the the cattle pens bucolic guardians were carrying their already silkenly sleek charges.

Nowhere is the success of the inaugural Central Exhibition shown so much as in the

which the boxes and pens appropriated to this class of stock contains.

The exhibitors are numerous in all classes, and the animals generally above the average of excellence. In going the rounds, the first exhibitor encountered is

James Montgomery, of Bridgenorth, whose general purpose stallion "Young Favorite Stranger" attracted considerable attention.

T. Eastwood, of Buckhorn, was justifiably proud in giving the pedigree and points of his black general purpose stallion "Whitby Conqueror."

Henry Staples, Cavan, had a beauty on exhibition in his tidy roadster stallion, "Rifleman."

Messrs. R. & W. Bothwell, Cavan, monopolized two boxes with a fine family of horses, consisting of a four year old Clyde mare, with a four months old colt of unusual size. This fine pair comes of good stock on the sire's side, "Norseman," and on the dame's "Royal Exchange." A two-year old filly, sired by "Statesman" was a rest to the eye.

Mr. Peter Molloy, of Emily, exhibits a fine two-year-old, in the roadster class, that boasts of imported ancestry.

Mr. A. McQuade, Emily, takes honest pride in "Honest Sandy," a fine agricultural stallion.

Sylvester Isaacs, Baltimore, Haldimand township, comes to the front with a fine pair of dark bay matched general purpose horses.

Messrs. Donaldson, Lightfoot & Co., South Monaghan, show a beautiful brown imported English shire stallion, bred by Sir Walter Gibson, Essex, England.

Mr. Robert Edwards, Mariposa has a fine stud of first-class horses, consisting of "Old Toronto Chief," a roadster stallion; "Dan Tucker," an imported blood racing horse, with silken coat, delicate throat and eye of fire; a two-year colt, owing its existence to Dan Tucker and an Abdallah mare; two Toronto Chief mares in the roadster class, which are entered for the special prize. This collection would make a little exhibition in itself.

Samuel Graham pointed out with pride his imported Clydesdale stallion, "Scottish Champion," a magnificent ton of muscle, bone and sinew; and a bay mare in the roadster class.

J. K. Stabler, Smith, shows a two-year old brown gelding—general purpose horse.

W. H. Lough, of Ida, Cavan, shines forth with the agricultural stallion, "Comet."

T. M. Willan shows a three-year old saddle mare.

Fisher & Heaslip, of Baillieboro, showed a victor gold dust stallion, bred from imported stock.

George Seeney, Mount Pleasant, exhibits a Norman Percheron stallion.

Johnston Stewart, of Cavan, is on hand with the 2 years agricultural stallion "Blackmate."

Harry Nesbit, of Cavan, shows a pair of carriage horses.

John Carnegie, M. P. P., occupied a pair of stalls with his team of Clyde mares.

D. Scully, Emily, shows a good 2 years draft mare.

Wm. Shearer, of Otonabee, shows a fine agricultural stallion, "Centennial Jock."

Mr. Swinton, Smith, shows a pedigreed Durham bull yearling.

James Hull, Otonabee, had reason to feel proud of a twenty months blood Durham bull.

John Garbutt, Smith, contributes a fine herd to the Durham class, consisting of cow, 2 years' heifer, yearling heifer and heifer calf.

Robert Leary, North Monaghan, wasn't ashamed to have a "chiel taken' notes" of his "Robbie Burns," a thoroughbred Durham 2 year bull.

G. W. Curtis, Lindsay, was quietly eating a melon, and with considerable pride answering the many enquirers about his splendid stallion "Ivanhoe." This general purpose horse took first prize at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition as a Canadian draught.

John Bothwell, Cavan, had a fine mare and foal, a yearling filly got by Enterprise.

Jas. Moore, Asphodel, who always takes an active part in anything that will tend to the improving of stock, exhibited a very fine 2 year old stallion, got by "Lothair," a heavy draught team and a year old Percherons.

George Harper, of Roseneath, took considerable pride in his very fine thoroughbred imported Normann Percheron stallion "Lothair." There were in all 8 colts exhibited by different persons from this horse, and it would be very hard to find 8 colts from any other horse that would surpass them. They were greatly admired, and the red cards on the doors attracted the attention of a great many to this part of the stock buildings.

George Ingham, Alnwick, exhibited a two year old filly by "Lothair."

John Brown, Roseneath, from the same horse, had a yearling stallion.

Mr. Wilson, near Port Hope, had a 2 year old stallion.

A. R. Kidd, reeve of Dummer, exhibited a splendid 2-year-old iron gray filly, got by Harper's imported French horse, "Sothiar," ten Southdown sheep and eight Essex breed of pigs.

H. Staples, Cavan, was there with his team of mares and foals and a yearling colt.

Ralph Richardson, of Millbrook, had a fine 2-year-old bay stallion, "Sir Charles Tupper," from an imported horse, also a draft mare and foal.

Dennis Scully, Emily, was busy grooming a span of mares and foals, a bay and brown, and a 2-year old draft colt.

Wm. Walie, Manvers, showed a bay mare and foal, general purpose.

Mr. S. Curtis, of Alnwick, made a splendid display of imported Holstein cattle. The herd consisted of a 2-years bull, 2 eight-months calves with thoroughbred pedigree, two imported cows 3-years old, one 2-years heifer, and two yearling heifers. Of the above, five were imported directly from Holland, the native heath of the Holsteins

Jas. Campbell, Walkerfield, also makes a fine exhibit of Durhams, thoroughbred. These consist of four fine calves, one heifer, two cows and two yearling bulls.

Geo. A. Cox makes a splendid display of thoroughbred Durhams, whose thorough breeding suggests itself at a glance. His herd consists of one bull calf, three heifer calves, one yearling heifer and one fine grade Durham. These beautiful animals were prize takers at London, Toronto and Lindsay. Mr. R. J. Dundas, is the custodian of the herd, and he has reason to be proud of the appearance of his byres, which are by far the most neatly kept, and contained the best groomed and tended cattle on the grounds.

John Muncy, Fraserville, does well in thoroughbred Durhams, comprising 2 cows, 2 yearling heifers, and a bull calf.

James Stothart can well be proud of his thoroughbred two-year old Holstein bull, who is the living picture in marks and contour of his sire, who won the sweepstakes in Holland for best bull of any age.

Richard Birdsall, Asphodel, shows a mare and foal, the foal being from Lothair.

Joseph Redmond, Otonabee, the most enterprising breeder in the Midland District, had a very fine exhibit:—One general purpose 2-year old colt; 1 brood heavy draught mare and foal; 1 yearling colt, heavy draught; and one yearling road and carriage colt; a pair of Scotch heifers, which were not in good condition, having raised a pair of calves this summer; 4 calves, not entered, but only on exhibition—raised from imported Scotch heifers, and which he exhibited at Toronto Industrial, and the same breed that were sold for such large prices at Toronto. He has Berkshire pigs in three classes—extra good quality. One of the sows got 2 Provincial first prizes. His exhibits will be hard to beat.

Charles Fairbairn, Verulam, exhibited 8 Leicester sheep, two rams and 6 ewes, 1 two-year old thoroughbred Durham bull with pedigrees and two Berkshire boars.

John Garbutt, one of the most obliging and popular Directors of the Exhibition, had a one year old colt and a two year old colt, four Durham cattle and a cow and calf.

Robert Hannah, Bethany, had ten head of Shropshire sheep.

Geo. Elliott, Smith, exhibited an aged bull, also a single carriage horse.

Hugh Fife, Otonabee, occupied two stalls with two Durham heifers and a bull calf.

R. C. Strickland's thoroughbred cow and calf, two year old Durham bull and yearling heifer were greatly admired—all first-class animals.

Hugh Davidson, another of the Directors, had a one year old Durham bull two cows, with calves, and two colts.

Messrs. Redmond & Campbell, Cavan, exhibited the following thoroughbred stock:—One 2 year old Durham bull, three bull calves, two heifer calves, one cow and bull calf, imported from Scotland, also a thoroughbred Durham cow.

Wm. Collins, an active Director, had a splendid show of Durham cattle, as follows: Yearling Durham bull, thoroughbred cow and calf, one bull calf, pair 1 year old heifers and a pair of heifer calves.

Geo. Fitzgerald's exhibit in stock consisted of a pair of driving horses.

F. G. Cox had entered his pretty driving mare and team. "Fly" will be hard to get over.

R. Vance, Ida, exhibited four registered Berkshires, one of which swept the field at the New Orleans exhibition, and 13 Cotswold sheep.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

The display of agricultural implements and farm machinery, though made almost entirely by local manufacturers and dealers, as a branch of the exhibition fully equal in extent and merit to the ramainder of the show.

Foremost among the exhibitors in this class is Mr. P. Hamilton, whose display occupies a position in the centre of the grounds. The most noteworthy, perhaps, of the numerous meritorious machines exhibited by this enterprising firm is the self-binding reaper known as the "Hamilton Light Twine Binder," which is shown in full operation, power being supplied to it by a portable engine of Mr. Hamilton's close by. A feature of it is the new vibrating hutter, with a positive action, which never slips, as is the case in some other machines; and its reliable trip and simple knotter. The gears being far back, make it perfectly balanced and very easy on the horses. This machine attracted a great deal of attention, and was all the time surrounded by admiring throngs. A little knot of farmers, standing a short distance from it, were heard discussing its merits, and two of them, who have previously used almost every other kind of reaper, and now possess the "Hamilton Light Twine Binder," declared that it was beyond all question the best machine they had yet seen or heard of.

This firm also show a horse power and separator of a very high class, with canvas mill and undershot elevator. The driving power is a Pitts of ten horse power. The firm's other exhibits comprise a combined pea thresher and straw cutter; a one horse turnip drill, which adjusts itself to any width of row, makes its own drills, sows and covers the seed and rolls before and behind it; a horse hoe for root crops; a three furrow "Boss" iron gang plow; a No. 4 and No. 2 plow for stubble; a general purpose plow, with steel bar and coulter; a combination plow for general purposes; a "Tiger" horse rake, and "Humming Bird" mower.

Side by side stand the exhibits of J. Whyte & Co. and McDonald & Buck.

The former show their double mould-board plow, a three plow gang, and others too numerous to mention, and also a very pretty sample of iron fencing.

Messrs. McDonald & Buck have a "Tiger" rake, made by Gurney, of Dundas, and a "Pilot" mower by the same firm, and also a very compact looking self-binder of their manufacture.

The Masson Co., of Oshawa, show a combined seeder, the only double gear machine made, and a steel tooth rake with friction dump.

Mr. J. Might, of Peterborough, exhibits 3 "Daisy" churns, and a cultivator for hilling and digging potatoes.

Graham and Ritchie have on the ground a complete assortment of all the plows made by the Cockshutt Plow Co. of Brantford, Ont.

The William Hamilton Mfg Co'y show a four horse power boiler, designed for a cheese factory and made of steel.

FRUITS, GRAIN AND ROOTS.

The display of fruits is an extensive and beautiful one, and is shown in the marquee at the south side of the grounds. Here are [illegible] luscious apples, luscious plums, and tempting grapes in liberal profusion. In the same tent is an exhibit of cheese and butter that speaks volumes for the thrifty wives of our hardy farmers. The show of grain is not as extensive as might have been anticipated, but what is lacking in quantity is amply made up by its excellent quality. There is a large and varied show of tubers of different kinds. The potatoes are remarkably fine and one hardly knows which to admire most, the beautiful looking white ones, or those with a delightful pink tinge to them. The beets and mangolds are simply immense, both individually and collectively. Fat yellow pumpkins, and tempting looking melons, too, form a noticeable feature in this department.

Messrs. Fife & Bennett, dealers in agricultural implements, do not make an extensive display, but the broadcast seeder shown by them is an important matter to the farmers. It is made by the Mann Manufacturing Company, Brockville, and is a drill and harrow combined. It can be used in preparing the ground for the seed, and when that is done it follows, sowing and covering the grain. It is provided with a comfortable seat, and besides being a first-class seeder, can be used, when not wanted for sowing purposes, as a cultivator. It is well worthy the inspection of farmers.

Mr. John Agnew, of Ashburnham, exhibits a "Rockaway" churn, which is claimed to be the easiest working and most perfect butter making churn made.

Mr. Wm. Forsyth makes an exhibit of four of his X L cut X L fanning mills and force and lift pumps; R. Bateson, agent.

Mr. Wm. Bacon shows the "Improved Model" washer and bleecher, whose use reduces the labour of washing clothes to the merest trifle. It is cheap, simple in construction, durable and not liable to get out of order.

Mr. P. G. Walker is on hand with his celebrated rack and load lifter in operation. It was the centre of an admiring crowd of farmers, and the ease with which it is operated and the smooth manner in which the heaviest load can be hoisted above the mow so that the load can be thrown down instead of being laboriously pitched up, is a big point in its favor. Mr. Walker is a practical farmer, knows what the farmer needs, and in his ingenious new invention, he has struck the nail on the head, and will no doubt work a great advantage to himself and benefit his fellow farmers.

Henry Owen shows one of his noted model lift pumps, one of his modal force and lift pumps combined and the Wisner combined drill and fertilizer. This drill is distinguished by its new tubular iron frame, its steel draw bars, its index grain distributor, its patent spring hoe, its grass seed sower, its tube shifter, its shut off slides, etc. It is well worthy the attention of farmers.

Wright & Payton make a good show of pumps consisting of force, lift and cistern pump. Their combined force and lift pump has a feature that no other pumps possess. This is an arrangement admitting of the pump being at once converted from a force to a lift pump and vice versa in a moment, without the use of a wrench.

CARRIAGE BUILDING EXHIBITION.

There was a splendid display of buggies and waggons, made by two of our leading local builders, and the competition for first prize was keen. Messrs. Porter Bros., showed six buggies, two phætons, a waggonite and two farm wagons. The buggies comprize a Dexter Queen buggy, a Thomas, coil spring, (side bar), a three spring buggy, one jump seat buggy with an adjustable seat, capable of being converted in a moment from a two-seat pleasure buggy to a four-seat family carriage, etc.; one of the phætons was a three spring, New York pattern in the latest style, the upholstering was in myrtle green, all wool cloth, stuffed with curled hair; another was a family phæton; a very neat family carriage was double seated and finely finished; a fine farm waggon with blue oak gear and wheels throughout, finished in varnish and the box provided with shelving and neatly ornamented, was also shown. This firm's fine exhibit is completed by a well built lumber wagon. All the tops used by the firm are made in their own factory, and were prize winners at the Toronto Industrial.

Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger's Fair ground warerooms occupy the north-west angle of the enclosure. Attention is directed by two fine oil paintings over their booth, the work of their own painter, Walter Wing. Their display consists of a Surrey side-bar buggy, bottle green gearing, and leather top, purchased by Mr. E. W. Cox; piano box top buggy, elliptic cast steel springs, cloth trimming, spring cushion, manufactured for Dr. King; a canopy top pony phæton; side bar Atkinson spring buggy, built for Alex. Donnelly; a Timkin side-bar open buggy, built for T. Howden; a three spring buggy, sold to Mr. ; a village cart, the first ever made in town, and a lumber waggon. The painting on all this firm's work is done by Mr. Walter Wing, and in gloss and evenness of finish cannot be surpassed.

MISCELLANEOUS EXHIBITS.

Mr. W. McLean, of Peterborough, has an exhibit in one of the marquees of a Dominion Cabinet Creamer, an appliance calculated to greatly facilitate the labor of butter making. Exceedingly creditable.

Mr. Allen, of the Peterborough Pottery, shows a collection of stone ware utensils, adapted to all kinds of domestic purposes.

Mr. G. W. Hall shows a glass case, containing 36 kins of biscuits, and 40 varieties of candy manufactured at his establishment. A magnificent display.

Mr. W. Metcalf, the Hunter street harness maker, exhibits two complete sets of harness, of unusually good workmanship.

The Photographer's art is represented by the exhibit of Mr. McFadden, under a clump of trees at the west end of the grounds, and near by him in his wigwam Mr. G. A. Mitchell is busily engaged in demonstrating the tucking and felling capabilities of the Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machines.

In sewing machines, Mr. John L. Bryden shows three beautiful New Improved Raymonds. The finish of these machines is something artistic and it is claimed that their work corresponds with their appearance.

At the north side of the grounds is a building from which issue sonorous tones of the reed organ, and a closer investigation reveals Mr. D. Smart and his assistants, surrounded by a well assorted collection of Bell and Karn Organs and New Williams and other sewing machines. A lady exhibits to the gaze of the fair sex marvellous productions in needlework produced on these machines.

BOOK-BINDING EXHIBIT.

One of the most attractive of the industrial exhibits was the display of bookbinding from THE EXAMINER Book-bindery. It consists of thirty-one splendidly bound volumes, comprising 24 of the 178 volumes of Picturesque Canada, work turned out at this bindery, two volumes of Virtue's Shakspere, one volume of chefs-d'oeuvres of French Art, and four volumes of magazines. The styles of binding represented are the half calf, half [illegible] and full [illegible] marbled edges. The sewing is smoothly and strongly done, the gilding ornamentation and tooling are artistically executed. Altogether the specimens are exceedingly creditable examples of the art, and to say

JUDGING THE HORSES.

The judging of the horses, which was commenced at the driving track at three o'clock, was the greatest attraction of the day, and long before that time a dense throng had congregated near the grand stand, filling up both sides of the track for some distance on each side of it. The grand stand too, for admission to which a fee of ten cents was charged, was well filled up, and the band of the Fire Brigade stationed on it, enlivened the somewhat tiresome period of waiting, which took place before the judging commenced. Dr. Smith V.S., of Toronto was the judge in this department.

The event on which the greatest interest was centered was the performance of the roadster stallions, for which, in addition to the prize offered by the Association, Mr. H. Calcutt, with his accustomed liberality, had offered the Brewery Cup, a handsome piece of plate. In this decision speed was to be taken into consideration, and it was arranged that three one mile heats should be trotted, the horse taking two of them to be considered the best, as far as speed was concerned. Joe Daly officiated as starter and occupied the judge's stand. Two horses were entered in this class, "Colonel T.," a bright bay Hambletonian stallion, owned by Mr. A. B. Appleby, of Cobourg, and "Tariff," the property of Mr. Beatty, also of Cobourg. Mr. Appleby's brother, who usually drives the Colonel, had met with an accident to one of his fingers, which it was thought would incapacitate him from driving, so Mr. A. B. Appleby himself held the lines. Mr. Beatty sat in the sulky behind "Tariff." After one or two false starts the horses were got off well together, and had not gone far before the Hambletonian horse was off his feet, and before he had recovered, "Tariff," going in good style, had got the lead and the pole. The "Colonel" again settled down to business and for a time looked as if he would overhaul "Tariff," but was soon jumping again, and repeatedly lost his feet. "Tariff" kept on at a clinking trot and came in an easy winner in 2:49.

An exhibition of mounted swordsmanship by Professor Reid had been announced for the next event, but when he made his appearance on the track and was about to announce his performance he was curtly and crustily cut short by President Carnegie, much to the chagrin of the Professor and the disappointment of the crowd who were eagerly anticipating his exhibition.

Carriage horses 15¼ hands and over were then called out and three teams appeared on the track, Mr. Cavanagh's gray team, a team belonging to Mr. W. B. Kelly, of Bridgenorth, and Mr. Robert White's gray team. All were splendid looking animals and some difficulty was experienced in arriving at a decision, but the judge, after observing their paces, minutely observing their points, and himself driving them, awarded first place to Mr. Cavanagh's team, second to Mr. Kelly's and third to Mr. White's.

The second heat of the stallion trial was next called. This time "Colonel T" was handled by his regular driver who, in spite of his injured hand, had pluckily taken his place in the sulky. When the Colonel gets started he is hard to stop, and several trials were needed before they could be sent off, but at last both came up to the wire well together and Joe Daly gave them the word. It then became evident that the Hambletonian stallion was a different horse with his accustomed driver behind him, for he went off at a clean smart clip without a sign of a skip. He was soon quite a little ahead, and when the back stretch was reached Mr. Beaty's horse commenced skipping badly and could not be got down to a trot. "Colonel T" held on and made the first half mile well ahead of Tariff. Mr. Beatty, however, at last got his horse settled down, and going at a long powerful gait he gained on the Colonel, but soon again he skipped and lost ground. At the three-quarter pole, however, he was trotting well, and as the two rounded into the home stretch it was evident that the finish would be a close one. Tariff gained rapidly on "Colonel T," and when within a few yards of the wire they were neck and neck, but just as they came up to it Tariff again went off his feet, and passed under the wire running, so the heat was given to Appleby's stallion. It was then announced that the final heat would be run off to-morrow afternoon.

In the meantime the carriage horses 15¼ hands and under, and single drivers, were called for, and while they were being judged the saddle horses made their appearance on the track. There were five of them; a handsome, lightly built, little colt, owned and ridden by Harry Willan, of South Monaghan; a fine rangy looking bay mare of Alick Patterson's, who was upon her; Mr. W. Locke's, of Cavan, bay horse, a strong looking weight carrier; a chestnut mare owned and ridden by James Walton, of Smith, and a rather forlorn looking brown beast bestridden by a youthful farmer named H. Davidson. After taking a preliminary canter, the horses were sent off at a brisk gallop, Willan's lively little colt soon showing to the fore. Alick Patterson, however, wasn't going to let him canter over, and going down the backstretch seemed likely to pass him. The gallant little horse still held on, and when nearing home, showed that he still had something left in him. Patterson made a big effort on the home stretch, but the little nag was too good, and cantered under the wire a length ahead. The victory was very popular, for the colt is as pretty as a fawn, and the rider a fine manly looking young fellow fit to ride for a man's life.

The decision in the carriage and driving classes had not been announced when the crowd began to leave the grounds.

The directors should cut a club and see that the caretakers of cattle should not make the promenade in front of the pens unfit for the use of visitors.

Director Collins pointed out with pride that every stall and pen was occupied and that for lack of room several horses and cattle had to be tethered out.

Mr. Hall's exhibit of confectionery, which was much admired, has been awarded a diploma.

A wonderful three-legged colt is being exhibited in a tent at the south-east corner of the driving track.

The prize list published in to-day's issue is complete, with the exception of the bicycle competition and the judging teams.

Prof. Reid, the champion swordsman, is advertised to give his long deferred performance on the grounds this afternoon.

The display of poultry was in keeping with the excellence of the other live stock departments. The principal exhibitors will be found in the prize list.

Mr. Henry Owens, Peterboro's pump maker, had the misfortune to be severly kicked by a horse at the fair grounds yesterday, and had to be carried home in a carriage.

Mr. Bannell Sawyer, of the Peterborough Business College, exhibits some beautiful specimens of the penman's art, of his own execution. These are the object of much admiration and have been awarded a diploma.

Directors Kincaid, McClelland, H. Davidson, Garbutt and Collins are worthy of all praise for the energetic way in which their duties have been discharged, and for their [illegible] to all with whom they have come in contact.

The Stallion trot yesterday afternoon was regarded with more interest than any other event at the grounds yesterday. Mr. Harry Calcutt deserves much praise for his generosity in offering a cup for it. It would be a good thing another year if similar prizes could be offered for running horses and other trotters. Competition between these would attract larger numbers of visitors. There is nothing so dear to the average human heart as a horse trot.

The New York Singer Sewing Machine Company have an exhibit of their machines at the west end of the grounds, in charge of Mr. H. Laishly, the local agent. The button hole machine, which makes the button hole, binds it, and sews on the button, is an object of great wonder and admiration. Mr. Laishley is assisted by a staff consisting of 4 ladies and 2 gentlemen, who are all kept busily at work. The cabinet 12 drawer machine is much admired, and the machine on which corsets are being made attracts much attention.

In Wednesday's description of the stock at the Exhibition we omitted, for want of space, to refer to the splendid exhibit of Cotswold sheep. Mr. Jas. Campbell's seventeen attracted considerable attention. Mr. Robt. Walton showed two Southdowns and took one first prize. T. W. Willan, of South Monaghan, had three, and Mr. A. Watts, of Warsaw, displayed two fat wethers. Mr. Fred. Waldron, of Lakefield, and Mr. A. R. Kidd also competed with some fine specimens of the wool-producing animal.

The judging of horses Wednesday was a slow process and was unnecessarily prolonged. If instead of keeping the animals standing on the track while being examined, they had been driven into the ring after showing their paces, the track would have been left clear and something else might have been going on to attract the attention of the audience. Prof. Reid's exhibition, which was crowded out yesterday, might easily have been given if this course had been followed. It is to be hoped the management will profit by their experience, as a still larger number of visitors may be expected next year and their interest must be kept by a constant flow of attractions.

Fraserville.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Our recently organized football club appointed the following officers:—John Lightfoot, President; David Baxter, Vice-President; A. J. H. Strike, Captain; Robert Stewart, Secretary-Treasurer; Hamilton Lackie, Albert Goodfellow and Arthur Graham, committee of management.

Two weeks ago a match game was played between the Clippers, of Cavan, (an eleven that have played for several seasons) and our boys. The game was played on their grounds and resulted in a draw.

On Saturday, Oct. 3rd, a match game will be played at Mr. Lightfoot's farm. The Clippers and our boys will again face. We believe a silver cup is to be played for. An interesting time is expected.

On Friday, September 25th the Fraserville eleven played between 12 and 15 men of Centreville. Fraserville eleven obtained six goals, their opponents none. We believe the Centreville young men are excited over it, and intend enforcing every means to work up a good team, and ere long give us another opportunity of obtaining a half dozen goals.

Capt. Walsh and men arrived home safely from annual drill, on last Saturday morning. Both officers and men looked well.

The members of L. O. L. No. 46 had an excursion to Idyl Wild a short time ago. It was largely attended, and all enjoyed themselves.

The average attendance at school since August 18th, in this section is believed to be 50. The school boys have procured a foot ball, and are at present showing signs of making exceptionally fine players. They are very desirous of meeting boys their size from some other school section.

OBITUARY.—"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." On the 14th of September Fanny Henry, a faithful member of the Baptist church, passed away to the better land. She was much attached to all the institutions of the church. Her piety was deep, and the peace of God, which passeth knowledge, sustained her from day to day. Her place among us will not easily be filled, being an example to them that believe in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity. Both people and pastor have lost a true friend and helper. Her life, though pure and active, was not exempt from suffering. Her last conflict was a triumph over death. He, the King of kings, was present, and in her last moments enabled her to exclaim, "Safe in the arms of Jesus." A large number of her friends were present at her burial. And thus the Lord's people are gathered home, "one by one." Her remains were laid away in the Baptist cemetery, awaiting the first resurrection.

At length, freed spirit, thy work is done;
The Master hath called His servant home.
'Mid realms of perfect bliss to roam,
Through all eternity.

Trial and pain were thy portion here,
Weariness and toil and care;
But perfect rest, when on thy bier
Thy silent head was laid.

For when Death came, he met no moan;
The soul was weary to reach its home—
To stand before the Father's throne
And hear the blessed "Well done!"

And now, in that all-glorious land,
Thou art standing midst the spirit band.
And beckoning with an outstretched hand
To those who weep below.

May the Lord help us to meet thee there;
And when we reach the distant shore,
Those 'mid the blest my soul longs to see,
I know thou'll be waiting to welcome me.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Mrs. Burnett's Boy.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, the well-known authoress, is one of those exceptions, and her craze for the picturesque extends not only to her inanimate surroundings, but to her two boys. A lady who has recently paid Mrs. Burnett a long visit is the authority for the statement that they are very handsome boys. Their proud mother is quite aware of their beauty by keeping them dressed in a most becoming fashion. She taught them to pose in an artistic manner. At a bell rings and a visitor is announced, Mrs. Burnett turns to her sons and says: "Take your positions." Immediately the well-trained boys fall into the poses best suited to their dress and beauty. The older one will lean his elbow on the corner of the mantlepiece and rest his head upon his shapely hand, while the younger will stretch himself in a graceful attitude on the heavy fur rug in front of the fire. The visitor enters and cannot fail to be struck by the picturesque beauty of the scene and goes away, her mind full of admiration for her friend's children, and feels almost ashamed of the general roughness of her own boys at home, whom she is much more likely to find gliding down the banisters, sitting on the fence or playing ball than in poses which would gladden an artist's heart. Of course the attitudes given above are only those for winter use. For summer an entirely different set prevail, but they are all quite as effective, and, indeed, they are the pride of Mrs. Burnett's heart.

Retribution.

Some would-be passengers were waiting at a station up in Wisconsin for a train which didn't arrive, because it was buried in the snow sixteen miles away. A farmer came in, and, after chawing himself ont by the stove, inquired of the station agent:

"Ain't yer road open yet?"

He was informed that the road was effectually closed to traffic for that day at least. Next day he came in again. The passengers had dispersed, but the agent was on duty.

"Ain't she open yet?" he inquired, as soon as he could pull the icicles away from the front of his mouth.

"Closed up tighter than a mackerel."

The third day he reappeared, took off his boots to see if his feet were frozen, and put a little sweet oil on his frost-bitten nose before inquiring:

"Open yet?"

"Naw, and ain't likely to be before spring."

"Well, I'll be doggoned!" exclaimed the inquirer, disgustedly; "by the great horned spoon, but this is tough. It serves me right, though, sarves me right."

"How's that?"

"Wall, you see, it's a clear case of retribution. That's what it is—retribution. My well is froze up, the creek on my place is closed solid, I can't cut through the ice on the lake, and my stock is sufferin' for water. There's so tarnal much snow 'round my barn I can't git the doors open, and I have to walk into town, seein's I can't get my horse out. They can't keep the schoolhouse warm and that's closed up. Anyhow, my children couldn't git out o' the house this weather. All the 'taters in my cellar is gone, and those I buried down in the patch are under ten feet o' snow. I'm out of terbacker, an' when I went to the only place in town where I've got any credit that was closed up, even yer old railroad. Am expectin' my wife on that train of your'n that's snowed in down by Jones' Crossing. It's retribution; that's what it is."

"Retribution for what?"

"Why, darn it all, stranger, I'm the man that predicted an open winter."

Melville Miller

Margaret.

Beauty she had not, neither place nor state;
Not hers the gracious gifts that women prize,
In learning of the schools she was not wise;
She was not anything the world calls great.

Yet, in the quaint old Southern city where
She lived and wrought, in polished marble set,
Comrade of Jackson, Clay, and Lafayette,
Her statue rises clean and white and fair.

Who was she, thus to win such comradeship?
Who was she, thus to be immortalised
With the beloved, honored, idolised?
Great names forever upon History's lip.

A woman who made bread, who at her stall
Or by her bake shop door sat day by day,
Selling her wares in simple, honest way,
A very humble woman—that was all.

But everywhere the orphan children say,
"She was our mother," and the city's poor
Cry out, "'Twas she who blessed our hapless door;"
While from the past the soldiers blue and gray

Do speak her praise, and every noble cause
Declares she was our helper; every need
Whispers, she knew not any class nor creed,
But listened always to love's higher laws.

And so she died, and so the people set
Amid their heroes—with a proud consent—
This simple woman-crowned monument,
And carved thereon the one word Margaret.

O gracious city! he who runneth reads
Your pride in patriotic fire, in martial fame;
But in the place you give this humble name
You prove your faith in love's diviner deeds.
—Carlotta Perry in Youth's Companion.

Opium and Chloral.

Rum in excess, or as a medicine, is bad enough; opium, save in extremity, is worse, and chloral is, even in the hands of physicians, worst of all, because of the uncertainty of its specific effect and the inevitable danger attending its use without the prescription of a physician. Periodically, in consequence of some special illustration, there is a spasmodic assault upon stimulants. The warfare against alcohol has assumed a chronic form, but as to opium and now as to chloral the attacks are made only, as it were, by invitation. And yet the same principle governs. There are not indeed, so many consumers of opium as of whisky, nor so many habitual users of chloral as of opium, but the same appetite leads to the use of one as of the other. In one sense it is a natural, appetite. Perhaps sorrow and anxiety have made as many inebriates as thoughtless drinking has brought to woe and remorse. It is well to sweep one room; it is better to cleanse, purify, keep clean the whole house.—Providence Journal.

Relation of Clothing to Bodily Heat.

The thinnest veil is a vestment in the sense that it moderates the loss of heat which radiation causes the naked body to experience. In the same way a cloudy sky protects the earth against too great cooling in spring nights. In covering ourselves with multiple envelopes of which we augment the protecting thickness according to the rigor of the seasons, we retard the radiation from the body by causing it to pass through a series of stages, or by providing relays. The linen, the ordinary dress, and the cloak constitute for us so many artificial epidermises. The heat that leaves the skin goes to warm these superposed envelopes; it passes through them the more slowly in proportion as they are poorer conductors; reaching the surface, it escapes, but without making us feel the chills which direct contact with the atmosphere occasions, for our clothes catch the cold for us. The hairs and the feathers of animals perform the same function as toward their skin, serving to remove the sent of calorific exchange away from the body. The protection we owe to our clothes is made more effectual by their always being wadded with a stratum of warm air. Each one of us thus has his own atmosphere, which goes with him everywhere, and is renewed without being cooled. The animal also finds under its fur an additional protection in the bed of air that fills the spaces between the hairs; and it is on account of the air they inclose that porous substances, furs, and feathers keep warm.

Experiments to determine the degree of facility with which different substances used for clothing allow heat to escape were made by Count Rumford, Senebier, Boeckmann, James Starck, and M. Coulier. The results were not in all cases consistent with each other, but they indicate that the property is dependent on the texture of the substance rather than on the kind of material, or—as concerns non-luminous heat—its color.—From "Clothing and the Atmosphere," by M. R. Redon, in Popular Science Monthly for October

French editors, it is said, although procuring their news from an agency at a cost of $4 or $5 a day, do not scruple to display it in their papers as "from our special correspondent," and do not seem to understand that they are lying when they do. Every paper in Paris of any pretensions as a newspaper publishes daily "special" matter from China and the East, when the truth is not a single French paper has had the enterprise to send or to secure a correspondent at the seat of the French complications in and around Shanghai and Hadai.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

The Lively LaRues.

The LaRue Brothers and the rightly named Boy Wonder gave their capital entertainment at the Lansdowne Rink again last evening in the presence of a large audience. The brothers are graceful and skilled skaters and daring acrobats, while the feats of the Boy Wonder are simply phenomenal. This is their last evening and every one should see them. There will be a grand torchlight procession down George street to the rink at 8 o'clock.

Sunday School Association.

A meeting was held on Tuesday evening in St. Paul's Church for the purpose of organizing a Sunday School Association. A constitution was framed and adopted and the following officers elected:—President, D. B. Gardener; Vice-President, J. W. Flavelle; Secretary, J. C. Lacy. An Executive Committee, consisting of one teacher from each Sunday School, was appointed. The Association will be known as the Sunday School Association of Peterborough. The first meeting will be held on the first Monday in November.

What We May Expect.

Dr. Potts and the Y. M. C. A. anniversary to-night.

Crowds to see the LaRue Brothers and the Boy Wonder.

Business men to evince more interest in the fair another year.

Deer hunting from to-day till December 15th.

Fair weather; stationary or slightly lower temperature.

We would Like to Know.

Why autocrat Carnegie sat on the swordsmanship exhibition yesterday.

And if he has no sympathy for a brither Scot.

If a three-legged colt should be called a triped.

What they are Saying.

We didn't spend $500 on the Court House Park to have it used as a cow pasture.—The Horticultural Society.

A good show of horses.—Dr. Smith.

Come to St. Paul's to-night and I'll give you a good programme.—Chairman Flavelle.

Our labours have not been in vain—The Directors of the Central.

Fanny B. takes the cake.—Ned B.

And mine's the dandy team.—Ted.

Postal Irregularities.

Peterborough wants a good deal in the way of post office accommodation. Now that we have a new Postmaster-General, it is to be hoped that he will imitate the proverbial tendency of a new broom, and sweep the cobwebs of red-tapeism and political toom-foolery from his department, and give us our new post office some time during the nineteenth century. And while he is at reform he might do a good deal of vigorous stirring up in regard to our mail service of Ontario, east of Peterborough. It is and has been for a long time, very go-as-you-please Not only do letters and newspapers arrive here very irregularly, but with respect to the latter especially, they come in bunches. The Ottawa papers have a particularly erratic mode of arrival, generally two or three days behind time, and then comes in one batch the accumulation of several days. On one Friday in particular, the EXAMINER P. O. drawer contained the numbers of the Ottawa Free Press for the days from Monday to Friday inclusive, both the exchange copies belonging to this office and the Review. Where a daily paper is concerned, it is desirable to get its numbers within a week at least after their issue. Will Sir Alexander Campbell, as soon as he fits himself to his new seat, which should be speedily, for he has been shunted about enough to have a good deal of experience in this line—attend to the affairs of his department with a little more care than has marked the previous administration of the department?

Personal.

Mr. W. Brandrette, G. T. R. Agent, has returned home from England, where he has been on a visit.

On Wednesday morning the family of Mr. John Campbell, M. A., classical master in Guelph Collegiate Institute, left town to take up their residence in the Royal city.

Dr. Bell, of Lakefield, left for Quebec last evening. He may probably visit England before he returns. Should he find it necessary to cross the "briny deep," we hope he will have a pleasant voyage.

Capt. Munt, of the Saved Army, arrived in town yesterday from Watertown, and took part in the service last evening. The Captain, who is one of the most enthusiastic workers in the Arm, has not been enjoying the best of health lately.

Mr. F. Hobbs of Port Hope, while attending to his splendid exhibit of poultry at the exhibition, has also arranged for the appearance of Joe Murphy in Peterborough, on Tuesday evening, the 27th of October, in Bradburn's Opera House.

Mr. V. Kouber of Napanee, marbler dealer and manufacturer and importer of Scotch granite, is in town looking it over, and is very favorably impressed with it. If he were not doing so good a business in Napanee, we should like to see him in Peterboro' permanently.

Mr. J. C. Brasin, of Montreal, Inspector of the Northern Assurance Company, is in town on a tour of inspection. The Company is represented here by Mr. W. H. Hill. This Company, recognizing its interests in the welfare of the colonies and of India, has become one of the guarantors to the extent of £11,000 sterling to the fund for meeting the expenses of the Colonial and Indian Exhibition to be held in London in 1886.

One Hundred Boys Wanted

To hold torches in the torch light procession to the Lansdowne Rink this evening. Apply at the rink office. The La Rue Brothers and the Boy Wonder will give a new programme at the Lansdowne to-night. Come and see them.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents]

"That Hose."

The Canadian Rubber Company Prepared to Guarantee it—Should not the Town Clerk have One Now?

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—We have long known that the agents of the Gutta Percha and Rubber Co., of New York, away down below their frothings, their puffings and their shriekings, quietly acknowledged that our brands of fire hose were far superior to theirs, but we were unprepared for the flattering testimonial given our hose by the writer of the article in your issue of the 24th. When an opposition hose agent over his own signature publicly declares that our goods, that have done duty in the town for nine years, stood the brunt of all the fires, gradually outwearing the rubber hose,—when such an agent publicly declares that the first lot of Eureka is the best cotton hose in the town we bow to his decision, we thank him for the testimony and express our regret that we cannot be so generous with our reference in regard to his brands.

Now, Mr. Editor, once and for all, we wish to state positively and definitely our position in regard to the last lot purchased from us. Nothing that any hose agent will say will induce us to again occupy your space or engross your time.

If the Town Clerk never received any guarantee we will furnish one for the unexpired period. We want the town, the Mayor, the Council, the engineer, the Chief, and any, or all, itinerant hose tooters to know that we are right behind this inferior and light lot of hose last supplied your corporation. We will stay there till the guaranteed time expires, and although we are not "a prophet, or the son of a prophet," we know our Eureka will be doing fire duty long after the two hundred feet of rubber hose, purchased recently, dangles from the tail end of your watering cart.

We court information on this inferior lot of Eureka. The weight of a length of the new lot is almost identical with the weight of a length of the old. It is three-ply—sixteen threads to the strand. There is not a sign of rottenness about it. Where is it inferior? Does this look like we wanted to to hide ourselves under a bushel?

Any man can sell hose if he has a good stock of wind, plenty of neck, and a fair supply of the "root of all evil." We never tendered for the last two hundred feet required by the town. We presume it was a walk over for the agent of the rubber fire hose. We don't know when the good people of Peterborough constituted him "a ruler and a judge over them." After giving him an order for 200 feet he shouldn't turn bilious and belittle your engineer or the manner in which he performs his duties. Opinions differ in regard to Mr. English. His engine house is clean; his hose exceedingly well cared for, and the essential parts of his engine in good shape. Perhaps Mr. English was a little put out with Mr. Humphries encumbering him with an old fish cart, mounted on four wheels, painted and dubbed "a hook and ladder"—an article he failed to saddle the town with. Perhaps he found "Jim" rather a hard bump to shove around, and now vents his spleen by belittling him. Tinsel and tissue paper, fuss and feathers, generally indicate a weakness. A nickel's worth of rotten stone or bath brick will polish up the Silsby—it won't make her pumps work any better or save a ratepayer's property from the devouring element.

It is foreign to the question to drag in the Trenton Fire Department. We are quite able to attend to all these matters ourselves. When we raise a "bee" we will consider the propriety of giving Mr. Humphries a bid. The committee accepted our explanation; we rectified the bungle which occurred purely through inadvertance and the hose was on its way to Trenton before their chief made a friendly call.

Respectfully yours,
C. R. GRAY,
for Canada Rubber Company, of Montreal, Quebec and Toronto.

in the Mantle and Dress Making Department at Fair, VanEvery & Co's. Ladies will appreciate the large assortment of handsome materials from which Rich and Elegant Mantles and Dresses are being turned out daily.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

A Splendid Stock.

While calling at Mr. B. Shortly's harness rooms, George street, our reporter was much impressed by the thoroughly complete nature of the stock exhibited. This consisted of a large array of double and single harness, draught and pleasure harness, saddles, bridles, horse blankets, carriage rugs, nets, whips, and in fact a full supply of horse furnishings. The trunks, valises, hand-bags, etc., make a very fine display. Every department is unusually full and complete and every care has been bestowed upon the purchase and manufacture of these goods. Never before has this popular establishment been better equipped for meeting the demands of its numerous customers, while the prices defy successful competition.

Notice of Visit.

I have the pleasure of announcing to the residents of Peterborough and vicinity that Mr. P. H. Morris, formerly of the firm of Lazarus & Morris, and now from the establishment of B. Laurance, of Montreal, and London, England, will be at my store during the three days on which our Central Exhibition is held, viz., Tuesday and Wednesday, the 29th and 30th Sept., and on Thursday, the 1st of Oct., for the purpose of adjusting the B. Laurance genuine pebble and other spectacles and eyeglasses for every requirement of the eye. He is especially qualified by his long experience and thorough knowledge of his profession, to give just such spectacles, &c., as are best suited in each case, however difficult, and afford relief where relief is possible. This, added to the acknowledged superiority of the B. Laurance pebble spectacles and eyeglasses, assures to wearers and others needing aids to sight, great advantages not otherwise attainable. Remember dates of visit to my store. John McKee, chemist and druggist.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and one with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $120.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unrivalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market before most operators can get their logs to their mills; the adjoining lake affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to Fall Millinery.

A Beautiful Display in the Show Rooms of Messrs. Hall, Innes & Co.

A visit to the millinery show rooms at this time of the year, is one of the events most eagerly anticipated by the fair sex, and as a consequence the establishment of Messrs. Hall, Innes & Co., whose formal fall opening took place on Tuesday, has been for several days crowded by ladies inspecting their beautiful and extensive display. And they have been well repaid, for the show is one of more than usual brilliancy. The show room on the second flat of the building on Simcoe street contains a most extensive stock of mantles in beautifully designed brocades and ottoman cords and silk plush, Newmarkets, which still retain their place in popular favor, and other ready made garments of rich material.

The display of millinery is dazzling and confusing. The predominant materials in trimming appear to be feather-edged ribbons, which are profusely used, birds' wings, and the usual ostrich tips and plumes. The styles are innumerable, but the high crowned hat seems still to find favor, for it is largely represented. The bonnets are smaller, and more beautiful than ever. One, called the horse shoe, exquisitively got up in myrtle green velvet, is particularly handsome. The colors likely to be most in vogue are delicately graded shades of brown, golden seal, myrtle green. The Tam O'Shanter, which was such a favorite headgear a few seasons ago, is cropping up again, but principally for children. Messrs. Hall, Innes & Co. also show a large selection of children's bonnets and hoods in plush and other materials.

The ladies will find themselves amply repaid for a visit to these show rooms, and the present delightful weather affords a splendid opportunity of selecting their fall mantles and millinery.

Peterboroughs Fair.

The Closing Scenes of a Grandly Successful Show—Team and Bicycle racing.

The Central Fair was brought to a close yesterday evening, after having proved a great success in every way. During the morning when the judging of the heavy draught horses was going on there were few people present on the grounds beyond those interested in the decisions, but in the afternoon there was a fairly large attendance of spectators, whose attention was principally confined to the driving track, where the speeding of carriage teams, bicycle races, and exhibition of swordsmanship was being carried on.

The five-mile bicycle race was contested between A. Gibson, of Peterborough, and H. W. Kent of Millbrook, and the success of the former at the P.A.A.A. sports an Monday gave promise of an exciting contest. The race, however, was a disappointment, Kent proving himself a great deal too strong for Gibson, who succumbed after the third mile had been covered, C. McClelland and Brillinger entered for the two mile race, which resulted in a foul and collision, McClelland having the misfortune to be thrown over the fence, and the medal went to Brillinger by the judges decision. Gibson was the only entry for the mile race and it was withdrawn.

The speed trial of driving teams for a special prize of $15 offered by Messrs Jos. Walton, W. Rutherford and Jos. Barnard brought out several teams, and was productive of some interesting speeding, which finally resulted in the prize being awarded to a team belonging to Mr. Hicks of the Red Mills with Tom Morgan's team second.

The final heat of the stallion race was not trotted, as Colonel T., the winner of the second heat on Wednesday was laid up with congestion of the lungs and could not compete. The prize and Calcutt Cup therefore went to Mr. Beatty's horse, Tariff.

Professor Reid's exhibition of swordsmanship was very clever and interesting, and his sword lance and bayonet exercises found much favour with the sprinkling of military element that was on the grounds. The crowd dispersed at the conclusion of the exhibition, and exhibitors at once began moving their stock, horses and property away, and this morning little remains to tell of the busy scene enacted during the last three days.

SPECIAL PRIZES.—In our report of the Central Exhibition prize list we omitted mentioning that the special prizes for the best sewing machine and organ was awarded to the Williams sewing machine and the Bell organ, represented here by Mr. D. Smart.

FAIR GROUNDERS.

Mr. A. B. Appleby's Hambletonian stallion, "Colonel T," was suffering slightly from congestion of the lungs at the time of the race on Tuesday, and his exertions then aggravated the disease. He was so bad yesterday that he could not trot in the final heat, and it is feared that he will succumb to the disorder.

W. T. Mathers, Mathers' Corners, Otonabee, showed a waggon of superior workmanship and material. It has self-acting brake and adjustable whiffletrees. The box is panelled in white ash, while the body is in crimson. It has a new device for adjusting the springs, and another for shutting the tail board. This waggon has been constantly surrounded by a crowd of curious and admiring farmers.

A meeting of the Directors of the Central Exhibition is being held this afternoon for the purpose of winding up business. The total gate receipts amounted to almost $1,500.

* * *

Several protests have been made against the judges decisions, and will have to be considered.

* * *

The medals for the bycicle contest were manufactured by Mr. John McClelland, and reflect great credit on him. That for the five mile race is of solid gold, engraved with a bycicliat on the face, and that for the two miles is a silver Maltese cross, with a gold medallion in the centre bearing the figure of a wheelsman. Mr. McClelland also supplied some handsome medals for the P.A.A.A. sports on Monday.

That is, at the Lansdowne. This week we have had the LaRue brothers, or, in other Wortz, the street brothers, la rue being the French for street; and next week we are to have the Lane brothers. What will be the name of the next at-track-tion?

Thoughtful Authorities.

"The day after the fair" the civic authorities began the commendable work of employing scavengers to clean George St of the litter accumulating from shop sweepings, etc. If this had been done before the fair it might have produced a better impression upon the thousands of outside visitors who were in the town during the exhibition.

That Cow.

She made her appearance in the Court House Park again last evening, and after wandering around and tramping over the flower beds and making a meal of some of the flowers, stood switching her tail and chewing the cud with a look in her mild eyes that betrayed no consciousness of wrong doing. If the owner of that cow doesn't keep her out of the park, some zealous member of the Horticultural Society will be converting her into beef before long.

The Absurdity of It.

The genteel British funeral, only just emancipated from the mockery of scarfs, hat bands, ostrich feathers and undertakers' upholstery generally, bids fair to become as absurd in a different way. The floral frenzy is being carried to ridiculous and grotesque lengths. I can understand a few flowers being scattered upon the grave of an innocent child, or even of a young girl—"Sweets to the sweet," by all means—that is to say, in moderation. But to see some hoary statesman or city capitalist buried under a carload of costly, but altogether inappropriate vegetables is really too absurd. Why should his coffin be piled with lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns? Was he a lily of the valley, even when he was young? Did he look in the least like a lily of the valley of late years, when he told his old bachelor stories in the club smoking-room? Not a bit. Surely it would be more decent to put his sword by his side and "his martial cloak around him," and bury him like a man; not like a baby.—London Truth.

The Art of Dressing.

Lady Paget, in The Nineteenth Century, says: Those will be well dressed who wear the right thing at the right time. The example ought to come from the educated and refined. We constantly hear French dressing extolled; the reason is that the Frenchwoman, being of a more positive turn of mind, is less prone to the effective and picturesque, and her appearance, therefore, will generally be in harmony with her surroundings. The bonne, in spotless cap and apron, going to market; the grisette, in sober-colored but well-made merino, the plain straw bonnet relieved by a touch of crimson; the grande dame walking to mass in her rich but simple black silk, trimmed with a few yards of Chantilly round neck and wrists—are all dressed in reference to the hour of the day and the errant they pursue. In England it is different; the neat muslin cap is replaced by the charwoman's greasy black bonnet—a soiled lilac flower and crumpled blue strings being the invariable accompaniments; tawdry black satin and a hat or bonnet profusely ornamented with light-colored feathers—not the freshest—meet the eye instead of the grisette's neat costume, and should you chance to take a walk in the park one morning, you encounter figures of every hue and shape, clad in every texture, from limpest cotton to canary satin, covered with lace, flounces, beads, and embroidery, regardless of expense, harmony, or fitness. It is not that many of these dresses are not very pretty and picturesque in themselves—for instance, that maroon velvet, trailing along in the dust and suggestive only of heat and discomfort this hot summer morning, would look beautiful and rich at 5 o'clock tea on a January afternoon. In yonder red plush parasol there can be no redeeming point; it always must be an anomaly; but that slim girl in pink muslin with a huge fur tippet on her shoulders would have done much better had she worn a warmer dress or a more appropriate covering.

A Frenchwoman contents herself with a few very well made and not too showy dresses, with everything thereto pertaining complete. Should some opportunity arise when none of them will do, she remains at home. Now, though an Englishwoman often possesses many advantages over women of other nations, the very charm and originality of her appearance prove her snare.

She is apt to be misled by ideas taken from pictures and poetry, but

SPAIN AND GERMANY.

The little breeze, which, for a time, threatened to be a very serious affair between Spain and Germany, has, it would seem, been pretty well calmed down and is now about blown over.

Our readers may have noticed that a recent telegram states, the German Government has ordered that the reserves, called to serve in the case of a war with Spain, be disbanded and that the difficulty has been regarded as settled.

Naturally, one enquires what caused the trouble, and how was it precipiated so suddenly?

It was due to the conduct of a German gunboat and their commanders in landing a force of sailors and mariners on the Caroline Islands and hoisting there the German flag. These islands are claimed by Spain, but her sovereignty, if not abandoned, has at least been greatly neglected for many years.

The islands about which the dispute arose lie in the Pacific ocean, to the east of the Phillipines and north of New Guinea. The whole group contains not over 140,000 inhabitants. The western or Palew islands have a total area of 346 square miles and the central group of which Yap, an island not over 10 miles in length, is the largest, contains about 500 islands and has an area of 360 square miles. The inhabitants are a dark, copper-colored race and are at a low level of civilization. In one group of islands—the Mortlock—we find the only worshippers of regular idols in the archipelago. In 1873, Dr. Temper stated that the population was rapidly decreasing. The Spanish claim the islands by right of discovery, although an Englishman, Drake, discovered the Pelews in 1579. The name they now bear was given them in honor of Charles II of Spain. They are valueless in a commercial point of view and form the chief rendezvous for the whalers in that part of the Pacific.

The general policy of Bismarck has recently been to extend the protection of the Empire over unoccupied lands, such as these where Germans have been settled, and where no other States secure their safety and protection. In this plan, so far as the Carolines were concerned, he anticipated no serious difficulty. But he provoked thereby a commotion of which he little dreamed.

Spain, indeed, was furious. The condition of the country on hearing that Germany had seized Yap, the largest of the Caroline Islands, was somewhat like the situation in England when news of the Penjdeh affair arrived. The only difference was, the fiery Southerners naturally showed much more excitement and anger than the cool, phlegmatic Saxons.

Crowds assaulted the German Embassy, tore down the flag staff and rushed off to the Government square to make a bonfire of the hated trophies. The Premier dismissed the commanders of the war vessels off Yap, because they had suffered the German gunboats to be beforehand with them. The King of Spain at once returned to the Capital and held a Cabinet Council which lasted over three hours.

The difficulty, indeed, was no slight one. Alphonso would have no desire personally to proclaim war with Germany. But although to do so would have been an act of madness, he might feel that the choice lay between war and revolution. The Spaniards felt the insult so deeply that if he had not led them to avenge it they would probably have dispensed with the King altogether.

Unquestionably the German officials had no right whatever to attempt the annexation of the island by forcible measures. It is satisfactory to know Bismarck is not prepared to ratify their action. Germany will doubtless require reparation for the insult offered to her flag by the people of Spain. But as some of the rioters have been arrested, this will present no difficulty.

The whole affair may perhaps warn Bismarch that his policy of scattering German flag over the waste places of the earth requires much more deliberation and caution than he has hitherto shown, and may teach him that even the weakest nation has rights which must be kept sacred and inviolate.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Tories complain that only $4.80 were taken for drinks at the Almonte political picnic on Tuesday. In face of this fact it is, of course, unnecessary to say that it was not a Conservative picnic.

The morning cables contain a report of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's speech, which indicates that the Tory government is preparing to apply a crime's act to Ireland. The trickery by which the British Tory party secured office is beginning to recoil on them. To secure the support of the Parnell faction, they were willing to make any number of promises, which circumstances makes them ready to swallow.

Death of Lord Shaftesbury.

The Cholera.

MADRID, Oct. 1.—During the twenty-four [illegible] of cholera and 213 deaths in Spain.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 1.—No case of cholera has been reported here in a week.

Unhappy Ireland.

CORK, Oct. 1.—Judge Ferguson, in a speech here yesterday, said that never before in the history of Ireland had such reckless disregard of life and property been known. If immediate steps were not taken for the suppression of crime, a more stringent Coercion Act would be necessary.

Fighting in the East.

The Turks and Arnauts Engaged in a Desperate Battle.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—During the last two days heavy artillery firing has been heard in the direction of Pristinia and Djakova. It is believed that a desperate fight has been raging between the Turks and Arnauts. Bashi-Bazouks have sacked and burned several villages in Eastern Roumelia.

CATTARO, Oct. 1.—The Miridetes, who are in rebellion, are the most powerful of the Albanian and are 35,000 strong. They are all Catholics. The rising is the most serious occurrence.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—The result of the recent interview between M. DeGiers, the Russian Prime Minister, and Prince Bismarck, will be to restrain Servia Greece and Montenegro from attacking Turkey. Otherwise Austria, it is thought, will certainly make a bold strike for Salonica, and possibly for Constantinople, causing a blaze in Russia, which would end in a European war.

War Inevitable.

VIENNA, Oct. 1.—The opinion here is that war is inevitable. Business on the Bourse is flat.

PHILIPPOPOLIS. Oct. 1.—Merchants here have suspended payments. The Bank of Philippopolis has closed its doors. General anarchy prevails in commercial circles.

ATHENS, Oct. 1.—The Greek fleet is massing at Salamis, and will soon be reviewed by the king.

MALTA, Oct. 1.—A rumour is current here that the British squadron in the Mediterranean has been ordered to Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 1.—The Ambassadors met to-day to consider the situation, but adjourned without transacting any business, The Porte has sent a circular to the powers, protesting against the action of Prince Alexander in disarming the Mussulman inhabitant of Roumelia. The Porte, as a precautionary measure to prevent the reduction of supplies in the event of a war with Bulgaria, has issued an order prohibiting the exportation of cereals.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Italy has notified the powers that it favors the maintenance of the status quo in Roumelia.

BELGRADE, Oct 1.—King Milan has arrived at Nissa, where he was accorded a warm reception.

VIENNA, Oct. 1.—A Servian loan has been concluded here.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Times says that to-day will prove an important date in the history of the Eastern crisis. "It is understood," says the Times, "that the first meeting of the formal conference of ambassadors will take place within the next few hours at Constantinople, while at Nissa the Servian Skuptschina will be opened by King Milan. It is plain on what is decided in these two gatherings depends the issues of war or peace. If a wrong decision is taken at either place, if the conference takes up too rigid an attitude with regard to Prince Alexander, or if the Skuptschina decides rashly upon separate action, it may well be that before many days are over the whole Eastern question will be re-opened in its most acute and dangerous form."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 1.—The general opinion here is that Russia is the only real opponent of Bulgarian union, and will try to dethrone Prince Alexander and put an easier tool in his place.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the [illegible] for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

July Weather.

It was sunny weather, and we made the hay together,
And the air was perfumed richly with the hay before us spread,
And the streamlet ran beside us, and the distant rabbits eyed us,
And the cow bells tinkled sweetly, and the lark sang overhead;
When I whispered softly in her ear and this was all I said:

"It is sunny July weather! Shall we make the hay together?
Shall we make the hay together love forever and a day?
Will you come and be my bride, love? May I linger by your side, love?
May I linger, linger by your side for ever and a day?
And this was really all she said to what I had to say:

"It is sunny July weather! We will make the hay together.
We will make the hay together, love, forever and a day,
For I love you, love you, dear, and although I shed a tear,
It is only for this new joy, which shall never pass away—
Which shall never have an ending, love, forever and a day."

—Richard H. Boan, in the Current.

Belleville.

Rev. Mr. Williams and Rev. Dr. Carman, the two General Superintendents of the Methodist Church, have written a joint letter to the Star Assurance Company of England, asking them to stay proceedings against the Tabernacle for a few months, when the debt would be satisfactorily arranged. In the meantime their Canadian agents are pressing for a payment of the $19,000 due, and legal proceedings have been begun against the bond holders, who have been obliged to leave the country to save themselves. The position in which these men have been placed is a deplorable one, and if they are compelled to pay a debt which the whole body should bear, it will be a lasting disgrace to Methodism in Canada. —Ontario.

Within the last few days some unknown ruffian has defaced the monument recently erected in the cemetery by Mr. Joseph P. Reeves, to the memory of his wife and six children, who are buried there, by throwing upon it a pail or two of salt brine. The monument is of white bronze, and there is a suspicion that the brine was thrown upon it to test its durability, there having been of late some discussion as to the durability of that material in monuments. The act, whatever the motive, is certainly a rascally one, and its perpetrator deserves severe punishment. Mr. Reeves will pay a reward of $25 for evidence which will secure the conviction of the miscreant.—Intelligencer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

Explanatory.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—In your issue of the 29th inst., an article appears re crossing creek on Charlotte street, which is somewhat misleading, as therein I am credited with devising the ejector now being used for discharging surplus water from pipe trench, arising from springy Nature of ground, etc. The facts are that I had never seen one, nor yet had I ever heard of one being used for this purpose; on the other hand Mr. Henderson, Superintendent for the Company, learned of its having been made use of under somewhat similar circumstances on the Water Works of Hannibal, Missouri, U.S., and knowing that he had a difficult piece of work to perform in this case, gave the necessary instructions to have attachments made for the one at present in use. Kindly give insertion and oblige,

Yours truly,
R. B. MARTIN,
Pipe Layer for W.C.

[Our reporter was given to understand that the apparatus in question was devised by Mr. Martin, and this, combined with the fact that it was such as would suggest itself to a practical man as he is, led to the statement, and with no desire to be misleading.—Local Editor, EXAMINER.]

Cockfighting Contradicted.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—In the Daily Times of Monday, I noticed an article stating that a cock-fight had took place south of the town on last Sunday. The statement is a falsehood fabricated by the overgrown reporter of said paper. On Sunday morning, this scribe, who was "under the influence," happened to meet a supposed cock-fighter in company with some stove-plate moulders newly arrived from Hamilton, and as a result stretches his imagination and states that a cock-fight took place Again, in Wednesday's issue he states that a card has been received from Ottawa, stating that toughs were coming here for cock-fighting purposes. For this reporter's special information I may state that cocks will not fight at this season, as they are moulting. If the local reporter of the Times would pay as much attention to facts as he does to the double-distilled mountain dew, the pages of that paper would reap a benefit.

Yours truly,
A SUPPOSED COCK-FIGHTER.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Bless My Buttons!

Did it ever occur to you, gentle reader, what a vast amount of money is annually wasted in buttons? Look at the costumes of the men and women you meet in the street, and you will notice that not one button in fifty has any legitimate business in life. Statisticians have figured up the yearly drink bills of our people and the money wasted each twelve months upon tobacco, but they have, singularly enough, entirely neglected to recognise one of the most stupendous items of extravagance of improvident people. Only let the figures be brought home to the public in all their astounding immensity, and enough may be saved on buttons in two or three years to pay the national debt.—Boston Transcript.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Port Hope.

Port Hope is agitating for the introduction of the electric for street illuminating purposes, but the stock of $14,000 held by the town in the Gas Company makes the prospect of light rather dark.

A New "Gospel Hall."

The new Saved Army "Gospell Hall" in Campbellford will be opened on Sunday next. The opening services will be conducted by General Lindsay, Div.-Capt. Munt, Capt. Stubbs and wife, and Capt. Louisa Pierce. A concert will be held on Monday evening, at which a good programme will be persented, including tableaux vivants.

The Lanes at the Lansdowne.

The management of the Lansdowne Roller Rink seems to be on the watch for some attraction better than the last one, and this time they have "struck it rich" in the engagement of the Lane Brothers, the acknowledged kings of all roller skaters and bicyclists, who will appear at the Rink on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Oct. 5th and 6th, in their wonderful skating and bicycling feats.

Resumed Publication.

The publication of the Port Hope Daily Times has been resumed. The initial number of the revived daily is marked vol. 4, No. 237. Mr. Trayes, the pushing proprietor, is full of pluck, and is determined to succeed and his enterprise, no less than the handsome little daily he turns out, deserves patronage and the success which we wish it. The revived journal is a neat five-column paper, well filled with good reading matter and well filled with advertisements. The Times still shows a leaning towards the Conservative side of politics. We wish it's proprietor a full measure of success.

A Debt You Owe.

The world is deeply indebted to the man who first invented the sewing machine, and those who at the present day supply the community with these indispensable adjuncts to civilization are also deserving a meed of praise. The New Williams machine, for which Messrs. D. Smart & Son are the agents in Peterborough, is one of the most simple, light running, rapid and reliable of these machines, and has time and again proved itself capable of executing the widest range of domestic and manufacturing needlework rapidly and effectively. Strong as the strongest, it yet runs so lightly that to use it is a pleasure, and for durability it is without an equal, and will wear out two machines of any other make. The beautiful work done on these machines has been exhibited at the fair, and persons desiring a first rate machine should not fail when in town to make a call Messrs. Smart's George street warerooms and see his extensive stock of pianos, organs and sewing machines.

An Enviable Record.

Life is a game of ups and downs and he who remains for any length of time at the top has surely some peculiar merit to recommend him. And as with men, so with mechanical appliances and musical instruments; there may be those which, from dint of advertising, are for a time heard of, but, possessing no intrinsic merit, fall back again into the obscurity from which they should never have emerged. It is not so, however, with the famous Bell Organs. From the very first, when, years ago, in a small factory, the first organs were turned out, it took high rank and, instead of going back, increased from year to year in excellence till the demand for it was so great that new factories, covering acres of ground, had to be erected. And even now, with the increased accommodation, the Bells find it almost impossible to supply the demands made on them. These popular instruments are sold in Peterborough by D. Smart & Son, who, with the energy, which is such a marked feature of their character, erected a building on the exhibition grounds in which they displayed these instruments and a choice collection of sewing machines and pianos. Visitors should call and see their fine stock in the George street warerooms.

ATHLETICS.

The P.A.A.A. Sports.

THE TIME MADE COMPARES FAVORABLY WITH THAT MADE BY AMERICAN CHAMPIONS.

There were not wanting at the recent games of the P.A.A.A. a few chronic kickers who endeavoured to belittle the achievements of the local participants therein. A comparison of the time made in some of the races with that made in the American championship athletic competitions held in New York on Tuesday results favorably to our local athletes. The Association 100 yards, won by Geo. F. Orde, of the Bank of Toronto in 11 sec was 1-5 of a second quicker than that of Mr. W. Ford, who won the similar race at the New York meeting. But in the 440 yards race, also won by Orde, the difference was even greater, his time being 55⅘ secs., as against Ford's 57-3-7 sec. at New York. Orde's time, too, was ⅘ of a second faster than that in which Robertson, the crack short distance runner of the M.A.A.A. covered the same distance in the open race. Morris and Lawford were credited with running a very slow mile, but when compared with the time made by Ford at New York, [illegible] no doubt that had a standard time been fixed, as was done at the new York meeting, Morris and Lawford could have made the distance in 5.30.

Lacrosse.

THE ONTARIO CHAMPIONSHIP.

A meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club was held at the Little Windsor Hotel last evening, when it was decided that the club should compete for the Ontario championship, which will be played for by the champions of the different districts some time next week. The boys are to meet at George Rubidge's at 7.30 this evening for the purpose of taking exercise, which, as the evenings are too short for lacrosse, will consist principally of running. The place at which the championship is to be played for has not yet been decided by the Council.

A PRINTERS GAME.

The printers of Lindsay have expressed a a desire to play a game with their Peterboro' brethren, if it can be satisfactorily arranged. The local typos have the matter under consideration, and there is a probability of the contest taking place.

Range and Rifle.

The Rifle Association are out at the range practising this afternoon, for the matches which begin next Tuesday.

A Prolific Crab Tree.

Mr. Hugh Nelson, of Otonabee, has left with us a twig from a crabapple tree grown on his farm, three inches in length on which grew 20 well developed and ripened crab-apples. Crabs have a way of going backward, but at the rate Mr. Nelson's tree bears, their go-aheaditiveness is a most perplexing circumstance.

Signs of the Times.

A reporter of the EXAMINER noted in passing down George St, that Mr. Duncan Cameron has mounted a new window sign, so handsome that he thought it worthy of the free advertisement involved in this paragraph. Mr. Bannel Sawyer's new jamb sign at the entrance of his Business College on Hunter street, has for its vis-a-vis, the handsome of sign the law firm of Stone & Masson.

They Will Take Proceedings.

The hotel-keepers have at last taken decided action to annul the voting on the Scott Act. Mr. C. A. Weller has received instructions to take legal proceedings at once, and it is said that there will be little difficulty in upsetting the Act, owing to the irregularities with which the voting was conducted.

"Fair" Treatment.

A bucolic swain who had imbibed too much "cold tea" at the fair grounds, was a passenger up town on one of the vans plying to and from the exhibition on Thursday evening. On arriving at the town hall, the obfuscated agriculturist declined to settle for his ride, and the Jehu in charge of the vehicle failed by coaxing, bullying or any other means short of actual violence to extort it from him. At last a brilliant idea struck him, and securing the assistance of a brother charioteer he bundled the close fisted farmer into the waggon, declaring his intention of carrying him back and dumping him on the grounds. The plan had the desired effect and the hayseed after a prolonged investigation of his breeches pockets produced the requsite quarter and was allowed to stagger off up town.

Where to Purchase a Piano.

Canada, though young as a nation, stands prominently to the front in many manufactories, and in none more so than that of pianos. After New York, Boston and Philadelphia, there are few cities on the continent in which such a large piano making industry is carried on as in Toronto, and the largest among the factories of that city is that of R. S. Williams & Son. Mr. D. Smart & Son have the agency in Peterborough for their products, which occupy a very high place in the musical world, their excellent qualities being testified to by many of the leading musicians of Canada. No modern home is complete without a piano and persons contemplating the purchase of an instrument cannot do better than call on D. Smart & Son, who have always a large stock on hand to select from, and who, by their experience in this business, can give valuable assistance and advice to the intending purchaser. They also keep a large stock of organs and other musical instruments and sewing machines, and a visit to the warerooms on George street is one of the events of a visit to Peterborough.

Fair, VanEvery & Co.

have imported this season a most complete assortment of Mourning Goods, ranging from the new Crepe Epingle, Jet Cashmeres, French Silk Crapes, &c., to the more artistic Black Crape Bonnets, Caps, &c.

Anniversary Meeting in St. Paul's Church Last Evening—The Association Flourishing.

The anniversary meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association was held last evening in St. Paul's Church. There was a large attendance, the majority of the audience being ladies, and the chair was taken by Mr. J. W. Flavelle, President of the Association. Rev. E. F. Torrence, Rev. A. H. Munro, Rev. G. H. Davis and Rev. Mr. McCrae, of Cobourg, occupied seats on the platform. After the hymn "Oh! Where are the Reapers" had been sung Rev. E. F. Torrence opened the proceedings by reading from 12th chapter of Ecclesiastes, and Rev. Mr. McRea led in prayer. The anthem, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," written by Mr. J. S. Parker, was then rendered by the choir, after which the report of the Secretary was read by Mr. D. B. Gardener, Mr. Williams, the Secretary, being unable to read it on account of a bad cold. The report showed a most encouraging state of affairs, both spiritually and financially. Rev. A. H. Munro's services as teacher of the Bible class received a high meed of praise, and regret was expressed that he was obliged to relinquish this labor. Rev. Mr. Wallace, it said, would in future take this department. The Sunday evening meetings and training class were reported to be in a most hopeful state. The Association had commenced the year with a deficit of $178.64, yet now, when all the dues had been collected there would be a small balance to the credit of next year after discharging all liabilities.

After the report had been concluded, the hymn "While the Days are Going By" was sung, after which the speaker of the evening, Rev. Dr. Potts, of Elm-street Methodist Church, Toronto, addressed the meeting. In his preliminary remarks he paid a high compliment to the choir of St. Paul's Church, which led the musical services. He also made a humorous allusion to a coming union between the Presbyterian and Methodist bodies, which he seemed to think was a possibility of the near future. He then gave a stirring address on the mission and work of Y.M.C. Associations, pointing out that there existed for them a a large field of labor which could not be touched by the churches. He terminated his address by a moving appeal for the support of the Association by all members of the Christian churches. A collection was taken up and a vote of thanks tendered to the speaker. The choir then sang Sterne's anthem, "Who are these?" and the meeting was closed by prayer, the doxology and benediction.

An Improvement.

The enterprising proprietor of China Hall, Mr. Macfarlane Wilson, put in a large sheet of plate glass this morning in place of that which was cracked some time since. The light is one of the largest in town and required the services of several men to handle it.

Well Protected Premises.

Mr. G. W. Hall, the proprietor of the Biscuit Works, has achieved so great popularity by the excellence of his goods that he has been compelled to protect himself against a rush of customers by mounting a gatling gun in the shop of his works. The gun is an exact reproduction in wire of the famous Howard gatling that was used in the North-West unpleasantness. It is of full size, made of white wire, and is an exceedingly interesting model of a most peppery piece of artillery.

A Rise in the Biscuit Business.

The business demands it and it is done. G. W. Hall's growing business requires increased space and this is being provided by raising the building now used, a story and a half higher The new building is being raised and roofed in a manner to make it uniform with the new building of the lock works alongside. In his building improvements on Simcoe street this year Mr. Stevenson has made an immense improvement, which not only adds to the beauty of this thoroughfare, but also adds largely to the manufacturing capacity of the important industrial establishments for which the building operations have been carried on.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1300.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can get their logs to their mills; the adjoining lake affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to Peterborough Business College.

An Important Institution—Practical Education Imparted—Night Classes Opened.

It is the intelligence of a nation that gives it its position among other nations. It is the educational system that hails the dawn and spreads intelligence throughout her world. The schools of Canada are the strength. What is to appear in our nation years hence, is being breathed into our school children to-day. Among schools none have closer claim to regard and support than Business Colleges. It is to the Business College that we must look in order to have anything that has been taught in other schools, put into practical use. In the words of the present Minister of Education for Ontario:—"I regard Business Colleges as an admirable part of our system, the work they do cannot be done in our public schools, cannot be well done in our High schools, in fact cannot be well done anywhere, except in Business Colleges."

The Business College established here amongst us is a

that have been established throughout Canada. Mr. Bannell Sawyer came to us a few months ago a perfect stranger, but with excellent credentials, and since has shown himself to be everything that they outlined, so that to-day we have in our midst an institution with 44 students enrolled, and, doubtless, in a few days, owing to the opening of the night classes, this number will be more than doubled. Already Mr. Sawyer has turned out two good shorthand writers, although they were but a few weeks in attendance—Albinus Clarke, who is now teaching, according to Mr. Sawyer's method, in Belleville; and Alexander Cooper, who has been appointed Secretary to the Powell & Jones Stove Manufacturing Company here. Business men are already sending in applications for young men who are qualified to take positions as shorthand writers, correspondents and accountants, and the lucky lady or gentleman will, in every case, be the one who, with attention and perseverence, completes his course most creditably.

The subjects, and the methods of presenting them in this school are eminently practical. Every operation or transaction is as practical and real as though done in the finest, most complete and thorough offices in New York, Boston, Chicago, or London, and the student on graduating knows not only how a thing ought to be done, but can do it, having been taught with emphasis the mighty import of that injunction,

"PRACTICE WHAT YOU PREACH."

Mr. Sawyer has done his part, and it remains for the town to sustain the college for a time. The college must look to the town for support for the first winter, and then an influx of foreign students, bringing intelligence, enthusiasm and money to the town, will be the inevitable result. The are just now being commenced, and we would advise all who wish to improve or to perfect themselves in any of the subjects taught to attend. An addition to the staff of the college is now being made, to meet the requirements of the increased attendance likely to follow the opening of the night classes.

The college rooms are beautifully fitted up, and are lighted with gas and electric light. We honestly believe there could not be a better investment, both of your time and money, made than taking a course at the Peterborough Business College.

Montreal's Malady.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—The report of the health officer shows that 61 houses were placarded for the first time and 28 replacarded. Eighty-four new cases were reported. Eighty-six visits were made by physicians, and 94 cases were verified. There are 151 patients in the hospital, of whom 6 were admitted yesterday.

Dr. L. Kannan reported at the Central police station yesterday afternoon that a young man named Stephen, living on St. David lane, and suffering from smallpox, was allowed to walk about the streets unchecked.

Of the 245 deaths for the week ending Sept 25th, 226 were French Canadians, 13 other Catholics and 6 Protestants. For the six days ending Thursday night, there were 276 deaths in the city and 66 in the adjoining municipalities.

There were 56 deaths yesterday, among them being that of Chris. Massiah, the talented night-editor of the Montreal Times. He leaves a wife and three small children, one of whom is a baby in arms, while the eldest is only five years of age. Mr. Massiah was very highly esteemed here, and his death under such distressing circumstances is greatly and widely regretted.

Guns and Ammunition.

I would respectfully advise the public that I have Colt's Magazine Rifles in stock as well as Winchester; price $20. Cartridges to suit, 85c. per box. Discount for quantities as usual. Shells, Wads, Shot, Powder and Caps at very low prices. George Stethem.

The Garb of Autumn.

A Rich and Rare Display of Varied Hue—In Fabrics Novel and in Fashions New.

At no time of the year does nature assume more glorious hues than in the autumn, when every tree is clad in the deepest and richest tints of golden russet, fading to a faint yellow or deepening to a purple brown, which mingles harmoniously with the dark deep green of the pine and other evergreen monarchs of the forest. And in happy keeping with the beauties of nature are the colors adopted by the fair sex at this season of the year. In the handsome show room of Fair, VanEvery & Co., who have just opened out their stock of fall millinery and other goods, one cannot fail to notice this resemblance. The soft, white radiance of the electric light falls shimmeringly on a combination of colors that forcibly suggest the rich golden tints of the autumnal forest. Rich velvets and brocades of beautiful design, and in shades varying from sable black to myrtle green or a golden bronze, form a background against which the lighter and brighter hued satins, silks, laces and flowers stand out with redoubled brilliancy, the general effect being heightened by the tasteful array of beautifully trimmed hats, bonnets, &c., in the centre of the room.

The stock is a most extensive and complete one, comprising all the latest novelties in French and American millinery. There are broad beef-eater hats, lofty crowned Italian brigand hats, and coquettish looking little American turbans, in perplexing profusion, mingled with those dainty concoctions of velvet, ribbons and flowers, dear to the feminine heart, and known as "ducks of bonnets." On the counter are rolls of rich plush, soft velvets and regal-looking gold brocades, in an infinite and bewildering variety of designs. Birds of dazzling plumage, aigrettes, and feathers of all kinds meet the eye at every turn, while from the ceiling hang long rolls of filmy lace for trimming or evening wear. In the mantle room are huge rolls of elegant mantle and dress goods, handsomely made up and trimmed mantles, and costly fur trimming in great profusion. And down-stairs, on the ground floor, is a stock of staple and fancy dry goods, so extensive that to enumerate one-fifth of them would require a whole newspaper. The ladies who have not yet seen Messrs. Fair, Van Every & Co.'s stock should lose no time in doing so, and will find a large and active staff of courteous lady assistants and affable clerks awaiting their pleasure.

Peaches, Plums, Pears, Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Apples, Cherries, Garden Raspberries, Melons, Currants, Gooseberries, and all kinds of green vegetables. Ripe Tomatoes one dollar per box, twenty pounds in the box. Fresh Fish, Hams and Bacon.

Microphones.

It is through the help of the microphone that telephony has become so practical and so extensively adopted. The Blake transmitter, the Ader, and many others by which music and speeches are now conveyed so many miles, are all varieties of the carbon microphone. In some churches, microphone transmitters are now applied to the pulpit, so that the sermon can be transmitted by telephone to invalid members who can not leave home. At the electrical exhibitions of Paris, Vienna and the Crystal palace, the music of an entire opera was transmitted from the stage by wire to other buildings where great numbers of persons sat and listened to it. The transport of music and other sounds in no way directly connected with the wire is frequently effected by what is termed induction, or leading in. Over and over again persons listening at telephones for the purpose of hearing what a friend is saying have heard the strains of this music—aside, communicated by induction from some neighboring line to theirs. Not long ago a telegraph clerk in Chicago who listening in a telephone early one morning, and to his surprise heard the croaking of frogs and the whistling of birds. The explanation of the phenomenon is, that a loose joint in the telephone wire, where it passed through a wood, acted as a microphone, and transmitted the woodlawn chorus to his ears. Messages in process of transmission are sometimes drowned by the rumbling noise of street traffic inducted by the wire.—Chambers' Journal.

The Eastern Trouble.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The Temps says that Russia has decided to recognize the union of Bulgaria and Roumelia, that Germany has offered no opposition to the union, and that Austria makes compensation of Servia and Greece the condition of her assent.

Alexander Popular.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—According to advices from Philippopolis, the report that Russia wishes to dethrone Prince Alexander has greatly angered the Roumelians. The Prince, it is said, was never so popular as he is now. A despatch received in Vienna says that everything is ready for the entry of the King of Servia into Old Servia on the 8th instant. The Servian Government has 80,000 men under arms. It is feared that the King must attempt a coup de main before the Conference is concluded, because the finances of the country are unable to stand the present heavy drain. The people of Greece are sending petitions to King George, asking him to pursue a vigorous policy in connection with the Roumelian revolution.

Movement of Troops.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 2.—An irade has been issued ordering the Turkish troops to mass at Adrianople. Large numbers of Russians are crossing the frontier to join the Bulgarians.

Complications.

NISSA, Oct. 2.—The meeting of the Skuptschina has resulted in Servia demanding an extension of territory. The populace are clamoring for the annexation of Macedonia. It is probable that Servia will speedily seize contiguous territory, thus making more difficult the solution of the Balkan question.

Bismarck's Finger in the Pie.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 2.—The Sultan is receiving counsel from Prince Bismarck respecting the Roumelian question. It is probable he will adopt a policy in harmony with German Chancellor's suggestion.

A Hungarian Bridal Procession.

The bride-mother greeted the little rose bride cordially, and the Count, after speaking with the groom, handed her into his carriage, where she was seated at the right of the bride-mother, the Count sitting opposite to her. She showed some emotion, but bore herself with a simple, graceful dignity which would have done credit to a fine lady. Then began our progress to the church, at the other end of the little town, the bridegroom and bridemaids walking near the Count's carriage. Young beech trees had been cut down and set in the ground, forming an allee of tender green foliage from house to church, through which we passed. At least a thousand people were on foot about us, throwing torpedoes beneath our horses' feet, singing and shouting, and sometimes dancing in couples. I can give you no idea of the noise and confusion and of the discordant music; of the mad plunging of the horses; of the wild capers of the ponies of the banderium; and, but for the continued and smiling complacency of those beside me, I should have experienced terror rather than enjoyment of this very novel and un-American bridal procession.

The Prevalence of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is found to be most prevalent in New York among those who are accustomed to luxury The physicians complain that they never saw more carelessness exhibited in regard to the health of persons than during the past season. The innovations made in the heating of ball-rooms have rendered it almost impossible at times to properly regulate the temperature. Frequently the heat on a particularly cold night would become so unbearable inside the crowded dancing-hall that relief could only be secured by throwing open the windows. This, of course, allowed the wintry draughts to play about the necks and arms of the ladies who wore decollete costumes. In very many cases the deaths of belles of the ball-room have been directly attributed to exposure. The ladies of the present century, the physicians say, are not careful to wrap up thoroughly when they step from the heated hall to the cold coach. A ride of two blocks on a chilly night, attired in a fashionable ball-room costume, with loose wraps, such as society women wear, has often induced an attack which was soon attended with fatal consequences. The society men, too, they say, are extremely careless about their wraps. They seem to dislike the sensible great coat, and as soon as the sun makes its appearance the natty serge must supersede it. The frequent changes in the temperature during a single day make a change from heavy to light clothing particularly dangerous.

The Intricacies of Finance.

Always be careful, my son, says a writer in the Boston Globe, about your making change. Don't be imposed upon. A station agent on the Old Colony the other day refused to take a Canada quarter that I offered him in part payment for my ticket. I had noticed a legend by the window that foreign money was not good; but just before, I had given the cab-driver a bill and he had taken it to the ticket-seller to get it changed, and the ticket-seller had given him the same Canada quarter that I had offered at the window. So you see I had him. He cursed all drummers in a low voice and gave me my ticket.

But always let your independence be tempered with discretion. Down in Bangor once last year the bartender in the hotel gave me back $1.50 or more in Canada money. I objected mildly. He said that Canada money was good anywhere down there, and, what was more, that no guests of the house were expected to carry away any loose change, anyway. That, you see, made it all right.

Look out for the steamboat pursers. I saw a passenger once come to an office window and ask to have a bill broken. The purser was sorry, but he was almost out of small bills, and would "have to give you some silver, sir." And he had the gall to give that stranger two lead-cart-wheel dollars in with the other change! Oh, I tell you, my boy, for elephantine nerve the steamboat purser beats them all, if put to a fair test.

A SOLID LIBERAL PARTY.

The first of a series of district meetings in the Liberal interests in Eastern Ontario was addressed at Almonte on Tuesday by Sir Richard Cartwright and Premier Mowat. The latter, says the Ottawa Free Press, was exceptionally happy in his remarks, and won expressions of golden favor on every hand. Sir Richard Cartwright was forcible as usual, his arraignment of the Dominion Government's misdoings being popular in its form and indisputable in its details. His speech will be interesting as that of the first Federal leader who has spoken since the Young Liberal convention. From his speech it will be seen that there is no substantial difference between the principal planks he presents as those of the Senior Liberal party, and those adopted at Toronto by the Young Liberals. The platform laid down goes far in the direction that the Young Liberals look, and there is little doubt that, in future speeches of Liberal leaders, it will be found that a common basis for united action will be laid down. It is gratifying to learn that the Liberal leaders have arrived at the opinion so long insisted upon by the Liberal press of Eastern Ontario; that it is in this section of the Dominion and in the Province of Quebec that the main strength and assistance should be thrown. The western portion of the Province is so Liberal that, by strengthening its organization, it can look after itself.

BARGAIN AND SALE.

Our "National Policy" is the result of the machinations of a ring of Canadian manufacturers. Sir John purchased his way into power in 1878, as he has bought almost every step of his political advancement. W. H. Howland president of the Manufacturers' Association in 1878, boasted at the Temperance Convention in Toronto, that the ring of which he was ring leader in 1878 sold themselves, their votes and their influence to Sir John, on condition that he give the manufacturers a monopoly, and the result was that the bargain was made and the high taxation tariff was imposed upon the people for the benefit, as was then intended and as the effect has since shown, of manufacturing monopolists at the expense of the taxpayer. The monopolists have reaped and are reaping the profits of their matter of bargain and sale, and the people of Canada are paying higher prices for all they consume, for the sake of enriching a ring of monopolists. Now, Mr. Howland proposes in effect that a ring be formed to make a "dicker" whereby a prohibitory measure may be extracted from Parliament. Public morality has come to a low pass when it is seriously suggested to employ immoral means to promote the success of a moral reform. It was a ring that reinstated Sir John in power and condoned the iniquities of his past career, and placed in his hands the immense possibilities for evil, which he has used to such good advantage since his last lease of power.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We are glad to hear that the health of Hon. C. F. Fraser, Commissioner of Public Works, has so far improved that he will be able to return to his Department in a few days. This will be welcome intelligence to the many friends of the hon. gentleman throughout the Province.

It is reported at Ottawa that the principal object of Sir Charles Tupper's trip to British Columbia is to settle up with his old friend and partner in jobbery, Mr. Onderdonk, who is said to have made enormous ptofits out of contracts improperly awarded to him by Sir Charles. Nothing more likely.

Dr. Edmunds, a London medical officer, now on a visit to this Province, points out that though there are already 35,000,000 inhabitants in Great Britain, the population is increasing at the rate of 1,000 persons a day. The Anglo-Saxon race are very prolific. Dr. Edmunds thinks that emigration must go on increasing, and that the Canadian North-West Territories are best calculated to supply a living to this surplus population. But the newcomers must be prepared for land-sharks and thieves; a very necessary stipulation.

G. A. MITCHELL,
Agent Wheeler & Wilson sewing machines.

G. A. Mitchell, Esq., Peterborough:—

DEAR SIR,—With reference to the special prizes said to have been awarded to the Williams sewing machines at the Central Exhibition this week, I beg to say that "no special prize" for sewing machines was offered by or through the directors, nor did they appoint any judge or judges to award any such prize.

Yours, etc.,
JOHN CARNEGIE,
President.

First Prize Sewing Machines.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—It is currently rumored about Canadian sewing machines at the Peterborough Central Exhibition. Will you kindly give place in your columns to the following letter from Mr. G. Fitzgerald, one of the Directors of the Exhibition, which should finally set at rest the croaking of interested rivals.

Yours truly,
D. SMART.

Peterborough, Oct. 3rd, 1884.

Mr. D. Smart:

DEAR SIR,—In reply to your inquiry, I would say that the special prize given by me at the Central Exhibition for the best Canadian Sewing Machine was awarded by the judges to the Williams Sewing Machine, represented here by you.

Yours truly,
G. FITZGERALD.

The Williams has also taken first prizes this fall at Kingston, Belleville, and Antwerp, Belgium, against all competitors.

Ennismore Crops.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—I have noticed in your two last issues letters from Ennismore correspondents with regard to the average of crops in that township. I am sorry to see their ideas differ so much, but it is very seldom that a small difference like that cannot be settled by calling in a third party. The first estimate was from six to eight bushels per acre, and the second was from twelve to fourteen bushels per acre. Perhaps the first man measured his grain in a willow basket, and it may have leaked out between the willows. Or perhaps the second man understood hand measure better and made larger acres. But if both parties are satisfied, we will split the difference, and call the average from nine to eleven, for six to eight bushels is really too small in a country that is protected by the "National Policy." John A. must have neglected his business in Ennismore last season, or crops would average more than six or eight bushels an acre. Perhaps the North-west Rebellion occupied the most of his spare moments—it is altogether likely they would make more than to be tending crops in Ennismore.

Yours truly,
AN OLD ENNISMORE BOY.

Minnesota, Sept 26, 1885.

Consequences of "Cramming."

The officials reports of recent examinations held in English schools furnish some startling illustrations of the evil effects of the "cramming" system. The information afforded in some of the answers to questions is, to say the least, startling. In one instance the following answer was given to the question, "Who was Moses?" "He lived in a bark maid of bullrushes, and he kept a golden calf and worshipt braizen snakes, and he het notin' but qwhales and manner for forty years. He was kart by the air while running under a bow of a tree, and he was killed by his son Abslon as he was hanging from the bow. His end was peace." Another bright youth gave it as his opinion that "the Treaty of Utrecht was fought between the Zulus and the English." It also came to light that Chaucer wrote "Esop's Fables," Spenser the "Wealth of Nations," and that Swift lived in John's reign and was "a great astronomer and joker." A physiological student informed the examiner that "the upper skin is called the eppederby and the lower skin is called derby," while another enumerated the organs of digestion as "stomach utensils, liver and spleen." The feminine of "beau was said to be "arrow," and that of "German," "Gerwoman." Pontius "Pilot" was also discovered to be one of the Arabian Nights. These are only a few of many ridiculous examples given of the frightful conglomeration of facts which seemed to exist in the minds of many of the children examined.

In a religious paper an English rector has lately given examples of the way in which children in National schools are taught to gabble over the church catechism. One wrote, "To bear no manners or atred in my heart." Another, "To sucker my father, obey the Queen, and all that is put in thority; to submit myself to my governess, teachers, spirit pasters." Another, "Suffered under the Pontius Pilate, was crusified, he descended into heaven." Another, "My duty towards my nabour is to do to no man as I would, and no to obey the Queen," etc. These are samples of fifteen examples of what is called "religious instruction."

The first coin ever issued in this country was the old-fashioned cart-wheel cent. The first issue was in 1793, and there were three dies made. With the single exception of the year 1815 there has been no break in the issue of cents from that time to the present. The labor required to secure a sample of the three varieties of cents made in 1793 is very great, and they bring from $3 to $5 each. The cent of 1794 is a trifle more common and can be bought for about 60 cents, while a sample of the issue of 1795 is worth $1.25. It was in this year that the liberty cap was changed to the fillet head, and these were issued regularly for thirteen years, when the Goddess of Liberty appeared on the face of the coin, with thirteen stars surrounding it. A cent of the issue 1799, in good condition, is worth $40 or $50.

Sermon.

By the Rev. F. H. Wallace, D.D.

Owing to the unusual pressure on our columns, produced by the Scott Act campaign and the Exhibition, the following synopsis of a sermon preached recently by the Pastor of the Charlotte street Church was crowded out:—

The Rev. Mr. Wallace preached from the words in Exodus 23, 30, "By little and little." He said that these words indicated God's general method of work, in all the creation of the world, in the development of human history, in the perfecting of individual life and character. The first verse of Genesis does not reveal the method of creation, which was sketched briefly according to the gradual processes which modern science reveals, from the whirling nebulous mass down to the fair globe, which God, through the uncounted ages prepared for man. Moreover by "little and little" God has DEVELOPED HUMAN HISTORY.

Rome was not built in a day. Civilization has slowly been evolved. Continent after continent has been discovered, and opened for the activities of the higher races. In our own time central Africa, not long ago but a blur upon the map of the world, has yielded its secrets to Speke and Baker, Livingstone and Stanley, and heroic Gordon's death at Khartoum will not be in vain. What we see before us at any particular point, is a world in transition. But as we look backward and forward we learn something of the trend of God's grand purposes, and find ground to hope, that even as the earth came up through the long process of fire, water, upheaval, depression and glacial action into its perfection, so, by the grace of God, the human race will gradually ascend through all its struggles and ordeals, to a higher and a better state. The gradual advance and triumph of temperance principles was cited as in point.

Little by little the world grows strong,
Fighting the battle of right and wrong:
Little by little the wrong gives way,
Little by little the right has sway:
Little by little all longing souls
Struggle up near the shining goals.

The same method of

GRADUAL DEVELOPMENT

is discovered in our individual lives. Knowledge is gained from the A B C up to the highest philosophy, word by word, thought by thought, through patient continuance in study. Character depends upon habits, and they upon the little details of our daily life. "It is but the littleness of man that sees no greatness in a trifle." This point was illustrated by reference to many good and evil habits, and Dr. Johnston was quoted as saying that "the diminutive chains of habit are generally too small to be felt until they are too strong to be broken." As the gorgeous representations of Scriptural scenes whith adorn the domes of St. Mark's at Venice were not executed by a few master strokes of a painter's brush, but by the slow and careful fitting of tiny bits of colored glass, each into its own place in the superb mosaic, so the picture of a true and beautiful Christian character can be perfected only by most careful attention to our daily life, the development of each virtue in its place, and the slow filling out of the outline sketched in holy Scripture. By little and little

CHARACTER IS FORMED.

And so, too, is all good and useful work accomplished. History is not all pitched battles. Life is not all exclamation points. Many a toilsome march precedes the startling victory. Many a long prosaic paragraph of earnest living must be written before the place is reached for the exclamation points. Great men have done great things gradually and patiently.

"As the tiny coral insects by their slow, but constant motion,
Have formed those lovely islands in the distant dark blue ocean;
So the noblest undertakings that man's wisdom has conceived
By oft repeated efforts have been patiently achieved."

Waiting to accomplish much at once, we neglect present opportunities, are not trained for the great efforts when the time for them shall come, and so accomplish nothing. Do not look so far ahead as to overlook those present duties which are the only way to the great future success. "Do the next thing."

In general, the lesson to be learned is one of

PATIENCE AND PERSEVERANCE.

Be careful, for in your Christian path are dangers; be hopeful, for God will deliver you from dangers and drive out your enemies "by little and little." Each victory helps to another. If each generation fights its own battles and does its own work, God will care for the future.

"'Tis weary watching wave by wave,
And yet the tide heaves onward;
We climb like corals, grave by grave,
But pave a path that's sunward

We're beaten back in many a fray;
But never strength we borrow,
And where the vanguard keeps to-day,
The rear shall rest to-morrow."

Lindsay.

Mr. J. C. Gould, of Uxbridge, the contractor for the work, is laying down material for the rebuilding of the locks at this place. The Post says that between $4,000 and $5,000 worth of material will be required.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

[The following correspondence has been unavoidably delayed in publication.]

The picnic which was held here on Tuesday, the 22nd, ult., in aid of St. Mary's R. C. Church, was a decided success. Owing to the threatening appearance of the weather there was not a large number from a distance present. From 10 o'clock a constant stream of vehicles poured into the grounds, and at one o'clock there was very little short of six hundred persons on the grounds. Immediately after dinner the programme of sports and games was commenced and carried out in the following order:

STANDING BROAD JUMP.—1st, M. Collins, 2nd, J. F. Sullivan.

STANDING HIGH JUMP.—1st, M. Collins, 2nd, J. F. Sullivan.

RUNNING HIGH JUMP.—1st, M. Collins, 2nd, Paul Maloney.

RUNNING BROAD JUMP.—1st, M. Collins, 2nd, J. F. Sullivan.

500 YARDS RACE.—1st, Rogers, 2nd, J. F. Sullivan.

200 YARDS RACE (boys under 17).—1st, Wm. A. Fobert, 2nd, H. Kearney.

SINGLE CANOE RACE.—1st, Charles Grylls, silver cup; 2nd, J. Godfrey, $1.50.

For the double canoe race there were no entries.

The last and most amusing part of the programme was a game of football contained by D. Costello and F. Young, which was won by Master Costello's team; prize, box of candies.

In the evening, Mr. Gordon Mowat, at the request of one of the managers of the picnic, delivered a short address against the Scott Act. Splendid music was furnished by Martin's quadrille band, and those who wished to trip the light fantastic had every opportunity to participate in it. Over $300 was realized by the picnic which will be devoted to the building fund for the erection of a house for the parish priest. The following were the general committee: Messrs. P. Young, B. Anglesay, Alex. Kearney, Wm. J. Young, D. Costello, J. Fanning, Thos. Houlihan, Wm. Pope, J. Moloney, Ed. Foley, M. Cliggott, F. J. Young.

Dominion Doings.

In Toronto Edith Hibbert, a domestic, sued Francis Cransberry, a farmer of Georgina, Ont., for false arrest. Plaintiff was imprisoned for an alleged threat to burn defendant's barn if his son Richard, whom she claims seduced her, did not marry her. The jury gave her a verdict for $400 and costs.

Montreal flour merchants will petition the Grand Trunk and C.P.R. authorities to allow 10 days free storage for local breadstuffs, and 60 days for export.

The preliminary investigation in the Kribb's libel case was commenced in Montreal, and adjourned to the 16th inst. It is thought the matter will be amicably settled.

The steamers Quinte and Hero collided at Bath, and the former's steam pipe burst. Her 200 excursion passengers were taken to Kingston by the Hero.

It is said that Louisa McMath, who recently disappeared from her home in Parkdale, Toronto, has been seen in Montreal.

The grand jury for the county of Oxford in their presentment dwelt on the comparative immunity from vice enjoyed by the county since the adoption of the Scott Act a year ago.

Rev. F. J. Ketto, of England, has returned to Montreal from the Northwest, where he visited 60 families sent out by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts They are doing well, and raising good crops.

A Montreal young lady was carrying a pet dog along the streets Friday, when it bit her nose, inflicting a severe wound.

L. A. Senecal has contracted to build a line of railway from the St. Maurice mills to Lake St. John, a distance of 50 miles.

The dwelling of Jacob B. Schmidt, near St. Agatha, Ont., was burned Friday; loss several thousand dollars.

University College, Toronto, and Trinity Medical Schools, and the Women's Medical College, Toronto, opened the session '85-86 Friday. There was a large attendance of students at each institution.

Educational Notes.

Mr. Peter Campbell, M. A., of Toronto, is to be Mr. Dickson's successor as principal of the Hamilton Collegiate Institute. Mr. Ballard retains the inspectorship.

Of the 615 candidates who matriculated in London University in June, 100 were women. One of the latter headed the honor list and three of them received prizes for proficiency.

The highest salary paid to a male teacher in Glengarry county last year was $550, the lowest $180, the average being $336. The average for female teachers was $219. In the county there were 6 brick schoolhouses, 30 frame, and 37 log.

Mr. J. M. Kennedy has retired from the management of the Canada School Journal and Mr. J. L. Robertson has assumed the same. Mr. Robertson is favorably known to the majority of the teachers of Ontario, and in his hands the journal will attain still greater usefulness and influence.

About 30 per cent. of the teachers of Great Britain and Ireland are now furnished with residences free of rent. Next to an increase of salaries nothing tends to the retaining of good men in the profession more than the providing of suitable homes for the teachers. Without these, married teachers will scarcely be found out of the villages, towns and cities.

The science master in the St. Thomas Collegiate Institute met with a peculiar accident last week. While holding a rubbor bag containing oxygen and hydrogen gas in a tub of water, through the carelessness of a student the gas became ignited and an explosion occurred. A part of the bag struck the master on the arm and broke the large bone, as well as dislocating the the wrist joint.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Little Windsor Oysters.

Oysters in all styles and all hours. Try our new dishes. T. Giroux, Little Windsor Hotel.

Attractive Furniture.

A. Clegg's display of Bedroom and Dining-room Furniture during the past week has been the attraction on George street. Something new and elegant in his windows almost every day. He is showing some exceptionally fine Bedroom Suites in Cherry and Walnut.

More Honors for the Bell.

The Bell organ has again come to the fore as a prize winner over all competitors, taking first prize at St. Catherines, Guelph, Almonte, Exeter and New Hamburg Fairs. Mr. D. Smart is the local agent for these organs, which may be seen at his extensive organ, piano and sewing machine warerooms, George street.

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office:—Strong winds and gales from the south, veering to west and north-west, mostly cloudy and showery, followed by cloudy weather to-night or to-morrow.

Death of a Valuable Animal.

The stallion "Colonel T," belonging to Mr. A. B. Appleby, of Cobourg, and which won the second heat of the stallion race at the Central Exhibition, died at the exhibition grounds last night. The cause of death was congestion of the lungs. Mr. Appleby sustains a great loss in the animal, having been offered $1,000 for it at different times.

Market Mems.

The market was not so large this morning as last week. There seemed to be more apples offered for sale than anything else, yet the prices were not very low, from fifty to seventy-five cents a bag being asked for them. Butter went at 20c., eggs at 12c. and chickens for from 35c to 50c. a pair. Potatoes by the bag were selling at fifty cents.

A Wild Race.

Mr. McIntyre of the Oriental is going to have his two running mares, Nancy Lee and Greybird, run a mile in double harness at the driving track this afternoon. They will be hitched to a skeleton waggon and driven by Bob Purcell. A running race in double harness is something of a novelty and an exciting dash may be expected.

Police Court.

Arthur Hyam was brought up on remand at the Police Court this morning on a charge of disturbing the services of the Salvation Army. He pleaded guilty to the charge and promised to be more decorous in the future. Mr. C. W. Sawers, for the complainant, said it was not wished to press for a heavy punishment, and Mr. Dumble inflicted a fine of $1 and costs, or in default ten days imprisonment.

Teachers' Institute.

A Teachers' Institute for the county and town of Peterborough will be held in the Central School on Thursday and Friday, the 22nd and 23rd of October. Mr. Coleman, the president, informs us that already a good and lengthy programme—which will be published shortly—has been secured. Besides local, some of Toronto's best educational talent will take part, and it is to be hoped that the townspeople will evince some interest and lend some encouragement by largely attending the lectures on popular educational subjects, which will be delivered in the evenings.

Range and Rifle.

The annual matches of the County of Peterborough Rifle Association will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 6th and 7th. The list of prizes has been issued, and a total aggregate value of considerably over three hundred dollars in prizes is offered for competition. It is probable that the meeting will be a large and lively one and that keen contests will be made in the various events. The EXAMINER would again suggest, in the interest of improvement in shooting, the presentation of prizes in ammunition. The marksmen who win a butter cooler, or a cradle or pipe may have neither the butter, the baby, nor the habit of smoking; his prize will therefore be of no practical use to him. But if the prize were in the shape of ammunition—say 200 rounds—this he would assuredly use in practice and he would therefore be a much better marksman as the result, and the object of the Association would be better served.

ATHLETICS.

Baseball.

THE PRINTERS CAN'T PLAY.

The boys regret their inability to meet their Lindsay brethren at friendly game of baseball, since their attention is occupied by business from 7 a m. till 6 p.m. they have no available time in which to play such a game. The only time at their disposal is after 6 o'clock, which of course would be too late.

Lacrosse.

THE ONTARIO CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE DECIDED IN PETERBOROUGH.

The Council of the National Lacrosse Association have selected Peterborough as the place at which the four district championship clubs are to play for the championship of the Province. The clubs holding them are:—Southern District, the Athletics, of St. Catherines; Northern District, the Richmond Hills; Central District, Peterboroughs, and Eastern District, the Excelsiors, of Lancaster. The tournament will take place on Wednesday next at the grounds on the Driving Park, and arrangements are in progress to make the event one of the most interesting ever witnessed here. Such a struggle between lacrosse captians may not be witnessed again in Peterborough for many years, and audiences over seen at the new grounds. The Peterboroughs are in training for the event, and may be expected to make a determined effort to win the coveted honor.

Captured at Last.

A hardened and determined offender has, after long setting at defiance all law and order, been captured in flagrante delicto and placed in durance. The cow, which, for several nights past, has been devastating the flower beds in the Court House Park and haunting like a nightmare the usually quiet slumbers of Alick Stewaat, was captured early this morning by P. C. Adams, who, with the relentlessness of a sleuth hound, has been on her track for several evenings. Bossy is now chewing the cud of reflection and awaiting a claimant in the pound, having run up for her owner a bill of $7.50, $5 for damage to the Park and $2.50 for injuries sustained to property under Mr. Stewart's charge.

Dangerous Play.

Two little lads named Tommy Robinson and Walter Wesley were playing near their parents' residences, at the corner of Murray and Bethune Streets last evening, when little Robinson threw a stone at Wesley, inflicting a very serious wound on his head. The services of Dr. King were called in, and five stitches had to be taken in his scalp, and it was feared that the injury might prove fatal. This morning, however, is showing symptoms favorable to recovery, and hopes are entertained that the result of the affair will not prove so serious as was at first anticipated.

Personal.

Mr. J. L. Brydon states that he secured second prize for sewing machines at the Central Exhibition, on his New Improved Raymond.

Mr. E. E. Bowie, of London, formerly of Peterborough, gave us a call to-day. He represents the Jos. Hall Mfg Works, makers of the celebrated "Rubicon" engine, at Oshawa.

Riel's Case in England.

The Privy Council will consider the case of Riel, the Canadian conspirator, in a fortnight.

Lord R. Churchill on Ireland.

DUBLIN, Oct. 2.—Lord Randolph Churchill is at Dublin Castle to-day inquiring into the condition of Ireland and the wants of its people. He will lay the results of his investigation before the Cabinet, and, it is expected, will propose some measures of relief more in consonance with the wishes of the people than have hitherto been adopted.

Doomed to Death.

WELLAND, Oct. 3.—At the Assizes here yesterday John Esterbee, charged with the murder of his brother, was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged Nov. 30th. In this case it will be remembered the prisoner confessed that his brother murdered Leafy, his young wife, and then asked him (John) to finish him (Alexander) if he didn't succeed in killing himself. John did as requested and is now sentenced to be hanged for it.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $130.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can put their logs to their mills. The adjoining lake affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the products of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $3000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to

ATHLETICS.

Montreal A. A. A. Games.

ROBERTSON AND MCTAGGERT TO THE FORE.

The annual athletic games of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association were held on Saturday afternoon, and the many friends made by Messrs. Robertson and McTaggert during their recent visit here will be pleased to se that those gentlemen were, as usual, well to the front.

Throwing 56-lb weight—1, A. J. Queckberner, New York athletic club, 25 ft. 1⅛ in.; 2, G. H. Wood, Shamrock lacrosse club, 20 ft. 6½ in.

100 yards running, in heats—First heat, M. W. Ford, New York A. C., 1; J. S. Robertson, M.A.A.A., 2; time 10 2-5 sec. Second heat, J. S. Robertson, 1; M. W. Ford, 2; time 10 1-5 sec. Final heat—This resulted in a dead heat, and Ford declining to run off, Robertson covered the distance in 12 2-5 sec.

Putting the shot—1, C. A. J. Queckberner, 39 ft. 11½ in.; 2, H. Tracy, Shamrock A.A.A., 36 ft. 2⅝ in.

One mile run—1, J. W. Moffat, M.A.A.A., 4 m. 45 1-5 sec.; 2, S. D. Jones, Shamrock A.A.A., 4 m. 56 sec.

Pole leap—1, J. Wilson, jr., M.A.A.A., 9 ft. 7 in.; 2, D. C. Little, of Trenton, Ont., 9 ft. 4 in.

220 yard run—1, M. W. Ford, New York A. C., 24 3-5 sec.; 2, J. S. Robertson, M.A.A.

220 yards with lacrosse and ball—First heat, W. Hodgson, M.A.A.A., 1; D. Patterson, M.A.A.A., 2; time 28 1-5 sec. Second heat, J. Fraser, 1; M. Scanlan, 2. Final heat, J. Fraser, 1.

Running broad jump—1, M. W. Ford, New York A.C., 19 ft. 11 in.; 2, H. Phillips, Montreal L.C., 19 ft. 6 in.

Three mile bicycle race (handicap)—1, N. L. Lusher, 12 min.; 2, H. M. Ramsay, 12 min. 35 secs.

Running high jump—1, M. W. Ford, N.Y. A.C., 5 ft. 4½ in.; 2, D. C. Little, of Trenton, Ont. Both men failed at 5 ft. 4½ in., and they decided to take first and second place by tossing rather than continue jumping. Ford won the toss and took first place.

Two mile run—1, D. D. McTaggart, M.A.A., 10 min. 22 sec.; 2, S. D. Jones, Shamrock A.A.A., 10 min. 59½ sec.

440 yards run—1, J. S. Robertson, M.A.A.A., 53 1-5 sec.; 2, A. A. Burnhart, Capital lacrosse club, Ottawa, 56 1-5 sec.

880 yards run—1, J. W. Moffat, M.A.A., 2 min. 5 4-5 sec.; 2, A. A. Burnhart, C.L.C., Ottawa.

120 yards hurdle race—W. Hodgson, M. A.A.A., 1, time 20 sec.; 2, H. Phillips, Montreal lacrosse club.

The time made was better that at the New York games, but still the 440 yards was but the fraction of a second faster than George Orde's at our own sports, and the hurdle race was run in exactly the same time as here. George hadn't better give up running yet, his friends want to see him downing some of the champions next year.

Lacrosse.

THE ONTARIO CHAMPIONSHIP.

There seems likely to be some difficulty in getting together the clubs to play for the championship on Wednesday. The Athletics of St. Catherines have telegraphed Mr. H. LeBrun saying that they cannot by any possibility get a team together on that day. The Richmond Hills don't want to play at Peterborough, and would prefer Toronto, very reasonable of them when it is known the Lancaster Excelsiors would have to come from the extreme eastern boundary of the Province, while the Richmond Hill men might walk to Toronto and back without hurting themselves. They want $100 to play in Peterborough, and profess their willingness to pay that amount if the game is played at Richmond Hill. It seems almost certain that the games cannot now be played on Wednesday as had been arranged.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

How it Occurred.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—You will oblige me by inserting the following in the next issue of the EXAMINER:

In filling out the official return of votes polled for and against the Scott Act, in polling sub-division No. 1, Eanismore, through a mistake, I placed sixty-nine for petition, and nine against, whereas it should have been nine for and sixty-nine against.

I remain yours, etc.,
J. F. SULLIVAN,
Deputy-returning officer for polling sub-division No. 1.
Eanismore, Oct. 3rd, 1885.

[The matter referred to in the above letter hardly required explanation. The published returns showed that a mere clerical error had been made, and as nobody was misled, there was no harm done.—ED. EXAMINER.]

Light Wanted.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—A great deal of comment has been made upon the fact that the complimentary tickets for the recent exhibition, instead of, as in previous years, being issued by the secretary and bearing his signature, were this year issued by Mr. Carnegie, and bore on the back of them:

"COMPLIMENTS OF J. CARNEGIE, M.P.P."

The question is very naturally asked, what J. Carnegie, M.P.P., has to do with the tickets in his official capacity, and the opinion is very freely expressed that Mr. Carnegie's action was most improper and altogether without precedent. People who look away ahead are inquiring if the coming election affords any explanation of the matter.

Yours truly,
AN INQUIRER.
Peterborough, Oct. 5th, 1885.

The Lane Brothers.

The Lane Brothers will make their debut at the Lansdowne Rink this evening, and, judging from the opinions expressed of their performances in other places, they are marvellously expert bicyclists and skaters and well worth seeing.

St. Luke's, Ashburnham.

The Temperance Society in connection with this church purpose holding their annual meeting to-morrow, Oct. 6th, in St. Luke's Church, at 7.30 p. m. There will be a devotional service, with an address from the Rev. John Farncomb, after which the election of officers and reading of reports, &c., will follow. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the temperance work.

Steamboat Movements.

Mr. Harry Calcutt's steamer Golden Eye was laid up for the season the other day in Little Lake, partially aground. The water being let on from the back lakes suddenly, and the steamer listing over, she was partially swamped. She has now been pumped out, and is again high and dry. The Whistle-Wing came in again to day with another scow load of that famous hard wood that is having such a run just now.

Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 3.—Whilst two young men named Brousea and Polton were wrestling yesterday the latter was accidentally thrown through a plate-glass window, and sustained cuts of a very serious character.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable", or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

GEORGE STETHEM.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brands of cigars which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and yet allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pays them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby. 13d-25w.

IN POSSESSION OF HERAT.

England Reported to Have Forestalled Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 4.—A despatch to the Novoe Vremya from Askabad, dated Friday, says: "The English have taken entire possession of Herat and have ordered the inhabitants to quit the town immediately. The inhabitants, angered by the action of the English, have thrown up earthworks opposite the citadel. The English are being strongly reinforced." This despatch is said to be exaggerated.

The Eastern Problem.

The Greek on the Move.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Intelligence has reached Paris that Austria has resolved to move two army corps into Bosina.

Austria on the Alert.

The Greek Government is resolved on effecting an armed intervention if Europe sanctions the union of the two Bulgarias. It is calculated that 23,000 men will soon be concentrated on the Hellenic frontier, without including the reserves sent to Larissa and Arta. At the re-opening of the Chamber the Government will propose the mobilization of two other classes of reserves. Ammunition and provisions are being sent constantly to the frontier. Admiral Kanaris will assume command of the fleet.

Restless Ireland.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A special cable says the Irish situation is assuming such a grave aspect on account of continued violent boycottiug outrages, that the English papers have begun to suggest that the next parliament shall treat Ireland as a revolted province and deny her representation.

Shocking Accident.

PETROLIA, Oct. 3.—A shocking accident occurred here to-day. Miss Alice Heywood was going for a pail of water, and had to cross some machinery that was used in jerking oil wells. Her clothes came in contact with a revolving wheel, which completely wound her around and severed her arms from her body. The poor girl lingered for about two hours in intense pain, and then death came to her relief. She was to have been married on Thursday.

All's Well That Ends Well.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—Germany has acknowledged Spain's claim to the occupation of Yap. In return Spain has granted Germany free navigation of the waters in and around the Caroline Islands, with free commerce with the inhabitants and the right of having a coaling station on one of the islands. The meditation of the Pope is now unnecessary, as the affair has been settled to the satisfaction of both powers.

A Woman's Monstrous Crime.

A Mother Roasts Her Illegitimate Child.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—An unmarried woman named Paquette, of about 19 years of age, and who resides on Clarence street, was arrested this morning charged with the cruel and diabolical crime of burning to death her own infant, a male child, one day old. Yesterday she gave birth to to an illegitimate child, and, in order to get rid of the fruit of her own folly and wickedness, placed the child in a cooking stove this morning and baked it to death. The police were notified of the dreadful affair and arrested the woman. She is thought to be insane. An inquest will be held to-night.

No Time Like the Present.

An Alleged Letter From Sir John Macdonald to a Friend in Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 3.—A special correspondent of the New York Herald says that Sir John Macdonald, Premier of the Dominion, in a letter to a friend here, speaking of the fate of Riel, says it depends entirely on the Privy Council of England. If that body decides in favor of Riel, his sentence cannot be carried out, but if, as Sir John expects, it upholds the sentence, Canadian sentiment will not reprieve him and he will hang. Sir John also says that if the French-Canadians carry out their threat of rebellion if Riel is hung, the English-speaking people of the Dominion must meet them in arms. If this is to take place and there is to be a war of races, no time is better than the present, and Sir John trusts that the 90th Rifles and Winnipeg Light Infantry and other Manitoba regiments will be ready to go to Ontario or anywhere else they may be ordered and do their duty as faithfully as they have done in the past.

Montreal's Malady.

Nearly 1,000 Deaths in September.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—There were rumors to-day of a serious outbreak last evening. Placards were posted at Mile End, which is near the new hospital, reading, "Down with tyranny!" The Mayor called out again all the volunteer forces and published in the evening papers a card asking all law-abiding citizens to endeavor to prevent a collision with the authorities. These precautions had the desired effect, and everything was quiet. One hundred and seventy-five men of the Victoria Rifles were on duty all night at the new hospital on the exhibition grounds. B battery, of Quebec, has been ordered ready for service at Montreal at a moment's notice.

The health office yesterday reported 73 new cases of small-pox, of which 45 were verified. Fifty-nine deaths were reported.

The deaths for the week ending Friday night in the city were 321, Monday being the highest with 62. In the district for the same time the deaths were 80.

There is a great complaint against doctors charging $3 for vaccinating.

During the month of September 996 deaths were recorded.

Two girls badly pock-marked were walking along Dorchester street and two sons of T. S. Vipond, aged 8 and 9, made way for them to pass. One of the girls seized the youngest lad and rubbing her face against his cried, "picotte, picotte," (smallpox).

The returns of emigration from Germany for eight months show a decrease of 30,000 as compared with 1884.

MONDAY, OCT. 5, 1885.

LORD SHAFTESBURY.

On the first of this month, the noble Earl, whose name stands at the head of this article, passed over to the great majority. At the time of his death he was eighty-four years of age, having been born on the 28th of April, 1881.

The life of this esteemed nobleman, for more than half a century, touches the religious history of England at nearly every point. In all schemes of practical philanthropy he was an aknowledged leader and promoter, and by his unflinching courage, wide toleration and surpassing energy, he was enabled to accomplish great things in the cause of social reform.

The deceased Earl received his university education at Christ Church, Oxford. Before he was twenty-five years of age he was returned to Parliament as member for Woodstock, and was an active supporter of Lords Liverpool and Canning.

In 1830 he was returned for Dorchester, and in the year following for Dorsetshire, which county he represented till the year 1846. He was then known as Lord Ashley, but on his father's death in this year, he assumed the title and took his seat in the Upper House.

From the very commencement of his career his interest in the social welfare of his countrymen was of the warmest and most disinterested nature. One of the first things he took up with characteristic vigour was the cause of the factory children, and so well did he champion their interests, that all England was carried as by storm, and the nation's demand for justice to the little ones was uttered with such force that it was simply irresistible.

For ten long years he gave his time and energy in the attempt to have the hours of labor reduced. His efforts were opposed by leading statesmen, manufacturers and capitalists, as well as by successive governments. But the noble and philanthropic Earl adhered firmly to his project through good report and evil, and fought strenuously for the measure till victory was gained. In 1840 the limit of ten hours labour was practically accepted as a principle by the English Parliament.

He next succeeded in getting a Royal commission appointed to enquire into the employment of children in mines and collieries. The state of affairs they found was most disgraceful and degrading. Women suffered perhaps most of all, but children of only four or five years of age were made to toil in the mines! The result again was that the country was roused, and a bill soon passed prohibiting females from working underground, and specifying the ages at which boys should be permitted to be so employed. His efforts in that glorious warfare for suffering humanity made Lord Shaftesbury's name a household word throughout the nations of the East.

In one of the rooms of his costly mansion in Dorset, stands a bust of the Earl, presented to the Countess in 1859. It was a tribute from the working people of the north country, and upon it were engraved these words:—"Presented to Emily, wife of the seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, by the operators of the manufacturing districts of the North of England, as a token of their esteem and regard for the persevering and successful efforts of her noble husband in promoting, by legislative enactment, a limitation of the hours of labour of children, females and young persons employed in mills and factories." On the occasion of this presentation there were 7,000 persons present, and each of them demanded the liberty of kissing the hand of their benefactor! By such sympathy and attention the Earl of Shaftesbury gained his right to be justly called, "The poor man's friend."

Through his persevering efforts and noble liberality the Ragged School Union was established in the great metropolis. Through its agency more than 200,000 children, we are told, have been rescued from vicious associations and placed in the way of gaining an honest livelihood. To enumerate the societies and institutions of all kinds with which Lord Shaftesbury was connected, is simply impossible. No name was so sought after to preside at May meetings. In fact to honor him and speak well of his goodness was a matter of pride with every true Englishman. Two years ago London presented him with the freedom of the city in a gold casket, and in doing so honored herself no less than the recipient. His estate produced an annual rental of $80,000, and a very large proportion of it was expended in charity and in the social elevation of the poor and needy.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent,)

[This letter arrived too late for our last weekly issue.]

Summer weather, and hot at that. Thermometer 85 to 90 in the shade.

We very much regret that through hurry and press of business we overlooked in our last week's items the death of the late Mrs. Jas. Lang, sr.

Scott Act election excitement, which ran pretty high last week, has settled quietly down and affairs are moving on smoothly as heretofore. The only one whose head seems to be off the balance, judging from his last week's production, is the Keene correspondent of the Hastings Star. There is considerable talk about the rumored threat to annul the election, but the general feeling is against such a step. Even some of those who did not support the petition declare that if it is annulled they will turn round and support the Act, and the general opinion here is that if the petition comes up again it will be carried by a majority of at least one thousand.

The old Presbyterian Church has been purchased by Geo. Read Esq., and moved across the street westward, upon a lot of Mr. Read's, to be fitted up, we understand, as two dwellings. Mr. Archibald McIntyre had the contract of moving it, which he accomplished in his usual workmanlike manner.

We have had no frosts yet in this immediate locality, at least none sufficiently severe to injure garden stuff.

Some fields of oats are still standing uncut, but the present delightful weather seems to warrant their safe garnering.

Gardens this year have yielded abundantly and fruits are plentiful. Tomatoes and cabbage are, however, an exception to the general rule, the first being late, and the second like "Tom Dunse and his family," poorly headed.

We understand that the firm of Campbell & McNeil intend putting up a large shed in front of their place of business for the accommodation of the public.

Mr. Thompson McDonald, of Asphodel, and Miss Annie Short, of Otonabee, passed over from the lone regions of single blessedness to the green fields of matrimonial companionship last Wednesday, Sept. 23rd. They were helped across by the Rev. Francis Andrews, of Keene. May long life and happiness be their portion.

Mrs. Dr. McCrea and Miss Nellie Green and little sister Blanche, all of Campbellford, paid our picturesque little town a visit last week.

Benjamin Hopkins, Esq., of Percy, is also on a visit to old friends here. We regret to learn that Mr. Hopkins has lately lost two grandchildren by whooping cough; one was six months and the other two and a half years old.

It is also with regret that we learn of the untimely death, last week, of the infant daughter of the Rev. F. Andrews. The child, since the death of its mother, has been in the care of its aunt, Mrs. Porter, of Otonabee, and no doubt she, too, will sadly miss the little form and face.

Both Went Back.

Several years ago, there lived in Dardanelle, Arkansas, an eccentric hotel keeper known as—well, say Uncle John. He was violently opposed to the title of governor, declaring that he once knew of a gang of thieves whose pass-word was governor; and on many an occasion guests who thoughtlessly gave him the title, were driven from the house. Commercial travelers "put up" at his hotel. Those who were acquainted with his peculiarities took great delight in assuring drummers who had never before visited the town, that by calling the old man governor, special attentions would be paid. One day Harry Collins, a young drummer for a New York house, decided to visit Dardanelle.

"By all means stop with uncle John Pash," said a companion. "He is the best feeder in the country; and—say, call him governor and he will nearly kill himself waiting on you."

When Collins arrived he was received with a welcome that was delightful to contemplate, and during the course of affable conversation, Collins remarked:

"By the way, governor, how are—"

The old fellow became furious. He had been teased several times that day, and he knew that the title was intended to be an insult. The drummer became angry and swore that he would not stand such abuse.

"Come out here," said the old man. Collins followed and was conducted to the bank of the river, not far away.

"Now," exclaimed the old man, drawing a revolver, "we'll settle this thing. Two of us came down here. Only one of us will go back."

The drummer took out a pistol, half as long as his arm, and remarked:

"I'm going back."

"Well," said the old man, returning his own pistol, and eying the one held by Collins, "I reckon that under the circumstances we'd both better go back."—Arkansaw Traveler.

How He Outlived His Family.

A Boston merchant who lived and died on Sumner street was a curious instance of one who was an invalid from childhood, who never imagined himself ill when he was not, nor exaggerated his actual illness, nor feared unduly sickness, or pain, or death itself. But it was the business of his life to take care of his health, and he devoted himself to this work with a wonderful assiduity. He rode just so far each day, when the weather was fair, and at such an hour. He had a great variety of clothing, which he regulated with precision by the thermometer, sometimes changing his dress many times in a day, and selected for his overclothes when he rode out the very garments which the mercury indicated. He had a weathercock put upon his stable, within fair view from his bedroom and sitting-room, and that, and his thermometer, and all possible and impossible signs of the weather he was watching constantly, and found in these occupations a very agreeable way of employing all his day and all his days. How far his long life is to be attributed to this excessive care it is impossible to tell; but he outlived every brother and sister, every brother's wife and every sister's husband, and his own wife, who died in 1837 at the age of 81.—Every Other Saturday.

The Apology.

Your coming in last night, my love,
Was something sudden. I was helping Nell
To tie the ribbons of her rigolette;
She put the crimson of her mouth up—well,
I'm flesh and blood, and then you, singing, came Into the room, and tossed your head for shame.

I saw a sort of maiden northern lights
Shoot up your cheeks and tremble in your eyes;
I like such things. I like to see the wind
Drive frightened clouds across tempestuous skies;
I like the sea, and when it's easily had,
A very pretty woman very mad!

I like the dangerous and regal air
(You bear a queen's name, and a queen you are)
With which you donned your thibet opera-cloak,
And clasped it with a diamond like a star;
'Twas charming in my mistress. But, my life,
It would not be so charming in my wife.

I like wild things, as I have said, but then
I should not like to own them. Who would be Proprietor of earthquakes, or loose hurricanes,
Or comets plunging in celestial sea?
Or wed a maid that could, if she should please,
Give him a touch of one and all of these?

Not I. Don't let a female thunderstorm
Brood in your eyes, with every now and then
A flash of angry lightning. You have had Your March and April, now be June again;
And let your fine-cut eye-brows' silken span
Be bows of promise to your favorite man!

I've had my laugh, and you your pout, and now
(You'll spoil that rose-bud if you twist it so)
Give me both hands, that I may say "Good Bess,
The good Queen Bess." and kiss you ere I go—
The good Queen Bess, whose heart and mind and face
Teach me to love all women—as a race!

So when I kissed your pretty cousin Nell,
I honored one who taught me to admire
Fair women in their twenties—don't you see?
But then, dear Bess, as I was standing by her,
Her lips quite close—now this is entre nous—
Upon my soul, I made believe 'twas you!

The Manner of Custer's Death.

Colonel Beck, who shows conclusively that he was a prisoner among the Indians who captured and murdered Gen. Custer and his small body, Beck having been taking captive by Sitting Bull the year previous, gives an entirely new account of the manner of the gallant hero's death. Colonel Beck's story is that he, Beck, was among the band, was dressed in Indian attire, but had no hand in the massacre. He says General Custer was slain by Rain-in-the-Face, and was one of the last men killed. Rain-in-the-Face reached Custer's side and begged him to surrender. Custer refusing, Rain-in-the-Face, pointing to Custer's dead comrades, said: "See your men lying there all killed. You must surrender or die; give me your arms." Custer, Beck says, drew his sword with a sudden flash, hissing between his teeth: "I will never surrender to such a —— as you." As the brave general raised his weapon to strike, a ball from Rain-in-the-Face's revolver crashed through his forehead and he fell dead.

"Smith's Hotel.

Gen. Scott used to narrate how, on his return from the northern frontier, he traveled from Philadelphia to Baltimore in a stage-coach with a gentleman from the latter city whom he had met before. As they drew near the end of their journey, Gen. Scott asked Smith who kept the best hotel in Baltimore. "I do," said Smith. "I was not aware," said the general "that you had gone into the hotel business." "Yes," rejoined Smith, "I've been in it for some time, and I can promise you as good a table and as comfortable rooms as any hotel in Baltimore." So the general decided to go to Smith's hotel, where, soon after his arrival, he discovered his mistake, and found himself the honored guest of Mr. Smith's hospitable private mansion, one of the most elegant in the city. Naturally he was much embarrassed, but he was made to feel at ease by his host, and when he subsequently visited Baltimore he used to go to "Smith's hotel" in preference to the noted caravanseries kept by Barnum and by Guy.—Bess Perley Poore.

Street Cars in Mexico.

The street cars are run in trains in Mexico. Instead of leaving the terminus one car each ten minutes, three cars are sent together every half hour. This is not a measure of economy, for each car has two mules attached, and although they are never more than half a block apart there are alwaws two conductors beside the driver. One conductor takes the money and gives you a ticket, and the other comes around, punches it in the presence of the passenger and then puts it in his pocket. They are supposed to be a check upon each other. The street car drivers always carry with them a horn, and blow it as they approach a street crossing, so that there is a perpetual tooting going on. The conductors usually carry revolvers. I don't know why, except that it is the fashion, for a Mexican would as soon go out of doors without his hat as without his revolver. He does not feel dressed.—City of Mexico Letter.

The Intuitional Sense in Women.

The wit of women has been praised, but her instincts are quicker and keener than her reason. Counsel with your wife, or your mother or sister, and be assured that light will flash upon your darkness. Women are too commonly adjudged as verdant in all but purely womanish affairs. No philosophical student of the sex thus adjudges them. Their intuition, or insight, is the most subtle, and if they cannot see a cat in the meal, there is no cat there. In counseling one to tell his trouble to his wife, we would go further, and advise him to keep none of his affairs secret from her. Many a home has been happily saved, and many a fortune relieved by man's full confidence in his better half. Woman is far more a seer and prophet than man if she be given a ——.—Maria Morrow

Prob's Weather Promises.

The following forecast of the weather for this district for the 24 hours from 1 a. m. to-day is received from the Toronto Meterological office:—Fresh to strong west and north winds; partly cloudy cold weather with a few local showers or snow flurries.

A Prospective Musical Treat.

The following circular, neatly printed in script type, is being distributed among the musically inclined ladies of the town:—

PETERBOROUGH, Oct. 1st, 1885.

Dear Madame:

The officers and members of Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, I. O. O. F., propose rendering before our citizens, at an early date, the Cantata "Daniel." They have secured the able leadership of Prof. Miller, to take charge of the preparation thereof, who will be assisted by myself.

We extend an invitation to you to attend a meeting to be held in the beautiful room of the above lodge, situated on George street, over Dolan & Co.'s dry goods store, next Tuesday evening, the 6th inst., at 8 o'clock, with the hope that you will assist us. Trusting that you will favor us with your presence,

I am yours, &c.,
WM. CLUXTON.

A Robin and a Lark.

The following note, which was found attached to the neck of a robin, knocked over by a boy in the yard adjoining Hefferman's blacksmith shop, has been handed to Chief Johnston:—

Anyone finding this please come at once to the old quarry, where I am lying wounded by robbers.

JOHN A. MCDONALD,
DENNIS RYAN.

It is not known whether the feathered bearer of the appeal was a cock robin or not, but the story is evidently of the cock and bull order, and the note was no doubt fastened to the robin's neck for a lark. The matter has, with much propriety been placed in the hands of P. C. Pidgeon, who may be presumed by his name to know something about this method of carrying news.

"Another Exhibition."

Rev. I. Tovell, as announced, preached last evening on "Another Exhibition," taking as his text the 2nd chapter ii. Timothy, and the 15th verse: "Study to show thyself approved unto God." The reverend gentleman compared the Christian life to an exhibition in which all strove for a prize, but while all could not be prize winners in the exhibition, everyone who showed themselves approved unto God could. In the course of the sermon he told how he had watched the prizes being awarded to the successful animals, and witnessed from the grand stand the contest between the horses for the palm in speed; and showed very plainly that while keenly observant of all that is going on around him, he is ever ready to point a moral, even by the result of a horse race. The sermon was a capital one, and was heard with deep interest by all present.

The Telephone.

The Lakefield agency of the Bell Telephone has the following subscribers:—R. Graham & Son, merchants; R. & G. Strickland, office; W. H. Casement, merchant; Grand Trunk, station; J. Hull's flour mill, R. C. Strickland, residence; J. Henderson, drug store; John R. Rodgers, livery and T. J. Bird, drug store. Mr. Bird, the agent, says that considerable business communication is being transmitted over the wires, and that there are good prospects of an increase in the number of telephones used in the village. Lakefield is a live little village, and if the river between here and there is made navigable, by the carrying out of the Trent Valley Navigation Scheme, the beautiful drive along the river would be flanked by a continuous stretch of residences. If the road between here and Lakefield were better made this would be a most popular and pleasant drive.

We would Like to Know

If there was really any bribery on behalf of the Scott Act.

If the "Professor" thinks the Anti-Scott Act party will adopt the platform of the Liberal Temperance Union if they succeed in upsetting the vote.

If some of the good people of George street church won't be shocked to think their pastor actually witnessed a wicked horse race.

What is the matter with the clerk of the weather.

If the promoters of the "Daniel" cantata thought they were going to keep it dark.

If there are any whiskey detectives in town.

And who sent them here.

What they are Saying.

Nancy Lee and Greybird are the fastest running team in town.—Jim McIntyre.

And we are the fastest driving team.—The two Bobs.

We won't play in Peterborough unless we get $100.—Richmond Hill lacrosse team.

And we can't play at all.—The Athletics, of Toronto.

Where is Richmond Hill, anyway.—The Peterboroughs.

I'm going to help to upset the Scott Act vote.—The student "Professor."

Oh! let me in.—The smallpox.

Not if I know it.—Dr. Clarke.

Did you see the snow this morning.—Early risers.

Perhaps you can understand now why we called a meeting for Thursday night.—Devotees of "the roarin' game."

Couldn't get a horn anywhere yesterday.—The boys.

What We May Expect.

The Peterboroughs to have to go west if they want to play for the lacrosse championship.

A lively demand for overcoats and coal stoves.

Hardware men to lay in a stock of curling stones and skates.

The riflemen to have a cool time to-morrow.

A performance of the cantata "Daniel."

Joe Murphy and the Shaughraun.

Justice O'Connor, Toronto counsel, and the Assizes.

Jim Hughes to come down from Toronto to give our teachers a wrinkle or two.

President Carnegie to admit that there was a special prize for Canadian sewing machines after all.

And that D. Smart got it for his "New Williams."

Mr. Horning to hand in his resignation to the Board of Education to-morrow evening.

That Ordnance Shift.

In the special shifting ordnance competition at Toronto the contingent from the Durham Field Battery, composed largely of Peterborough boys, took a very creditable position. Kingston led with 2 minutes and 2 seconds, Ottawa followed with 2 minutes and 22 seconds and the Durham battery with 2 minutes and 24 seconds. It must be borne in mind that the Durham boys performed their shift under very disadvantageous conditions. In the midst of the shift, for some reason or other the word "halt" was given, and in the delay, on resuming, necessary to bring the squad up to the point and spirit they had reached and worked up, on quitting, necessarily proved a great delay. With an uninterrupted trial there is no doubt that the Durham boys would have stood close to, if not at the, head of the list.

A Fast Ride.

Mr. J. F. McIntyre of the Oriental Hotel takes great pride in his two fine running mares, Nancy Lee and Greybird, and having a desire to see what time they could make running together in double harness, arranged to have them run a half mile heat at the driving park on Saturday afternoon. No owner of a skeleton waggon could be found venturesome enough to lend it for the purpose, all stating their belief that the experiment would be sure to end in a smash up. Mac. however, knew better, and at 5 o'clock sharp the little gathering who had assembled to witness the run, had the satisfaction of seeing the mares, hitched to a light buggy, driven on to the track by Bob Purcell. They evidently knew what was expected of them, for they were champing and tugging at the bit in a way that showed their impatience to be off, and gave Purcell all he could do to hold them in. On the arrival of a little party from the Oriental the team were driven a few yards back from the wire, and went off and under it with a furious rush. Purcell held them well in hand, and made the circuit of the track in 1.07 sec. On crossing the half mile mark he endeavoured to bring them to a stand, but could only get them down to a trot, and continuing their way around the track a second time, they tugged at the reins and showed such a desire to have another mad dash, that Purcell, tiring of holding them, just ran them up against the fence and got out o the buggy and rested them a few minutes. After this had been done he drove round to the starting point again, and here his place was taken by Bob White, jr., and preparations made for another heat. Bob gathered up the lines and, driving under the wire, let the gallant mares out again, and away they went at a mad pace. Round the track they careered, with outstretched necks and ears laid back, till spectators began to think that Bob must have lost control over them and that it was a genuine run away. In this they were mistaken, for, coming round the home turn it could be seen that Bob had them well in hand, and responding to a light touch of the whip, they dashed in this time in 1 min. 4 sec. The team was hitched a little too close to the buggy and struck the wheels with their hoofs, or the time would have been even faster The two heats by no means exhausted the running powers of the mares, for coming home it was all the combined strength of White and Purcell could do to hold them back. Mac. believes they can, if properly hitched, run the half-mile in less than a minute, and any one who saw them run on Saturday will believe it, too There are not many men, however, beside Bob White or Purcell, who are ambitious to drive them.

Personal.

Mr. L. E. Horning, mathematical master of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, has been offered and has accepted the position of head master of the Norwood High School, subject, of course, to the approval of the Peterborough Board of Education.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1300.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can get their logs to their mills; the capacious mill affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $500.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to

ATHLETICS.

Lacrosse.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF ONTARIO TO BE PLAYED FOR IN PETERBOROUGH AFTER ALL.

The Athletic Lacrosse Club, of St. Catherines, having declared their inability to get a team together to play for the championship of Ontario next Wednesday, and the Lancasters not caring to come so far, the honor lies between the home twelve and the Richmond Hills. The latter club at first declined to come here and play, but have now altered their mind. Mr. Lefroy is in receipt of a telegram from them in which they say they will be here to-morrw. The Richmond Hills have amply proved themselves the strongest junior team in the northern and western districts, and the game between our own boys and them will be a cracker It will, of course be played on the grounds at the Driving Park, and as it will without doubt be the best game ever played here a large attendance is expected. The ball will be faced at 2.30.

ORILLIA PROTESTS.

The Orillia Lacrosse Club, who had challenged for the Central District championship, but whose challenge was too late in the season, have entered a protest with N.A.L.A.

HUNDRED-MILE BICYCLE RACE.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 5.—The start in the 100 mile road race of the Boston bicycle club was made this morning by five riders, whose time on the completion of 50 miles was as follows: Geo. Weber, New Jersey, 3 hrs. 10 min. 30 sec.; F. T. Ives, Meriden, 3 hrs. 11 min. 15 sec.; D. A. McCurdy, Lynn, 3 hrs. 15 min.; W. A. Rhodes, Dorchester, 3 hrs. 36 min.; T. Rothe, Cambridge, 3 hrs. 41 min.

The race was won by George Weber in six hours and 57 minutes, beating the world's record by fourteen minutes, and the best American record by one hour and 20 minutes Ives came in second in seven hours 5 min. 10 secs.; McCurdy third, 5 seconds later.

Board of Education.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Board of Education will be held in the Central School Buildings to-night at 7:45 o'clock.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held in the Curler's rooms, at the rink, Charlotte street, on Thursday evening next, October 8th. A full attendance of members is particularly requested, as the transaction of important business will require attention.

Town Buildings.

Mr. T. Rutherford, contractor for the renovation and conversion of the old Bank of Toronto buildings, Simcoe street, into suitable premises for town offices, lock up, etc., is getting on well with the work. The brickwork, raising the building, is completed, and the plates are laid ready for the mansard roof that is to crown the pile. The tenants are flitting and work on re-constructing the internal economy of the building will soon be begun. The town solicitor still holds the fort and is kept busy making verbal caveats, to restrain workmen for invading his offices with vagrant bricks. We may expect our city fathers to give a grand house-warming on occupying their new premises, when our new mayor will be just ready to head the fun.

What We May Expect.

A crowd to attend the Lansdowne to see the Lane brothers this evening.

The riflemen to come home shivering to-night.

Large numbers of young men to avail themselves of the night course at Peterborough Business College.

The Richmond Hill lacrosse club, champions of the west.

North-west winds, general fair weather; not much change in temperature.

What they are Saying.

You may say that I am not going to run for the mayoralty next year.—Mayor Cox.

I want the G.T.R. to keep Bethune street crossing clear.—Tommy Beavis.

We will play for the championship at Peterborough to-morrow.—The Richmond Hill Lacrosse Club.

I don't know how we'er going to scare up a team to meet them.—Geo. Giroux.

I'm a victim of eviction.—C. A. Weller.

Same here.—Town Solicitor Edwards.

Can't be helped, gentlemen, the town wants the building and you've got to go.—Contractor Tom Rutherford.

We would Like to Know

Who will be Mayor of Peterborough for 1886.

And if the defeated candidate of 1884 will have another try.

Whose fault it is that the railway crossings are not kept ylear.

And how the nuisance can be abated.

Whether the new exemption by-law will be brought up at the Council meeting on Friday.

And what it will be like.

When the Town Council will meet for the first time in the new chamber.

And if Tommy Beavis will keep the new offices as clean as he does the old ones.

Heap's Patent Earth Closets. A. Clegg, Agent.

Autumn Millinery.

Opening of Messrs W. Fairweather & Co.'s Show Rooms.

When autumn leaves begin to fall, and swallows southward fly, the gentle fair sex make a call for cash, wherewith to buy bonnets and mantles. Then 'tis, too, that millinery stocks are ope'd to view. Each merchant, with his fellow vies to gain the approval of the ladies' eyes, and, spreading forth his beauteous wares, to meet his autumn customers prepares. The firm of Wm. Fairweather & Co., whose fame the ladies all should know, to-day their spacious doors have opened wide to meet the ever-rushing tide of ladies young, and spinsters aged, wives, widows, mothers, girls engaged; all rushing there with one intent, on hats and new designs in bonnets bent. Their stock [illegible] the latest fashions that have been devised. Rich plush, rare silks of every hue; velvets and satins meet the view. But, oh! those bonnets, words can ne'er express their wondrous beauty, for they're nothing less than ducks, a word the ladies use when trying to express their views. In shapes you'll find the tall brigand, with ostrich tip, and circled by a band; beef eaters broad and turbans small, and horseshoe bonnets best of all.

Of colors, those which most are seen are myrtle, bronze, dark shades of green and purple, black and silver gray, varied by others still more gay. For trimmings, ribbon will be largely sought, of pearl edged silk and satin, wrought in tasty bows: and bright aigrettes are still among the ladies pets. The ostrich, awkward monarch of the plain, his feathers lends to deck the vain, and many a bird of plumage gay is used for trimming hats to day. In short, no stock is more complete than in these show rooms you will meet; there courteous clerks and ladies stand to meet each customer's demand, and all who call are sure to find both goods and prices to their mind.

A Polite Notification.

Grape thieves abound these days, or rather nights, and in the morning, many a grape grower rises to find his vines robbed of their empurpled fruit. Mr. Wm. Lech is the last victim, and he politely requests those two boys who stole the grapes out of his garden last night, one wearing a hat and the other a cap, to come for the remainder, but to take care not to be seen by him, for fear he might not be able to resist the temptation of perforating their pilfering bodies with grapes of the Smith & Wesson variety, which though easy to take are generally found hard to digest. It is shameful that the citizens of Peterborough, after spending large sums of money in planting vines, and great labor in their culture, should be robbed of their fruits, of their vines and of their toil, by petty thieves, who do not derive much pleasure, for in most cases, the "grapes are sour"—unripe and unfit for use.

A NEW SCHEME.

Col. Wyndham, of the 12th battalion, who served in the Northwest, has submitted a military colonization scheme to the Government. He proposes to raise 400 or 800 men (he has all the names now) to go up to the Northwest and settle in the Touchwood Hills. The Government would have to give them land, transport and military outfit. They would have a central garrison for stores and arms; the men and their families would take up the land around it; they would all drill one month in the year as mounted infantry; they would hold themselves in readiness for an immediate march; they would have their own horses and buckboards, and would be able to go as a flying column 50 miles a day for a month, carrying their own provisions; they would work their farms as ordinary settlers unless called out; they would undertake any work required of them by the Government. The site selected for the colony is near most of the Indian reservations. It is said the Government look with favor on the scheme. It will be just like the present Government to fall in with the proposal of the gallant colonel of the 12th. By their misrule they have made the presence of a military body in the Northwest a necessity, for it is not at all probable that they will take to heart the lessons of the late rebellion. They will continue to misrule the country by allowing political favorites to fatten themselves at the expense of the settlers. For this reason they will be inclined to favor the proposal outlined above. Military terrorism is a terrible mistake in a free country. Give the settlers of the Northwest, and the Indians justice and equal rights and there is no necessity for an armed force, beyond what is necessary to keep in order a few plunderously inclined Indians or a few pony thieves. If the Ottawa Administration would make an honest effort to govern the country instead of making it a preserve for the benefit of political adventurers, it would yet remain, and would have remained, in spite of all the injustice and spoliation it has suffered, as peaceable as any county of Ontario.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Marquis of Lorne is a candidate for one of the Metropolitan divisions of the city of London in the Liberal interest.

Active preparations are being made for meetings of Liberals in different parts of the Province. Sir Richard Cartwright figures prominently on the list of speakers.

There is this noticeable little difference in the methods of the Mail and Globe. On Saturdays the Globe publishes one of Spurgeon's sermons, and on Saturdays the Mail prints a homily on sea serpents.

The Hon. C. F. Fraser, M.P.P., leaves shortly for England to argue the McCarthy License Act case on behalf of Ontario. Mr. Fraser, though he has not practised much in the Superior Courts, owing to political preoccupation, is a sound lawyer and an able pleader.

The last shake in the Dominion Ministry leaves only six M. P.'s in office who were in the Cabinet at its original constitution, viz: Sirs John Macdonald, Tilley, Langevin, Campbell and Messrs. M. Bowell and Pope. Tilley and Bowell alone have the portfolios they started out with.

Montreal is practically under martial law. Ignorance and prejudice are reaping their harvest. The riotous demonstration of the anti-vaccination sans culottes necessitates the keeping of the volunteers in arms, at a cost of $2,000 per day. And still the smallpox keeps up its ravages. During the month of September, in Montreal, the deaths from smallpox numbered 996—almost a thousand. This disastrous record is, without doubt, directly due to neglect of vaccination and neglect of isolation of smallpox patients.

In one of his "Protection or Free Trade" rticles, now running in the Globe, Mr. Henry George pithily puts the inconsistency of the average protectionist thus: "Protectionists are only protectionists in theory and in politics. When it comes to what they want to buy all protectionists are free traders." A volume could not tell more to show how a policy of high taxation is forced upon the people of Canada solely for the purpose of promoting political purposes.

Sir John has been making a tariff-agricultural speech to the farmers of Carleton. He has told them, in words that the Mail thinks sublime wisdom, that it would be better to mix the raising of stock with the growing of wheat. Sir John has had no little experience in mixing—things, and should be able to speak ex cathrada. But, judging from the past, wise farmers will think twice before taking Sir John's advice. In 1878 he told them that the N. P. was going to raise the price of grain to a dizzy height; yet the market price of every kind of grain since the N. P. came into force has given the lie direct to his assurances. The farmers never have such good cause to be ware of Sir John as when he is pretending to be their friend.

The Teacher's Task.

History is being made and geography changed every month. The true teacher will keep an intelligent eye upon the great movements which are continually taking place amongst various nations of the world. Within the last week or two the state of parties in Great Britain has developed some new features of interest. The event whose importance, for the moment at least, foreshadows all others, is Mr. Gladstone's manifesto. Our readers will no doubt, have seen the abstracts of it in the political papers. dicting that the sun of the great statesman was going down under eclipse, he has electrified the nation with what may very probably prove the masterpiece of his political handiwork. Its chief characteristic is that it outlines the most radical reforms in the most conservative spirit. We need not take space to enumerate its points, but in declaring for free transfer of land, full land taxation, the abolition of primogeniture and entail, and in contemplating calmly church disestablishment as a possibility of the future, it clearly shows that the political eyesight of the veteran statesman has not waxed dim nor his mental force abated. —Canada School Journal.

A Confession of Faith.

Wind and rain have vexed the earth with weeping,
Clouds hang heavily on the darkening lea,
Everywhere his sullen vigil keeping,
Winter watches over land and sea.

All day long the raindrops faintly falling
Mix their measured music with the wild
Uncertain voices of the east wind calling
Through the distance like a fretful child.

And the mingled echoes seem to fill me
With a strange mysterious sense of pain
Like some ghostly whisper come to thrill me
In the secret chambers of my brain.

That deep pulse of Nature beating through me
Brings my being into tune with hers;
These dark shadows are her henchmen gloomy,
Those sad winds her mournful messengers.

Is there not a charm to break her magic,
Some bright spell more potent than her own?
Through the storm-wind's thousand voices tragic
Breathes there not a sweeter, tenderer tone?

Ah, dear love! forgive that foolish question,
Can the heart that holds you e'er despair?
Can the soul that knows love's sweet suggestion
Sink beneath the Powers of the Air?

Look! the shadows melt around me; o'er me
Clouds and tempests pass on either hand,
In your maiden grace you gleam before me
As Miranda unto Ferdinand.

There are singers, darling, who have told us
That the heart is false and Nature true,
That her arms alone can safely fold us—
But I turn from Nature unto You.

Turn, and build upon your truth my tower,
Turn with Love's immortal perfect faith;
Mine! My own! through Life's supremest hour
Mine when Life shall broaden unto Death.

—Barton Grey.

Odd Cranks.

Somebody in Mr. Gould's office has been giving the press an idea of the great speculator's correspondence. More that one-half the letters he receives come from beggars or cranks. One man wanted him to make him a present of $30,000 in 4 per cent bonds because they would produce him an income sufficient to maintain him in idleness, and he thought Gould could spare the money easily enough. A man in Central New York sent him photographs of himself, wife, and eleven children and asked permission to take an excursion in his yacht. One man wanted the capitalist to cover a particular stock, and another besought him to depress the price of a certain class of securities on a certain day. Everybody who calls on Gould must state his name, address and business. A clergyman presented himself the other day, and was promptly admitted. When he had seated himself he took out $2,000 in currency and asked that it be invested along with Gould's money in his next "whirl" on the street and that the speculator keep it until it had amounted to $20,000. The proposition was refused, and the preacher withdrew in disgust.

Teaching Dickens and Leech how to Dance.

One year, before a Twelfth Night dance, when Charles Dickens's two daughters were quite tiny girls, he took it into his head that they must teach him and his brother John Leech the polka. The lessons were begun as soon as thought of, and continued for some time. It must have been rather a funny sight to see the two small children teaching those two men. Mr. Leech was over 6 feet—to dance, at four as solemn and staid as possible. As in everything he undertook, so in this instance did Charles Dickens throw his whole heart into the dance. No one could have taken more pains than he did, or have been more eager and anxious or more conscientious about steps and time than he was. And often, after the lesson was over, he would jump up and have a practice by himself. When the night of the party came both the small dancing mistresses felt anxious and nervous. I know that the heart of one beat very fast when the moment for starting off arrived. But both pupils acquitted themselves perfectly, and were the admiration of all beholders. Sir Roger de Coverley was always the finale to those dances, and was a special favorite of Charles Dickens, who kept it up as long as possible, and was as unflagging in his dancing enthusiasm as was his own Fizziwig in his.—The Cornhill Magazine.

Mrs. Wood, of Hartford, has performed the remarkable feat of writing the whole chapter of Genesis within a space the size of a quarter of a silver dollar. It has been calculated that in the same space of time that it took her to write the first chapter of Genesis she could have made seventeen pies, darned thirteen pair of socks, and washed the dishes eleven times, but then making pies and washing dishes are not remarkable feats, and would not have given her fame, although indulgence in those pursuits would probably have given more satisfaction to her family.

Dying Fires.

The log on which the hearth-fire long has fed
Is nigh consumed, and now the flame burns low,
With one faint blaze of feeble, flickering red,
That ghostly figures on the wall doth throw.
But now the wind comes breathing soft along,
It flames again and lights the gloom about.
Then lower sinks, as quick the wind is gone,
Then flick'ring fades and with a puff goes out.

Love's fire, for long has fed upon the heart
And nigh consumed it, through a feeble flame,
From out the ashes slow and then doth start,
Casting weird shadows on the troubled brain.
But mem'ry's wind comes breathing softly by,
It glows again and for a time is bright,
Then the thought ceases and lips sadly sigh,
As it dies out and leaves behind but night.

—Edward A. Fuller.

It Took.

A Bowery dealer in clothing got hold of a chap the other day who had a knowing look in his eyes, and who strongly objected to paying $7 for a coat which he had tried on.

"Vhell, I don't say dot it is worth $8," replied the dealer.

"Then why do you ask it?"

"Vhell, my eyes haf got so poor dot anypody can pass badt money on me now. If I sold dot goat for $7 I should expect to git $1 in counterfeit money, and I vould be plugged dop."

"I guess I'll take it," said the stranger, after a pause, and he scraped the bottoms of his pockets and hunted his wallet over for bills.

"Dot is right, young man, and I know you wouldn't sheat an ole man mit sore eyes."

The coat was bundled up and the stranger disappeared in a lively manner. The dealer turned to the cash on the counter, carefully examined each piece, and then was a heavenly smile on his face as he chuckled out:

"Only ninety cents of badt money, und some of dot money good enough to put in the shildren's saving bank!"—Wall Street News.

The Evolution of Pantaloons.

There were the breeches of the period immediately succeeding the Revolution. They were short, reaching only to the knees, mostly made of cloth, buttoning at the sides. The wealthy wore them of velvet, or corduroy, as the fancy seized them, or of doe cloth. The first long pantaloons were mere comfortable bags, and this was principally due to the fact that they were homespun—made by willing but unskilful hands. The first improvement was when they were so altered in construction as to button elsewhere than at the side. Suspenders were not used until comparatively recent times, somewhere about 1840, I believe. Distinctive styles in breeches date from the close of the war. Then there came the garments tight at the waist and to the knees, where they bagged enormously, giving the appearance of swelled joints. The pockets were called "top pockets," and could be reached only by pulling the vest up to the chin. Later they were cut high in the waist and medium in the legs. This was a return to first principles. The next trousers to achieve popularity were those miserable "tights." They fitted the nether extremities like eel skins, and suddenly swelled to awful proportions at the bottom. The present styles are elegant, and a decided advance on any that have preceded. The trousers of to-day are as complete an institution as can be wished for. There are well contrived recesses for the watch, the pistol, the whisky flask, keys, knife, comb, handkerchief, pocketbook—in short, everything that most fastidious man could desire to [illegible] him.—Philadelphia Press

TUESDAY, OCT. 6, 1885.

Use the Telephone.

Friends and patrons of the EVENING EXAMINER are requested to use the telephone in communicating items of news which may come under their notice. We should be glad to avail ourselves of any information transmitted in that way before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

The Assize Docket.

The following is the docket of cases to be tried at the assizes which open before Justice O'Connor on Thursday morning. There is only one criminal case, that of the Queen vs. Tanner, a case of assault. The jury cases are, McCann vs. Preneveau, Sheridan vs. Pigeon, Clegg vs. G. T. R. Hilliard vs. Gemmell, Reynolds vs. Roxburgh and Baskin vs. McMartin are the non-jury cases.

Range and Rifle.

The rifle shooting fraternity are away out at the butts to-day peppering at the targets, and making bulls-eyes, magpies, and no doubt, some misses. The occasion is the annual Association matches, which extend over to-day and to-morrow, and for which a large list of valuable prizes are offered. The shootists all left for the range clad in overcoats, and will no doubt need them on such a day as this.

In Fine Condition.

When the Peterborough Business College was opened here, Mr. Sawyer said he was determined to make it the best, and would let nothing pass which he thought would help to carry out the idea. On looking into the College to-day we find 20 day students in attendance, all alive with business. The walls are beautifully decorated, all the rooms neat and clean and bright, and disinfected into the bargain. This afternoon electric light was put into the assembly room, and new furniture added, in consequence of expected increased attendance to-night. So that we see Mr. Sawyer is determined to have a good school-room as well as a good course. We would suggest that those who wish to improve or perfect themselves in any practical subject, should call at the College, Hunter street, and make arrangements for a course Night sessions are announced in advertisement to open to-night at 7 p. m.

Railway Obstruction.

Mr. Thomas Beavis, the Council Chamber janitor, was the complainant at the Police Court this morning against the G.T.R., for blocking the highway at Bethune street by allowing their cars to stand on a crossing. The Company were represented by the station agent, Mr. W. H. Brundrette. Mr. Beavis complained that he was frequently debarred for hours at a time from gaining access to his own premises. Both sides were represented by counsel, and after the matter had been explained, the case was enlarged for a week, the Company undertaking to keep the way clear during that time. This course did not suit Mr. Beavis, who was bent on immediate reparation, and he got very much excited, and threatened if the cars were in his way again to knock the wheels from under them with a sledge hammer.

There is no doubt that the blocking of crossings is a great nuisance, and Mr. Beavis' action is not to be wondered at.

The Lane Brothers.

The Lane Brothers, skatorial artists and fancy bicyclists made their first appearance in Peterborough at the Lansdowne Rink last evening. There was a fair audience present. The first part of the entertainment consisted of fancy skating, of which the brothers gave an exceedingly graceful exhibition, showing great skill in executing juggling feats on the wheels, tossing around knives, balls, and other articles with wonderful skill, while wheeling around at full speed. The second part of the entertainment consisted of double bicycle riding, in which the Lane Bros. are also wonderfully expert, in addition to the usual feats, of spinning plates, handkerchiefs, &c., while guiding the wheel around. In their final act, one of them blindfold and in a sack rides around the rink standing upright on the other's shoulders. They will be at the rink again this evening, and no one should fail to see them.

Guns and Ammunition.

I would respectfully advise the public that I have Colt's Magazine Rifles in stock as well as Winchester; price $20. Cartridges to suit, 35c. per box. Discount for quantities as usual. Shells, Wads, Shot, Powder and Caps at very low prices. George Stethem.

The Civic Chair.

From it Remains Reports the Present Occupant of the Civic Chair from Running Again—Who Shall be his Successor?

A representative of THE EXAMINER the other day, in the course of a general conversation with Mr. Geo. A. Cox, took the opportunity of ascertaining from his own lips, the truth of the rumours that are floating around to the effect that he will not stand for the mayoralty in 1886.

"Mr. Cox," said the reporter, "it is currently reported round town that you have resolved not to become a candidate for the mayoralty in 1886; is there any ground for the rumour?"

Mr. Cox replied, "I certainly have never given anyone authority to make such a statement, at the same time I find that my business makes such growing demands on my time that I cannot another year give the attention I desire both to it and municipal matters, and, as a consequence, have made up my mind not to stand for another term."

ing made public?" queried the reporter.

"Certainly not," replied Mr. Cox, "of course the announcement would have to be made some time, and I think the sooner the ratepayers know it and begin to fix their minds on a candidate for the coming year the better; you have, therefore, full liberty to use my statement in any way you please?"

"Have you any idea who are likely to aspire to the mayoralty for the coming year?" was the scribe's next question.

"Not the slightest," replied Mr. Cox, "I don't doubt, however, that suitable gentlemen will be induced to stand, and that the civic chair will be efficiently filled during the coming year. I trust the electors will be alive to their own interests and elect a Mayor who will study the best interests of the town, and at the same time adopt a policy of progress calculated to increase its growth as a manufacturing centre."

"Have you any such candidate in your mind, Mr. Cox?" said the reporter.

"I have not, but there are several gentlemen who would fill the position with acceptability to the electors and to the benefit of the town. I have not thought of any one in particular. Indeed, it would be altogether premature for me to do so."

"But the fact remains that at the end of the present term you will not seek re-election?"

"No, I shall not, that you will be quite safe in stating," said Mr. Cox, putting on his overcoat, and, as the reporter saw that business was even then demanding that gentleman's attention, he retired.

Sale and Social.

The public are requested to recollect that the adjourned sale and tea, under the auspices of St. John's South Ward Sunday School, will be held in Mr. W. H. Rackham's house, corner Reid and Charlotte streets, on Wednesday afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock. Sale of useful articles and refreshments. Admission 5 cents, tea 20 cents.

Personal.

A. VonHugel, Esq., ex-mayor of Port Hope, is in town to-day.

Mr. Robert Orr, formerly of the Bank of Commerce here, and who now holds a responsible position with the same bank in Chicago, is visiting friends in town.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

Where Should our Young Men Drink? What They Drink?

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—What our young men should drink and where they should drink, seems to be a question of the day.

I think that more provision should be made for our young men employed in offices and stores, than is at present at their command in very many places. Instead of having good drinking water close at hand, it usually has to be carried from a neighboring well, and even the water in our town wells is not free from suspicion as regards purity and freedom from dangerous contamination.

Could not our office holders, storekeepers, &c., have the water works water in their places, and this, when filtered, gives a good supply of fairly good water and is always at hand, and then our young men can take or make their drinks on the spot, and not have the necessity of going round the corner to the nearest bar room, even for a drink of pure water, and there meeting with all sorts of temptations, and running the chance of ever one and anyone forming their estimate of him from the places he frequents.

Why not our Y.M.C.A. and Mechanic's Institute have rooms with such water, and even wash-rooms, etc., close at hand, where all who wish may use them, and thus avoid the present necessity for visiting the bar-rooms, and the ruinous practice of treating to some extent.

I know of office after office in town where no water is to be had for any purpose whatever and one has to run around town with a pail or pitcher, begging from one and another. There are also young men employed in these places who do not like to be running into the bar-room every time they want a drink, or to run to the wash-rooms. People like to to pay for what they get, and very often such favors are expected to be paid by treating at the bar.

Yours truly,
B. A. L.

Peterborough, Oct. 5th, 1885.

A Political Bomb Shell.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Liberals have laid a mine to be exploded under the Tories in pursuance of the agitation on behalf of over-worked railway servants. The victim of the coming attack is William Henry Smith, Secretary of War, who is lessee and and proprietor of the book stalls in all the railway stations throughout Great Britain. It has just become known that he compels the boys in his employ, many of whom are only 14 years old, to work from 5 a. m to 10 p. m. for seven shillings a week. Liberal committees propose to give widespread publicity to the facts.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1200.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can get [illegible] mills are adjoining, also affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

A Budget of Complaints Against School Management.

Mr. Horning Withdraws His Resignation,

And His Salary is Raised to $1,000 Per Annum.

A meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening in the school building. All the members of the board were present, and Mr. James Stevenson occupied the chair. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, Mr. Denne rose to complain that children had been sent home from school just after the long holidays. Miss Dowling, he believed, had absented herself for three days and the children were sent home.

Mr. Rutherford inquired if teachers were allowed to keep the schools in after 12 o'clock and to thus punish the whole school on account of one delinquent; he thought such confinement was injurious to the children.

Mr. Weir complained that children on arriving late at school, were sent long distances home with notes, instead of taking their place in the classes.

Mr. Dumble suggested that the attention of the head teachers in the schools should be called to the matter and teachers cautioned against doing this.

Mr. Rutherford gave notice that he would at the next meeting of the Board move a resolution making it impossible for the Board to grant any increase in the salary of teachers without a full meeting of the Board. At the last meeting an increase of $100 per annum had been granted to a teacher by a bare quorum, and he thought it should have come under discussion by a full meeting.

The following communications were read:

From Mr. Jones, asking for more seating accommodation in the South Ward School.

From Miss Maggie Davidson, asking for an appointment as teacher.

From Miss McDonald, the same.

From Miss Cooper, requesting that since her services as teacher of drawing were to be discontinued she be paid one quarter's salary.

These communications were referred to the proper committees.

Dr. Tassie presented his report of the Collegiate Institute, in which he complained of the conduct of parents in allowing pupils, who were going forward for examinations, to remain absent from school during the latter days of the session in opposition to the wishes of those who taught them, and of the general irregularity in attendance. The organization of the Institute he reported to be in a flourishing condition, and its prospects better than ever before.—The report was adopted.

Some discussion followed, after which Dr. Tassie recommended that on snowy or rainy days the pupils of the school, instead of being let home at 12 o'clock, should be detained till 1, and then be dismissed for the remainder of the day.

Mr. Dumble thought that this was a matter that lay largely within the discretion of the teacher.

Mr. Kendry thought it would not be safe, as it would be hard to tell where to draw the line.

Mr. Denne inquired if there was not another letter in the Secretary's hands relative to the resignation of Mr. Horning.

Mr. Dumble explained that the master at Norwood, whose place Mr. Horning was to have taken, had recovered his health so much that he would be able to resume his duties, and Mr. Horning felt reluctant to hold the Norwood School Trustees to their agreement with him and wished to withdraw his resignation.

Mr. Burnham expressed the opinion that Mr. Horning would probably be looking for some other situation before long.

Mr. Denne coincided with him; he thought if a teacher wasn't satisfied, the sooner he went away the better.

Mr. Rutherford was not surprised that Mr. Horning should feel dissatisfied when the salaries of other masters had been raised; the course pursued by the Board at the last meeting was calculated to unsettle all the teachers.

Dr. Burnham said that Mr. Horning augmented his salary to such an extent that it was over $1,000 per year.

The report of the Committee on School Supervision was then presented by Mr. J. R. Stratton. It pointed to the advisability of appointing another teacher in the west ward school, the teachers there not being sufficient to adequately instruct the large number of pupils attending, and recommended that the Committee on Appointments be instructed to appoint another. The recommendation was adopted.

The Finance Committee reported, recommending payment of Sabine's account of $16 for extra instruction in drawing, and that the secretary be paid a sum of $35 per annum, on account of his extra labor in paying the teachers monthly instead of quarterly, as heretofore. The committee had not dealt with Mr. Horning's application for an increase of salary, believing he intended resigning.—Report adopted.

The Committee on Property reported on the recent painting done to buildings, at a cost of $165.

Mr. Kendry moved that Messrs. Bennett, of London, be sent a cheque for two sample seats sent by them, which had not been returned.—Carried.

Mr. Dumble, for the Committee on Appointments, reported the engagement of Miss Hunt as lady teacher in the High school. Her engagement was probationary, and the term was till Christmas.

Mr. J. R. Stratton seconded, by Mr. W. H. Wrighton moved, "That from and after this date all teachers in the High and Public schools who are absent from their duties without the written sanction of the chairman of the Board, be charged at the rate of $5 and $3 per day respectively, such sum to be deducted by the treasurer from the absent teacher's salary, and that the principals of the High and Public schools be requested to report to this Board at each regular meeting the name of any such absent teacher or teachers, with the reasons for such absence.—Carried.

On motion, the salary of Mr. Horning was raised to $1,000 per annum.

Dr. Burnham moved for an increase in the salary of the Principal of the Collegiate Institute, but that gentleman, who was present, declined to have the motion put to the Board, unless there was a reasonable chance of it being carried.

After a motion by Mr. Rutherford, that the complaints made be referred to the Committee on School Management, had been carried, the meeting adjourned.

Fraserville.

(From a Correspondent.)

FOOTBALL.

A return match was played on Saturday, Oct. 3rd, between the Clippers, of Cavan and the Fraserville clubs, on Mr. Lightfoot's farm. A large crowd witnessed the well-contested game. At times the onlookers became very enthusiastic, and frequently the air was filled with hurras. To eulogise personally any of the Fraserville boys would be out of place, as every man did his duty and played his part excellently. The game concluded, as did the last with the Clippers, an even game—no goals having been scored. The Fraserville team had no advantage regarding the grounds played on, as neither teams ever played on it before. During the last twenty minutes of play, the ball was incessantly near the goal so strongly defended by the Clippers, and, as Wellington prayed for night or Blucher in the battle of Waterloo, so were the Clippers praying—in their way—for that word "time" to be called. The Clippers have declined playing the Fraserville team again this season. We long to face them again. After the game the players, accompanied by over a hundred spectators, went to Mr. Lightfoot's residence, where supper was provided. We cannot speak too highly of the kindness manifested by Mr. and Mrs. Lightfoot on the auspicious occasion. We, as a club, also remember the kindness exhibited by the esteemed ladies of our vicinity, and hope, if such an occasion affords itself again that the ladies will, as they now have done, do their part. During the evening sweet music was rendered by Miss B. Fair, The Misses Hutchings, Mr. Geo. McDowell, Mr. Chas. Needler and others. All present enjoyed themselves immensely well. Our desire is that such philanthropists as Mr. Lightfoot may long be spared in this Canada of ours.

AN ONLOOKER.

North Monaghan.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

The Council met on Friday, the 25th day of September, 1885. Present—The Reeve and Councillors Brownscombe, Johnston, Dunlop and McIntosh, the Reeve in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Johnston, seconded by Mr. McIntosh,—That the Reeve and Councillors Brownscombe and Dunlop be a committee to examine the culvert at the Nicholls hospital and the roadway west of the same, and have the necessary improvements made on said culvert and road.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Brownscombe, that the Reeve and Councillors McIntosh and Johnston be appointed a committee to expend the sum of forty dollars secured from the sale of timber on quarter line, on the 7th concession.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. McIntosh, the following accounts were ordered to be paid:—Fred. Brivnx, for culvert and opening outlet from same, $9.00. Joseph Forster, for culvert made by Curroe and cedar supplied, $6.00.

Moved by Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Johnston, that by-law No. 325, to provide for issuing debentures for $448.18, for digging drain and opening creek in the 11th concession of the township of North Monaghan be read a first time, and that said by-law be published in the Times newspaper.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McIntosh, seconded by Mr. Dunlop, that this Council pay the amount of $31.82, the proportion of the assessment against the roads benefitted under by-law No. 325 of this municipality, instead of having the same levied each year.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Johnston, seconded by Mr. Dunlop,—That the amount of $20 be granted towards opening and clearing the road along the proposed drain, being opened under by-law No. 325.—Carried.

The Council adjourned till the 29th day of October next.

Mistaken for a Deer.

A sad and fatal accident happened in Kennebec, near Kingston, on Wednesday. A lad by the name of Hawley, son of Wm. F. Hawley, and others, went to the woods to hunt. One of the party mistook young Hawley for a deer and fired into the brush, inflicting fatal injuries. The young man died on Thursday.

Committed for Trial.

HAMILTON, Oct. 6.—Mr. Palmer, of the Ontario Mills Co., has been committed for trial on a charge of feloniously stealing a million gallons of water, the property of the corporation of the city of Hamilton.

A Temperance Lecture in Brief

"On October 2nd, 1875," said a Toronto business man on Saturday, to the World, "I took my last drink in a low den on Adelaide street. I left the place at 2 o'clock in the morning with but 10 cents to my name. I am worth $40,000 to-day. How much of this amount do you suppose I would have if I had continued to drink? No, thanks; lemonade is strong enough for me."

Mrs. Dumas, living at the Little Farm, Hull, yesterday gave birth to triplets, two boys and a girl. The occurrence caused quite a flutter of excitement in the neighborhood, and during the day the happy mother's house was besieged by female friends, anxious to get a glimpse at the youngsters.

The French Republic in Danger.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Times Paris correspondent says:—"Owing to the number of Cabinet Ministers defeated at the elections on Sunday for seats in the Chamber of Deputies, it will be necessary for the Cabinet to be remodelled or resign from office before the Chambers meet. If the Radicals ally themselves with the members of the Right, they can overthrow Ministry after Ministry, leaving France in permanent crisis, which will seriously jeopardize the existence of the Republic.

John Bright.

Mr. John Bright, the great Quaker orator and statesman, is about to enter upon an active canvass in the interest of the Liberal party. Mr. Bright has been one of the most prominent figures in English Parliamentary history during the past 30 years. No man, not even Mr. Gladstone, has contributed more toward domestic reform than John Bright. Mr. Bright is distinguished for his strong convictions and for the moral courage which he exhibits in support of them. What Mr. Bright's views are upon public questions is well known. He does not attempt to conceal them. He does not consider whether they are popular or unpopular. He considers only the right and wrong, the wisdom and the unwisdom, of the subject under consideration. Mr. Bright has announced his intention to support the late Attorney-General, Sir Henry James, in contesting Bury, one of the suburbs of Manchester. Sir Henry James is one of the first lawyers at the English bar, and is himself a strong man. Should the coming Parliament live out its full term, it will perhaps be the last to which Mr. Bright will effectively contribute. He is now 74 years of age, and before the second Parliament is elected will in all probability have reached the age of 80 years. Mr. Bright was a member of Gladstone's Government, but withdrew when the Government resolved upon the invasion of Egypt.

Montreal's Malady.

Return of Deaths Invoking the Holy Virgin's Aid to Stay the Plague.

According to the official returns furnished by the employees of the Fabrique of Notre Dame, Montreal, the total deaths from small-pox in Montreal and suburbs for the week ending Friday, the 2nd October, was 401. Of these 321 were in the city proper and 80 in the suburbs.

A heavy rainstorm on Sunday prevented the outdoor procession of the Catholic congregations to invoke the intercession of the Virgin Mary to stay the progress of the epidemic. The procession took place inside the church, however, at the afternoon festival of the rosary at 3.30. The French parish church on Notre Dame street was crowded, fully 10,000 being present. The statue of the Madonna of Notre Dame de Bon Secours was carried on a dias up and down the aisles of the immense edifice. The statue, a very old relic belonging to the Seminary of St. Sulpice, was brought from France early in the eighteenth century and has been used for 150 years in times of special prayer or special returning of thanks for mercies vouchsafed. The procession was preceded by the beadle of the church with several assistants, all in their Swiss uniform. Then followed acolytes, after which came the clergy bearing the crucifix and swinging a censer. The Madonna, elevated on a dias, followed as the procession moved through the aisles and among the congregation. The latter bowed their heads in silent supplication.

FLOWER FARMING.

There are many devices proposed for making the soil of England commercially profitable. Among these the growing of flowers for the sake of the essential oils they contain, is one that deserves encouragement.

A few years ago a large acreage of land was planted near Canterbury with lavender and mint. The result has been so far satisfactory, that it is proposed to establish extensive works on the spot in order to carry on the process of extracting the essential oils. There is no reason to doubt the profitable outcome of the venture. The demand for the oils of lavender and peppermint may seem very limited, and not in any way comparable to the wide call for supplies in the fruit or wheat market. But they are used in many industries, and if the market is not so great, neither is the competition for purchasers so keen.

In England, there is an importation annually of between two hundred and three hundred thousand pounds weight of essential oils. If we leave out cassia, vanilla, cloves and lemon, which are the product of foreign countries, there is no reason, whatever, why all the rest could not be produced within the United Kingdom. We think we might venture to say the same of Canada.

Lavender has been grown in Hertfordshire as a commercial speculation for more than sixty years. Lincolnshire has also hundreds of acres of this plant under cultivation, and in former years it was a still more important industry than it is at present. The lavender flowers are collected in August and taken direct to the still, where the process of extracting the oil is attended to. The amount secured depends greatly on the weather during the two months previous to gathering. Dull, wet weather in June and July causes only half the usual yield. Three years after distillation, the oil which has been mellowing up to that date, deteriorates, unless it has been mixed with alcohol.

In France, the collection and distillation of lavender is widely practised as a paying industry. And this is all the more remarkable, since the French oil is much inferior to the English article.

America has not attempted much in the way of flower-farming as a paying speculation. Lavender has been grown in considerable quantities near Philadelphia. Canada has not, so far as we know, attempted anything in this direction. We believe, however, that with our bright summer and fruitful soil, capable as it is of producing the finest fruits, their is no reason why an industry of this kind, if commenced and carried out wisely, would not prove highly remunerative. The soil of this country should produce splendid crops of the anise, the carraway, the iris, the rosemary, carraway peppermint, lavender and mint, for the purposes indicated in this article. Perhaps some of our enterprising agriculturists may make further enquiries in this direction and find a new field for their energies in flower-farming, and quick and handsome returns for any outlay they may make in starting such commendable industry. We solicit their attention to the subject, and shall be glad to open our columns for discussion with the view of eliciting information upon the matter.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

On Saturday, says the Whig, Sir John Macdonald encountered in Kingston an old supporter, who reproached him for his failure to punish Riel. "My dear sir," said the former, in a confidential manner, "I can do nothing. The case is out of my hands." The voter shook his head doubtfully, and subsequently observed to a friend, "The hole that John A. can't get through is pretty small."

Barley sold for 30 cents per bushel in Kingston last Saturday. This is a considerable contrast to the figure of a dollar and over a bushel that was realized by the farmer in 1878. The farmers were told that if they consented to be taxed all round they would be compensated by the highest cash prices for their grain. One condition of the compact has been observed—the taxes have been piled on without mercy, but 30 cents per bushel for barley hardly tends to reconcile the farmer to the paying of high taxes without any compensating advantage. The farmers now know that they have been merely used as tools to promote the imposition of a protective tariff for the enrichment of manufacturers, while they have to pay the shot.

Hog cholera, which has been devastating the pens of Western Ontario, and causing great loss to farmers, has now broken out in Brant county. Already a number of cases have been investigated, and the the animals infected killed; but stringent measures will have to be adopted if the spread of the disease is to be prevented. From Essex where the disease originated to Brant, is about as big a jump for the hog cholera, as it would be from Brant to Peterborough. With such a first-rate local market for hogs, as we possess, the outbreak of hog cholera in Peterborough would mean an immense loss to the farming community.

WEATHER NOTES.

September followed in the wake of August for rain, having had some heavy falls during the first part of the month. On the 8th, from 1 p.m. to 7 a.m., it fell 1 inch and 70-100 of an inch, and through the night of the 13th it fell 1 inch and 60-100 of an inch. Rain fell on 11 days to the depth of 4 inches and 50-100 of an inch. On the 3rd and 7th we had some dashes of hail and frost on several occasions, the severest being on the morning of the 11th. During the greater part of the month the temperature was low, only averaging 50° 5-30. On the 22nd it thundered considerable during the forenoon, although little rain fell in these parts; in the afternoon the wind veered round to the north, blowing cold and chilly, after which it got fine, the month ending with pleasant hot weather.

The following is the number of days in which, at sunrise, the wind was blowing from the points, namely:—North-west, 7 days; west, 7 days; south-west, 2 days; south-east, 3 days; east, 4 days; north-east, 4 days; north, 2 days, and south, 1 day.

THE CROPS.

The harvest is almost over now, only a few straggling patches of oats out yet. Roots will be a short crop. Potatoes would be a good average crop, only they are now affected with the rot.

Monday morning, October the 5th, an old fashioned snow storm just reminded us of coming merry sleigh bells.

Fenelon Falls.

The dredge which, as mentioned in our last issue commenced on the morning of the 25th to remove the clay with which the cofferdam had been filled, got it all out in three days, and the lower entrance to the locks is now free from obstruction. The stop-logs above the locks are in place, and the canal now contains about three feet of water, which was let in some days ago. A few men are still engaged "redding up," but they will be through in about a week, after which there will be nothing more to do until the lock gates are put in, which is not likely to be done until next spring, and perhaps not then.

The farmers of this vicinity will not be under the necessity of taking their grain to Lindsay the coming season, in order to secure the highest prices, as there will be so much competition amongst the buyers at Fenelon Falls that the last cent will be paid. Messrs. McDougall, Brandon & Allan, Messrs. Wm. Webster & R. Butler, and Mr. Joseph McArthur, are all to be on the market, and have already rented the railway storehouse, which is divided into three compartments, each capable of holding several thousand bushels. Then there is Mr. Jordan's storehouse, and as it is not at all likely to be idle, there will probably be at least four buyers to bid against each other for the wheat, oats, pease and barley brought into the village.—Gazette.

Daring Burglary.

HAMILTON, Oct. 5.—At twelve o'clock Saturday night the farm house of M. Phillips, four or five miles beyond Ancaster, was broken into by three unknown men. They tore a rail from the fence and battered in the door. Mr. Phillips, his housekeeper, and hired man were in bed. One of the burglars remained on guard at the door, while the other two went into Mr. Phillips' room, tied his hands and feet with a stout rope, and left him on the bed. They then went into the housekeeper's room and secured her in the same way, winding up with the hired man. The burglars returned to Mr. Phillips' room, and took a roll of bills, amounting to $150, from his trousers' pocket. Then they went out, leaving Mr. Phillips and his servants bound hand and foot. Shortly after they had gone Mr. Phillips managed to work loose. He set the others free, then drove to Hamilton and gave word to the police.

A Peep into the Future.

The Chicago Herald issued recently a special copy of its daily of date Nov. 25, 1963, which, in its way, was extremely unique and interesting. A dispatch from Pressuretown, Niagara was headlined "Niagara Drying Up," and was as follows:

The diminution of water-power at Niagara Falls—an evil which has been foreshadowed for some time in the Herald dispatches from this point—is at last becoming a very serious matter. It threatens the interruption of manufacture throughout the United States. For the past two days dispatches have been pouring in from the most remote industrial centers, such as New Orleans, San Francisco and Portland, Oregon, complaining that the force supplied by the Universal Electro-Dynamic Water-Power Company at Niagara is inadequate to the movement of the heavier machinery in those cities. In New Orleans the manufacture of sorghum molasses has been almost suspended and in California nearly 500,000 Chinamen have been laid off from work in the Pacific Slope Shoe and Last Company's factory.

The Herald correspondent called this morning upon Mr. Orrin Potter Edison, the superintendent-general of the water-power company, and from him ascertained that the difficulty is due to the extraordinary consumption of water at Chicago. Lake Michigan it seems, since Chicago's enormous development, has been so reduced that the source of the nation's industrial energy bids fair to be cut off at its very fountain head. In other words, Niagara Falls are running dry and unless something is speedily done to avert the calamity the national Electro-Dynamic Water-Power works at the falls will have to stop and the wheels of American manufacture will stand still for very lack of motive power to turn them.

A balloon inspection of the falls yesterday revealed that some 7,000,000,000 gallons of water had been diverted since the last official examination, and at the point where the rotary-disc comes in contact with the magnets under the falls the friction had become so slight that it was scarcely appreciable, the main cause of the continuance of motion in the entire system being the impetus imparted by the revolutions of the large drive-wheel, whose axis projects from the upper edge of the precipice. This wheel has a sweep equal to twice the height of the falls, and its force is therefore very considerable. Furthermore it has been swinging now without interruption for over half a century, by a nice application of the principle of perpetual motion, does not easily stop.—Since the solution of the perpetual motion problem the efficiency of the water-power service has been very greatly enhanced, but the question now is whether the perpetual motion principle will be sufficient for the projection of mechanical energy on a scale so elaborate as that involved in running the machinery of the entire country.

The company is now considering the feasibility of drawing in water from Hudson Bay through the subterranean channel discovered in 1936 by Professor Colbert Elius, but it is probable that the work would require at least three days, and, in the meantime, should the machinery stop the manufacturers of the United States would suffer a loss which, it is estimated, would not fall far short of $79,007,620,000. This, though but a bagatelle of the national productivity, is a loss not to be courted, to say the least and the waterpower management will put forth the most strenuous efforts to avert it.

Another rather discomfiting phase of the difficulty is that not only would manufacturing throughout the country be interrupted, but the electric lights which—though it is not generally known derive all their power from the falls, would be extinguished both in this country and in Europe and in Australia as well so that the world would be in darkness as in that imaginary era when

The bright sun was extinguished, and the stars Did wander darkling in the eternal space.

This, however, would not be an insuperable difficulty, for since the perfection of Professor Stellar's back acting solar reflector it has been found possible to bring sufficient of the sun's rays around from the other side of the earth at night to mitigate all but the most intense darkness. The chief inconvenience in event of the extinction of the electric lights, therefore, would be in the theatres and large buildings, such as hotels, into which as yet the Professor has not succeeded in diffusing his borrowed illumination. However, the superintendent of the Niagara Falls system mentions the progress of this branch of science as likely to result finally in a solution of the water-power problem, for should the electric light be superseded by nocturnal sunlight one channel of demand upon the force of the falls will be removed and the increased power thus secured might be applied to the movement of machinery.

However, it does seem a little hard on the moon to "get left" so effectually.

The Farmer's Dream.

The farmer tips back in the old oaken chair,
His hand on his head and his feet on the floor;
And he dreams of the days when his prospects were fair,
And he worked all the day in a grocery-store.

How he measured out sugar for Mary and Rose,
And liberties never once took with the till;
When he wore patent-leathers that ruined his toes,
When he called on Jemima, just over the hill.

He thinks of the days when they roamed through the glade,
And heard the shrill notes of the gay whip-poor-will;
When they dreamed of a neat little cot in the shade
Of a button-ball hanging just over the rill.

He looks at the pictures through spectacles bent,
And Jemima he sees in a vision of bliss,
Just the same as she looked in the days when he leant
The wicket across for the tra-la-la kiss.

He thinks of the years that he's worked over-alled,
With shovel, rake, harrow, plow, bean-pole, and hoe;
He remembers the night to propose that he called,
And, oh! how he wishes she'd only said "No!"

For then might his life be of idleness full,
He could loaf thr ugh the daytime sunshiny and bright,
And jerk up the turnips from morning till night,

But what is the use of his "bah!" and his "pish!"
And what is the use of his sadness and woe,
And what is the use of the empty old wish
That he'd courted a girl who could only say "No!"—Puck

Galatea.

A moment's grace, Pygmalion! Let me be
A breath's space longer on this hither land
Or fate too sweet, too sad, too mad to meet.
Whether to be thy statue or thy bride—
An instant spare me! Terrible the choice
As no man knoweth, being only man:
Nor any, saving her who hath been stone
And loved her sculptor. Shall I dare exchange
Veins of the quarry for the throbbing pulse?
Inseminate calm for a sure aching heart?
Repose eternal for a woman's lot?
Forego God's quiet for the love of man?
To float on his uncertain tenderness,
A wave tossed up the shore of his desire,
To ebb and flow when e'er it pleaseth him:
Remembered at his leisure, and forgot,
Worshipped and worried, clasped and dropped at need,
Or soothed or gashed at mercy of his will,
Now Paradise my portion, and now Hell;
And every single several nerve that beats
In soul or body, like some rare vase thrust
In fire at first, and then in frost, until
The fine, protesting fiber snaps?

Oh, who,
For knowing, ever chose a fate like this?
What woman, out of all the breathing world,
Would be a woman, could her heart select;
Or love her lover, could her life prevent?
Then let me be that only, only one;
Thus let me make that sacrifice supreme
Nor other ever made, or can, or shall.
Behold, the future shall stand still to ask
What man was worth a price so isolate?
And rate thee at its value for all time.

For I am driven by an awful Law.
See! while I hesitate it moldeth me,
And carves me like a chisel at my heart.
'Tis stronger than the woman or the man;
'Tis greater than all torment or delight;
'Tis mightier than the marble or the flesh,
Obedient be the sculptor and the stone!
Thine am I, thine at all the cost of all
The pangs that woman ever bore for man,
Thine I elect to be, denying them;
Thine I elect to be, defying them;
Thine, thine, I dare to be, in scorn of them;
And being thine forever, bless I them!

Pygmalion! Take me from my pedestal,
And set me lower—lower, love!—that I
May be a woman and look up to thee;
And looking, longing, loving, give and take
The human kisses worth the worst that thou
By thine own nature shalt withdraw on me.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Acknowledgment.

The ladies of the Peterborough Protestant Home beg to acknowledge the following donations for September:—Mrs. Wallis, basket apples and bag potatoes; Mr. Edwards, bag of apples.

A Handsome Carriage.

Mr. James Stevenson has purchased the handsome New York top phæton exhibited by Porter Brothers at the recent Central Exhibition. It is a well-built and beautifully finished vehicle and does credit to the establishment from which it was turned out.

Our Saturday Sermon.

Owing to the fact that the holding of the council meeting on Friday night, together with the sermon, unduly crowds our columns on Saturday, the weekly sermon will be published on Thursday or Friday.

The Lanes at the Lansdowne.

The Lane Brothers gave another of their excellent exhibitions of fancy skating and wondrous bicycling at the Lansdowne last night. There was not a very large attendance, but an excellent programme was carried out. They will probably be the last attraction that will be brought to the rink by the managers this season.

Port Hope Prosperity.

Port Hope can't be said to enjoy very great commercial prosperity. The report submitted at the annual meeting of the Harbor Commissioners showed that there was a falling off of exports for the year ending September, 1885, of $2,700.14, as compared with the corresponding year of 1884, and a falling off of imports of $979.51 for the same period. This is a considerable discrepancy when it is considered that the highest year's total amounts to only ten thousand dollars.

Range and Rifle.

There was a large attendance of marksmen from the various local corps present at the opening of the matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association. The weather was very unfavorable for good shooting, there being a kind of haze that made it very difficult to get on to the bull's eye, and the cold wind also had a bad effect on the riflemen. As a consequence the scores made were not in any case up to the usual standard. The maiden and volunteer competitions were completed and the company match commenced. The New York medal, presented in 1866 by ex-citizens of Peterborough living in New York, to be shot for by members of the town and Ashburnham volunteer companies, was won by Mr. W. H. Hill, and now becomes his own property, he having won it three times. The shooting is being resumed to-day, and as there is promise of fine clear weather there will, no doubt, be a corresponding improvement in the shooting.

Skating and Curling Rink Company.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Skating and Curling Rink Company was held at the rink last evening. The chair was occupied by President Ferguson, and the following members of the company were present: Messrs. Boucher, Davidson, Hall, J. E. Hammond, Edwards, Fair, and McGill. After the usual preliminaries, the secretary presented the annual report, which showed the affairs of the company to be in a highly satisfactory condition. The total receipts during the year had been $1668.74, and the disbursements $1,071.83, leaving a credit balance of $596.91. Messrs. W. J. Ferguson, R. S. Davidson, Adam Hall, Dr. Boucher, and C. McGill, were re-elected directors, and at a meeting of this directorate held at the close of the general meeting, Mr. W. G. Ferguson and Mr. C. McGill were re-elected president and secretary, respectively, for the ensuing year. It is the intention of the company to flood the entire rink during the winter months, and not to have it continued as a roller rink. It is thought that measures can be adopted to obviate any injury to the floor.

ARRIVAL OF THE WESTERN CHAMPIONS.

The Young Canadians, of Richmond Hill, champions of the Western District, who are playing with our boys for the championship of Ontario this afternoon, arrived on the 11.50 C. P. R. train this morning and registered at the Little Windsor Hotel. They are a stalwart looking lot of athletes and look like men in good training. They played a draw game with the first twelve of the Torontos about a week ago, and are beyond all question the strongest junior team in the north and east.

The following are the names of the Young Canadians and the Peterboroughs, who are playing against them:—

Young Canadians.		Peterboroughs.
J. McConaghy	Goal	F. Traynor
W. E. Wiley	Point	J. Joyal
A. Mager	Cover Point	P. Myles
F. Young	Defence Field	M. Tierney
B. Pugsley	" "	M. Halpin
C. S. Kealle	" "	R. H. Fortye
F. Powell	Centre	J. J. Sheehy
J. Piper	Home Field	R. S. Kelly
A. E. Pugsley	" "	J. Keefer
J. S. Searls	Home	J. Canning
C. Savage	"	W. Rudkins

M. Wilson accompanies the Young Canadians as field captain, and Jimmy Garvin, the well-known player of the Torontos' first twelve, referees the game.

We would Like to Know

How the boys are getting on at the Driving Park.

If there are good grounds for the complaints made against some school teachers.

And how they will like being fined for absence from duty.

What We May Expect.

Good music at Mr. J. S. Parker's organ recital to-morrow evening.

Meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committe this evening.

Another teacher to be appointed for the West Ward School.

Teachers to be chary of absenting themselves without leave in future.

Light to moderate winds; fair weather; stationary or slightly higher temperature.

What they are Saying.

A highly satisfactory report.—Shareholders of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Co.

So is ours.—The Skating and Curling Rink Company.

"All's well that ends well."—L. E. Horning.

We'll have to mind our P's and Q's now.—The teachers.

Men may come and men may go, but I flow on for ever.—St. John's Creek.

I've won the New York medal for keeps.—Quartermaster-Sergeant Hill.

'Twas a fluke.—Those who didn't get it.

Illicit Liquor Selling.

Two cases of illicit liquor selling were heard before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. Mrs. Fee, of the Queen's Hotel, was charged with selling in prohibited hours, and E. Tutton with selling retail without a license. The first defendant pleaded guilty and was fined $20 and costs. Tutton denied the charge, and there being no evidence in support of it, it was dismissed.

"Daniel."

About forty-five ladies and gentlemen assembled last evening in Oddfellows Hall, corner of George and Hunter streets, and held the first rehearsal of "Daniel," the cantata which is, before long, to be produced under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. Prof. Miller conducted the rehearsal and the accompaniments were played by Mr. C. C. Hampshire, organist and choirmaster of St. John's Church. A large number of excellent voices are taking part in the cantata, and it may be looked forward to as one of the most entertaining events of the coming season.

One-Sided Justice.

Raynor, the accomplice of "Clutch" Donoghue, in feloniously receiving, among other things, the stamps stolen from the Peterborough post office, got off a good deal easier than "Clutch," whose seven years is something more formidable than a paltry fine of $400, which Raynor escaped with. He was fined $100 and $250, respectively, on two counts of the indictment, and $50 on the count relating to the stamps stolen from the post office here. There is a striking difference between Canadian and Yankee justice. One man under the former is punished with seven years penal servitude, while another escapes with a fine equivalent to a year's wages of a labouring man.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company was held yesterday afternoon at the Company's offices, Water street. Major-General Haultain, President of the Company, occupied the chair, and the following shareholders were present: Messrs. J. Walton, Rev. V. Clementi, Geo. A. Cox, R. Hall, T. G. Hazlitt, A. P. Poussette, A. C. Dunlop, H. J. Lefevre and Wm. Walsh. The annual report, together with the financial statement for the year, was submitted and read. It showed the Company to be in a highly flourishing condition, and indicated a large increase of business as compared with that of the previous year. The directorate, consisting of Major-General Haultain, Jno. Walton, Richard Hall, A. P. Poussette, Geo. A. Cox and A. C. Dunlop were re-elected, and Major-General Haultain and Mr. Jno. Walton again chosen to be President and Vice-President respectively. The annual report will be published in Friday's EXAMINER.

Personal.

Mr. P. Myles returned from Ottawa this morning to play in the lacrosse match this afternoon.

Mr. J. Garvin, of the Toronto's, is in town to referee the game.

Mr. Josh. Johnston, representing the celebrated firm of Miller & Richards, Edinburgh, London and Toronto, is in town, interviewing the several printing establishments.

Smiths Market.

Peaches, Plums, Pears, Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Apples, Cherries, Garden Raspberries, Melons, Currants, Gooseberries, and all kinds of green vegetables. Ripe Tomatoes one dollar per box, twenty pounds in the box. Fresh Fish, Hams and Bacon.

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1300.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and risk of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can [illegible] the [illegible] affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the products of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mills.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to

Lacrosse.

THE YOUNG CANADIANS WIN THE PROVINCIAL CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Young Canadians, of Richmond Hill, last evening returned to their village homes carrying with them the coveted distinction of being undisputed junior champions of Ontario, having beaten the Peterboroughs in three successive games. No other result to the match could well have been anticipated at any time within the past few days, though a few sports were venturesome enough to risk small sums on the event, but he who, after seeing the trouble experienced in getting a team together yesterday afternoon, thought the home team had any show, must have been sanguine indeed. J. Kennedy, a man put on the team at the eleventh hour, was objected to by the Young Canadians, on account of his having played within the prescribed period with the Beaverton twelve, and little Larone, of the second twelve, had to be put on in his place. Joe. Henderson, about the most reliable home player in the club, was not able to play, nor was Rutherford, and of the other players many have not had a lacrosse in their hands, or run a hundred yards

FOR MONTHS BACK.

Organization, there was none, and a more happy go lucky, go-as-you-please team never trod turf on a lacrosse field. The visitors, on the other hand, have been playing together all summer, winning victory after victory, were in good training and knew each other's every move, and did not fail to take advantage of it. Notwithstanding this, the Peterborough boys made a really good stand against them, and many of the men played well, but individual efforts were worse than wasted in the face of the united game played by the Young Canadians. The play itself was pretty evenly divided, the ball alternating between the goals with a good deal of impartiality, but the home team's attack was not up to the mark, and the visitors' goal was well protected. The reverse was the case at the other end of the field, where the home of the Young Canadians were persistent and active in their onslaughts, while young Traynor was not by any means equal to the task of guarding the goal. Myles and Joyal played well, but there was too much for them to do, and too much ground to be covered. Sheehy and Kelly at centre did good work, and it would be really hard to find fault with the individual play of any man on the field, but the total lack of cohesion was fatal to their prospects. A word should be said for young Larone, a mere boy, who, put on the team at the last moment, played a dogged and plucky game. The first game, in which Sheehy secured the ball at the face, lasted about five minutes, the second less than one. The third lasted over an hour, a considerable delay being occasioned by a skirmish that took place between Dick Kelly and one of the Young Canadians. Dick accidentally gave him a clip with his lacrosse and the visitor hit Dick a sling in the ear that brought blood; the others rushed in and for a moment it seemed as if a fight was going to take place. The referee, however, after a deal of talk had been expended let the men shake hands and resume the game, which was soon after

BROUGHT TO AN END

by the Canadians making their third goal.

It was claimed by some that the visitors, before the commencement of the match, did more kicking than was necessary, and that the referee, Jimmy Garvin, of the Torontos, showed an inclination to favor them, but it is only fair to say that they kicked for nothing more than the rules of the N. A. L. A. allowed them, and the referee had no desire but to see a fair, up and above board game. Now that the season is closed, the club will have time to think over matters and have a thorough overhauling before another year begins, and if they desire to make a better show next year than has been done during the last, the club will be thoroughly re-organized. As a player from Richmond Hill remarked yesterday, 'it's pretty hard if a village of 700 inhabitants can get a team together to send 100 miles from home, and a town of 9,000 inhabitants like Peterborough can't scare up twelve good men to meet them."

The names of the players published in the EXAMINER are correct, with the substitution of Larone's name for that of J. Kennedy.

Bonnets and Mantles.

Alexander's Fall Opening.

The annual opening of James Alexander's Show Rooms with a new and brilliant stock of novelties in Millinery took place yesterday, and extends over to-day and to-morrow. The always handsome little show room now looks more than usually bright and gay, having been handsomely decorated by tastily arranged festoons of plush, silk, satin, velvet, and other rich and costly materials, the festoons in turn being additionally adorned by brilliant colored feathers, birds, bows, loopings of laces, and the thousand and one trifles that go to make up that daintiest of all concoctions, the modern bonnet. The display of hats and bonnets designed for autumn wear is a most extensive one, presenting a most bewildering array of novelties, including all the fashionable browns, greens and other dark but lovely shades of color that are now popular. Among the most noticeable of the many novelties are the Francaise, a pretty hat, somewhat high in the crown, narrow rimmed, and trimmed with plush, chenille, rep and feathers, and the jersey, of somewhat similar shape, but covered with silk jersey. This style is made in all shades of color. Then in bonnets is the Linden, a handsome little affair of seal brown velvet, trimmed with chenille flowers, and having long velvet ties, handsomely embossed with maple leaves. The Cupid is another style that bids fair to become very popular. The assortment of walking hats is large, and contains a great many handsome novelties. The Newport is a modification of the well-known Tam o' Shanter style. The stock of trimmings, laces, feathers, aigrettes, birds, etc., is one of the most extensive ever seen in town, and will well repay inspection. The work is all executed by the most experienced hands that can be obtained, and everything is first-class in design as well as material.

THE FALL ASSIZES.

A Light Docket to be Disposed of Before Judge O'Connor.

Names of the Grand Jury.

The assizes were opened at one o'clock to-day before Mr. Justice O'Connor. The following is the panel of

GRAND JURORS:

Foreman, Thomas Blezard, M. P. P., J. P. Brown, Joseph Boyd, Coleman Blewett, William Crough, Geo. Cochrane, Geo. A. Elliott, John Flood, R. H. Green, David Hamilton Robert Hall, Peter Hamilton, F. J. Lewis, Geo Kirk, J. C. T. Lees, John Lydgate, James Moore, J. W. Mather, H. B. Merrick, David Moore, Andrew Nelson, James Stevenson, James Wood and W. J. Wallace.

The following members of the local bar were in attendance. Messrs. R. E. Wood, C. A. Weller, E. A. C. Peck, James Henry, C. W. Sawers, E. B. Stone, E. B. Edwards, W. A. Stratton, G. Edmison and W. H. Moore.

The Toronto counsel present, were Messrs. G. T. Blackstock and W. Nesbitt.

THE JUDGE'S CHARGE.

His Lordship, in charging the jury, congratulated the county on the lightness of the calender presented, there being, he might say, no crimes. The calender, however, only contained the names of those confined in goal for crimes. There was, he believed, one case of an extraordinary character, an assault upon Judge Dennistoun. It was the first case of its kind he had ever heard of being presented to a grand jury or indeed any other jury, and he hoped it would be the last. He commented upon the fact that here as elsewhere insane persons were kept confined in the gaol, and remarked that the gaol was no fit place for them. He was glad to know that arrangements were about being made to give increased accommodation in the asylums, which had hitherto been unequal to the demand on their capacity.

The jury were then dismissed to their duties and the case of McCann vs. Preneveau, which is now in progress, was taken up.

Stevenson A., Morris, Neill, Fleck.

Sale and Social Tea.

Yesterday afternoon and evening the indefatigable ladies of St. John's South Ward Sunday school held a sale and gave a social tea in the tenement residence of Mr. W. H. Rackham, corner of Reid and Charlotte streets. The sale opened in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and, though there was at no time a very large attendance, the comers and goers from time to time proved good customers for the fine display of made-up articles the industry of the ladies had provided, and the receipts were very encouraging in this department. Towards evening the tables were laid, and a large number partook of the excellent repast provided. The tables, with their snowy napery, and adornments of silver, cut glass, cut flowers and tempting edibles, presented a very handsome appearance. Indeed, the arrangements throughout were well ordered, and the ladies deserve great praise for the exceedingly creditable manner in which they managed the entir affair. The net proceeds of the sale and tea, which go to augment the fund for building a St. John's chapel or school room in No. 1 Ward, amounted to the tidy sum of $45. Dorcas of Holy Scripture has many worthy disciples among the ladies of St. John's South Ward Sunday School.

Major Moodie.

"God sent His singers upon earth,
With song of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to heaven again."
—ANON.

It is our purpose in this short article to give a few specimens of Major Moodie's poetry.

In a previous number we have alluded to his stirring adventures in Africa, where he spent ten years. His first literary venture on returning to civilized life, was to write an account of the strange scenes through which he passed in that terra incognita. It proved an interesting and attractive work, and though we fear it added little to Major Moodie's store of this world's goods, yet it met with much appreciation, and is very frequently quoted even at this late date.

In this work, entitled "Ten Years in South Africa," he gives a unique description of Hottentot music, and remarks upon the extreme facility and readiness the native Africans evince in picking up tunes which they may hear. One sweetly plaintive air, noted for its pathos and the irregular measure of its melody, greatly affected the Major, and in the attempt to pourtray the feelings of the poor Hottentots, he produced the following genuine lyric, which has all the ring of true poetry, and exhibits Moodie's power as a writer of good stirring pathetic verse:

"Weary we traverse the boundless Karroo,
Where the spring-bok and zebra fly from the view,
With wild leap and bound,
In countless herds they speed far away,
Far, far away,
O'er the ruggens gray,
In liberty!

Our hearts beat high,
As with glancing eye,
At the fleet-footed tribes we level the 'roer,'
And think of the boer,
The cold-blooded boer
And liberty.

But our numbers are few and our hopes are vain
Our flocks and the land of our birth to regain:
And the wrongs of our race
In the sands we trace,
To be swept by the passing winds away
Far, far away
With our liberty,
Oh liberty!

The lion we dare
In his savage lair,
And the elephant track through the long summer day;
They fall our prey,
Yet we waste away
In slavery.

In the wild woods the lordly elephant reigns,
The ostrich and jinggs sweep over the plains,
Oh! not more free
Than once were we
Till the Christian came, and each free-born soul
Was drowned in the bowl—
The maddening bowl,
And slavery!

Of our lands bereft
We have nothing left
But the burning heart and the bitter sigh,
As we waste away,
With our soul's decay,
And slavery!

Silent we crouch round our evening fire
While our young maidens sing to the sweet 'chia' lyre;
As each wild note rings
O'er the trembling strings,
Our tears fall fast o'er times passed away.
Far, far away
With our liberty,
Oh, liberty!

We may sink to our graves
As the white man's slaves
But our spirits are free, and to bright realms of day,
They'll speed far away,
Far, far away
To liberty!"

Quite.

Very few persons we imagine have ever essayed the difficult task of thus attempting to versify sounds when the language was unknown to them, as in this case. Probably Major Moodie succeeded better than he imagined in pourtraying the bitter feelings of the Hottentots at the loss of their freedom.

We have not so much sympathy with another production of his on the bears of Canada. It is well known that Mrs. Moodie gave no flattering description of life in the bush. We have said "Roughing it in the Bush" deterred numbers from emigrating. It was written in very exaggerated style and magnified the hardships of settlers in this country. The bear story is, we believe, greatly overdrawn, but it probably inspired the Major's comic verses. They show little genius except as a play on words. But we give them here more as a literary curiosity than anything else.

Oh! bear me from this savage land of bears,
For 'tis indeed unbearable to me,
I'd rather cope with vilest worldly cares,
Or writhe with cruel sickness of the sea.

Oh! bear me to my own bare land of hills,
Where I'd be sure brave bare-legged lads to see
Bear cakes, bare rocks, and whiskey stills,
And bare-legged nymphs to smile once more on me.

I'd bear the heat, I'd bear the freezing air
Of equatorial realm or Arctic Sea,
I'd sit all bare at night and watch the northern bear,
And bless my soul that he was far from me.

I'd bear the pain-eaters, tiffies and all the ills
John Bull must bear, (who takes them all, poor slumber,
As patients do when forced to gulp down pills,
And water-gruel drink in lieu of dinner).

I'd bare the barenness of all barren lands
Before I'd bear the bearishness of this;
Bare head, bare feet, bare legs, bare hands,
Bear everything, but want of social bliss.

But should I die in this dread land of bears,
Oh! ship me off, my friends, discharge the sable wearers,
For if you don't, in spite of priest and prayers,
The bears will come and eat up corpse and bearers.

One of the very last pieces Major Moodie wrote was in a far different strain. It is entitled "The Days When I Was Young." We may fitly conclude our excerpts from his writings with this specimen of his powers as a versifier:

"O! the days when I was young,
A playful little boy,
When my piping treble rung
With the notes of early joy.
O! the sunny days of spring,
When I sat beside the shore,
And heard the wild bird sing,
Shall I never hear them more?

The sun shone brighter then,
And the moon more soft and clear,
For the wiles of crafty men
I had not learned to fear.
Of sighs I'd none to spare,
They were stored for riper years,
With many bitter tears.

There's a voice so soft and clear,
And a step so gay and light
That charms my listening ear
In the visions of the night;
And my Father bids me haste,
In the deep, fond tones of love,
To leave this dreary waste
For brighter realms above.

The weary heart may mourn
O'er the withered joys of youth,
But the flowers so rudely shorn
Shall leave the seeds of truth;
And there's hope for hoary men,
When they're laid beneath the sod,—
For we'll all be young again,
When we meet around our God!"

Worthy of Special Mention.

Supplementary to our Exhibition Report.

In alluding to the exhibit made by Mr. P. Hamilton at the Central, our space was too limited to do it justice, and therefore a fuller allusion is made below to the display of agricultural implements made by this enterprising manufacturer at the above exhibition

Foremost among the exhibitors in this class was Mr. Peter Hamilton, who occupied a position in the centre of the ground. The most noteworthy, perhaps, of the numerous meritorious machines, exhibited by this enterprising firm, is the self-binding reaper, known as the "Hamilton Light Twine Binder," which was in full operation, the power being supplied by a portable engine per favor of Mr. Saunders. This has several features of excellence that give it a great advantage over any machine in use. One is the crank sheaf butter, whose positive action, operating on the end of the forming sheaf, keeps the end square and even, thus resulting in an even-butted, well-formed sheaf. In addition to this, the butter working at the top of the canvas elevator keeps the straw clear and prevents all clogging at this point. Another important feature which is found on no other machine is the sheaf-carrier. This is placed at the side of the machine and receives the sheaves as they are tied and delivered. This carrier holds from six to eight sheaves, and when it is full, a foot-trip is released by the driver, and the sheaves are dropped in a bunch. By a little care these heaps can be left in a line across the field and thus the labor of collecting the sheaves into stooks is done to a very great extent by machinery. This is a very important feature and the driver having it under full control, it can be easily made a great saving of labour. Another point in favour of the Light Twine Binder is the fact that, from his seat, the driver can reach and use, without strain, every trip and lever connected with the machine, such as the levers for elevating and lowering the table, raising, lowering or setting forward or back the reel, etc. One feature peculiar to this binder is that there is a distinct lever controlling both, the grain wheel and the drive wheel. A double angle steel cutter bar brings the knife close to the grain platform, and thus the grain is delivered in a better condition for gathering into a perfect sheaf. The driver from his seat has the lever for shortening the sheaf to accommodate its tie to short or long straw, also right at hand. This machine is of light draught and being perfectly balanced, is light on the necks of the horses. This is to a great extent produced by placing the binding machinery at the rear of the machine. These advantages were quickly seen by the farmers, who surrounded it on the fair grounds in admiring throngs. A little knot of farmers standing a short distance from it were heard discussing its merits, and two who had previously used almost every other kind of reaper, and now possess the Hamilton "Light Twine Binder," declared it was beyond all question the best machine they had yet seen or heard of. Another exhibit of this firm was a horse power and canvas separator threshing machine, with undershot elevator of greater capacity than the out-of-date overshot tinbucket elevators. It is also much more durable and less liable to get out of order. This thresher has steel teeth for the cylinder and concave; the cylinder shaft has a malleable pinion, which cannot break; an appliance for raising or lowering the grates at the back of the cylinder, where is also found an improved beater, which knocks out of the straw any grain the cylinder may have missed, and further on another beater gives the final touch, and any grain that escapes would keep a canary on short commons. A couple of splendid general purpose plows, with rigid steel beams and coulters furnish the plows, which are just what the farmer needs. There is also shown a combined pea thresher and straw cutter, which threshes and cuts the straw at one operation, thus reducing the bulk of the straw and making it easy to "mow away" and facilitating its rotting into manure. The other exhibits of this firm consist of a "Humming Bird" mower, and the "Tiger" and "Perfect" horse rakes. The latter is a new model altogether, the right for Canada of which Mr. Hamilton has purchased this year. Its chief beauty is its ease of dump: the little finger of a man's hand can work the dump lever, so that the merest boy can use it as easily as a strong man. This rake will be in immense demand next season. The entire exhibit of this firm shows that farmers need not go away from home to secure the best of agricultural machinery. By patronizing home industries they secure the best on the market with the added advantage of being in reach of the manufactory, where all needed parts can be promptly supplied and all repairs promptly and satisfactorily done.

All the World Akin.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon. Preached Last Sunday Morning.

"And have made of one blood all nations of men."—ACTS 17: 26.

Some have supposed that God originally made an Asiatic Adam and a European Adam and an African Adam and an American Adam, but that theory is entirely overthrown by my text, which says that all nations are blood relatives, having sprung from one and the same stock. A difference in climate makes much of the DIFFERENCE IN NATIONAL TEMPER.

An American goes to Europe and stays there a long while, and finds his pulse moderating and his temper becoming more calm. The air on this side the ocean is more tonic than on the other side. An American breathes more oxygen than a European. A European coming to America finds a great change taking place in himself. He walks with more rapid strides, and finds his voice becoming keener and shriller. The Englishman who walks London Strand at the rate of three miles the hour, coming to America and residing for a long while here, walks Broadway at the rate of four miles the hour. Much of the difference between an American and a European, between an Asiatic and an African, is atmospheric. The lack of the warm sunlight make the Circassian. The full dash of the sunlight darkens the African.

Then, ignorance or intelligence makes its impression on the physical organism—in the one case ignorance flattereth the skull, as with the Egyptian; in the other case intelligence building up the great dome of the forehead, as with the German. Then the style of god that the nation worships decides how much it shall be elevated or debased, so that those nations that worship reptiles are themselves only a superior form of reptile, while those nations that worship the natural sun in the heavens are the noblest style of barbaric people. But whatever be the difference of physiognomy, and whatever the difference of temperament, the physiologist tells us that after careful analysis he finds out that the plasma and the disk in human blood have the same characteristics; so that if you should put twenty men from twenty nationalities abreast in line of battle, and a bullet should fly through the hearts of the twenty men, the blood flowing forth would, through analysis, prove itself to be the same blood in every instance. In other words, the science of the day confirming the truth of my text that "God hath made of one blood all nations of men."

IMPRESSIONS OF EUROPE.

I have thought, my friends, it might be profitable this morning if I gave you some of the moral and religious impressions which I received when, through your indulgence, I had transatlantic absence. First, I observe that the majority of people in all lands are in a mighty struggle for bread. While in nearly all lands there are only a few cases of actual starvation reported, there is a vast population in every country I visited who have a limited supply of food, or such food as is incompetent to sustain physical vigor. This struggle in some lands is becoming more agonizing, while here and there it is lightened. I have joy in reporting that Ireland, about the sufferings of which we have heard so much, has far better prospects than I have seen there on previous visits. In 1879, coming home from that land, I prophesied the famine that must come upon, and did come upon, the deluged fields of that country. This year the crops are large, and both parties—those who like the English Government and those who don't like it—are expecting relief. I said to one of the intelligent men of Ireland: "Tell me in a few words what are

THE SUFFERINGS OF IRELAND,

and what is the Land Relief enactment." He replied: "I will tell you. Suppose I am landlord and you a tenant. You rent from me a place for £10 a year. You improve it. You turn it from a bog into a garden. You put a house upon it. After a while I, the landlord, come around and I say to my agent: "How much rent is this man paying?" He answers, "£10." "Is that all? Put his rent up to £20." The tenant goes on improving his property, and after a while I come around and I say to my agent: "How much rent is this man paying?" He says: "£20." "Put his rent up to £25." The tenant protests and says, "I can't pay it." Then I, the landlord, say, "Pay it or get out," and the tenant is helpless, and, leaving the place, the property in its improved condition turns over to the landlord. Now, to stop that outrage, the Relief Enactment comes in and appoints commissioners who shall see that if the tenant is turned out he shall receive the difference of value between the farm as he got it, and the farm as he surrenders it. Moreover, the Government loans money to the tenant, so that he may buy the property out and out if the landlord will sell." Mighty advancement toward the righting of a great wrong! But there and in all lands, not excepting our own, there is a far-reaching distress. And let those who broke their fast this morning, and those who shall dine to-day remember those who are in want, and by prayer and practical beneficence do all they can to alleviate the hunger swoon of nations.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

Another impression was—indeed the impression carried with me all the summer—the thought already suggested, the brotherhood of Man. The fact is that the differences are so small between nations that they may be said to be all alike. Though I spent the most of the summer in silence, I spoke a few times and so people of different nations, and how soon I noticed that they are very much alike! If a man knows how to play the piano, it does not make any difference whether he finds it in New Orleans or San Francisco or Boston or St. Petersburg or Moscow or Madras; it has so many keys, and he puts his fingers right on them. And the human heart is a divine instrument, with just so many keys in all cases, and you strike some of them and there is joy, and you strike some of them and there is sorrow. Plied by the same motives, lifted up by the same success, depressed by the same griefs. The cabmen of London have the same characteristics as the cabmen of New York, and are just as modest and retiring. The gold and silver drive Piccadilly and the Boulevards just as they drive Wall Street. If there be a great political excitement in Europe, the Bourse in Paris howls just as loudly as ever did the American gold-room.

The same grief that we saw in our country in 1864 you may find now in the military hospitals of England containing the wounded and sick from the Egyptian wars. The same that sat down in despair after the battles of Shiloh and South Mountain poured their grief in the Shannon and the Clyde and the Dee and the Thames. Oh, ye men and women who know how to pray, never get up from your knees until you have implored God in behalf of the fourteen hundred millions of the race just like yourselves, finding life a tremendous struggle! For who knows but that as the sun to-day draws up drops of water from the Caspain and the Black seas and the Amazon and the Mississippi, after a while to distil the rain, these very drops on the fields—who knows but that the sun of righteousness may draw up the tears of your sympathy, and then rain them down in distillation of comfort o'er the world?

WIDOWHOOD AND ORPHANAGE

Who is that poor man carried on a

All the World Akin.

tretcher to the Afghan ambulance? He is your brother. If in the Pantheon at Paris you smite your hand against the wall among the tombs of the dead, you will hear a very strange echo coming from all parts of the Pantheon just as soon as you smite the wall. And I suppose it is so arranged that every stroke of sorrow among the tombs of bereavement ought to have loud, long, and oft-repeated echoes of sympathy all around the world. Oh, what a beautiful theory it is—and it is a Christian theory—that Englishman, Scotchman, Irishman, Norwegian, Frenchman, Italian, Russian, are all akin. Of one blood all nations. That is a very beautiful inscription that I saw a few days ago over the door in Edinburgh, the door of the house where John Knox used to live. It is getting somewhat dim now, but there is the inscription, fit for the door of any household—"Love God above all, and your neighbor as yourself."

I was also impressed in journeying on the other side the sea with the in countries. The two nations of Europe that are the most moral to-day and that have the least crime are Scotland and Wales. They have by statistics, as you might find, fewer thefts, fewer arsons, fewer murders. What is the reason? A bad book can hardly live in Wales. The Bible crowds it out. I was told by one of the first literary men in Wales: "There is not a bad book in the Welsh language." He said: "Bad books come down from London, but they cannot live here." It is the Bible that is dominant in Wales. And then in Scotland just open your Bible to give out your text, and there is a rustling all over the house almost startling to an American. What is it? The people opening their Bibles find the text, looking at the context, picking out the referenced passages, seeing whether you make right quotation. Scotland and Wales Bible-reading people. That accounts for it. A man, a city, a nation that reads God's Word must be virtuous. That Book is the foe of all wrong-doing What makes Edinburgh better than Constantinople? The Bible.

Oh, I am afraid in America we are allowing the good book to be covered up with other good books! We have our ever-welcome morning and evening newspapers, and we have our good books on all subjects—geological subjects, botanical subjects, physiological subjects, theological subjects—good books, beautiful books, and so many good books that we have not time to read the Bible. Oh, my friends, it is not a matter of very great importance that you have a family Bible on the centre-table of your parlor? Better have one pocket New Testament, the passages marked, the leaves turned down, the binding worn smooth with such usage, than fifty too handsome to read! Oh, let us take a whisk-broom and brush the dust off our Bibles! Do you want poetery? Go and hear Job describe the war-horse, or David tell how the mountains skipped like lambs. Do you want logic? Go and hear Paul reason until your brain aches under the spell of his mighty intellect. Do you want history? Go and see Moses put into a few pages, stupendous information which Herodotus, Thucydides and Prescott never reached after. And, above all, if you want to find how a nation struck down by sin can rise to happiness and to heaven, read of that blood which can wash away the pollution of a world. There is one passage in the Bible of vast tonnage: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Oh, may God fill this country with Bibles and help the people to read them!

I was also impressed in my transatlantic journeys with the wonderful power that Christ holds among the nations.

THE GREAT NAME IN EUROPE

to-day is not Victoria, not Marquis of Salisbury, not William the Emperor, not Bismarck; the great name in Europe to-day is Christ. You find the crucifix on the gatepost, you find it in the hay-field, you find it at the entrance of the manor, you find it by the side of the road.

THE GREATEST PICTURES

in all the galleries of Italy, Germany, France, England and Scotland are Bible pictures. Who has not heard of Da Vinci's "Last Supper?" Who has not heard of Turner's "Pools of Solomon?" Who has not heard of Claude's "Marriage of Isaac and Rebecca?" Who has not heard of Durer's "Dragon of the Apocalypse?" The mightiest picture on this planet is Rubens' "Scourging of Christ." Painter's pencil loves to sketch the face of Christ. Sculptor's chisel loves to present the form of Christ. Organs love to roll forth the sorrows of Christ. The first time you go to London go into the Dore picture gallery. As I went and sat down before "Christ Descending the Steps of the Pretorium," at the first I was disappointed. I said: "There isn't enough majesty in that countenance, not enough tenderness in that eye;" but as I sat and looked at the picture it grew upon me until I was overwhelmed with its power, and I staggered with emotion as I went out into the fresh air, and said: "Oh, for that Christ I must live, and for that Christ I must be willing to die!" Make that Christ your personal friend, my sister my brother. You may never go to Milan to see Da Vinci's "Last Supper;" but better than that, you can have Christ come and sup with you. You may never get to Antwerp to see Rubens' "Descent of Christ from the Cross," but you can have Christ come down from the mountain of His suffering into your heart and abide there forever. Oh, you must have him! We are all so diseased with sin that we want which hurts us, and we won't have that which cures us. The best thing for you and for me to do to-day is to get down on our knees before God and say: Oh, Almighty son of God, I am blind! I want to see! My arms are palsied. I want to take hold of thy cross; have mercy on me, O Lord Jesus." Why will you live on husks when you may sit down to this white bread of heaven? Oh, with such a God and with such a Christ and with such a Holy Spirit and with such an immortal nature, wake up!

Once more, I was impressed greatly on the other side the sea with the wonderful triumphs of the Christian religion. The tide is rising, the tide of moral and in the world. I think that any man who keeps his eyes open, travelling in foreign lands, will come to that conclusion. More Bibles than ever before, more churches, more consecrated men and women, more people ready to be martyrs now than ever before, if need be; so that instead of there being, as people sometimes say, less spirit of martyrdom now than ever before, I believe where there was once one martyr there would be a thousand martyrs if the fires were kindled—men ready to go through flood and fire for Christ's sake. Oh, the signs are promising! The world is on the way to millenial brightness. All art, all invention, all literature, all commerce, will be the Lord's.

These ships that you see going up and down New York Harbor are to be brought into the service of God. All those ships I saw at Liverpool, at Southampton, at Glasgow, are to be brought into the service of Tarshish shall bring presents?" That is what it means. Oh, what when the vessels of the sea come into the service of God! No guns frowning through the portholes, no pikes hung in the gangway, nothing from outwater to taffrail to suggest atrocity. Those ships will come from all parts of the seas. Great flocks of ships that never met on the high sea, but in wrath will cry, "Ship ahoy!" and drop down beside each other in calmness, the flags of Emmanuel streaming from the topgallants. The old slaver, with decks scrubbed and washed and glistened and burnished—the old slaver will wheel into line; and the Chinese junk and the Venetian gondola, and the miners' and the pirates' corvette, will fall into line, equipped, readorned, beautiful, only the small craft of this grand flotilla which shall float out for the truth—a flotilla mightier than the armada of Xerxes moving in the pomp and pride of Persian insolence; mightier than the Carthginian navy rushing with forty thousand oarsmen upon the Roman galleys, the life of nations dashed out against the gunwales.

Rise, O sea, and shine, O heavens to greet this squadron of light and victory! On the glistening decks are the feet of them that bring good tidings, and songs of heaven float among the rigging. Crowd on all the canvas. Line-of-battle ship and merchantmen wheel into the way. It is noon. Strike eight bells. From all the squadron the sailors' song arise. "Surely the isles shall wait for thee, and the ships of Tarshish to bring thy sons from afar, their silver and their gold with them, to the name of the Lord thy God, and the Holy One of Israel."

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met in Warsaw Sept. 26th, 1885. All present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Messrs. Drain and Robb, commissioners, filed their report respecting new road on west half lot 28, concession 5. The clerk was instructed to charge three days' statute labor on the roll against R. D. Tully for 1885. A statute labor tax of $2 was abated to John J. Davie for 1885, on account of his being sick and unable to perform the same. On motion Wm. J. Little and Wm. Carveth were accepted as bondsmen, in the sum of $300 each, for John Hunter, sr., collector, the bond to be executed before the clerk. The following orders were granted to

Morris Tobin, statute labor tax, 1884, work being done	$2 00

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

The Rearin' Game.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will take place this evening in the curlers' room at the Charlotte street rink. Business of importance calls for a full attendance of the members.

The Last Rose of Summer.

The recent frosts have laid low the glories of the flower plots in the Court House Park. The flowers are withered with the frost and the dismal looking beds, instead of presenting a kaleidoscopic view of gorgeous hues, look for all the world like huge platters of cold cooked greens.

Steps Downward.

Mr. James Bogue has the contract for building the stone flight of steps at the summit entrance of Court House Park. The material, rush hammered limestone for the steps, and cut stone for the coping to the side walls enclosing the steps, is on hand. The upper flight will consist of eight steps, the second from the top expending into a wide platform, followed by the remaining six. At the base of this flight stand two cut stone pillars terminating the walls that flank the flight of steps. Midway between the entrance and the fountain, there is another flight of five steps also of stone. The present oaken steps which once served in front of the Court House have well earned their superannuation. The stone material was furnished by Mr. Thos. Choate, Warsaw.

Where Will It Be?

During the last day or two quite a little excitement has prevailed among those professing to know as to which of the two lots recently purchased by the Dominion Government will be finally selected as the site for the new post-office building. A member of the Sawers' Syndicate, who owned the Hunter street lot, is so confident that it will be their site, that yesterday he staked $200 on it. The Phelan faction, who back up the lot at the corner of George and Charlotte streets, are said to be ready to bet $1,000 that at that corner and nowhere else the new post-office will stand. Some are inclined to think this an attempt to bluff, while others shrewdly suspect that Mr. Phelan knows pretty well what he is talking about, and that by and by folks will have to go south instead of north to get their letters.

A Rare Treat.

The citizens of Peterborough and vicinity are to be congratulated upon the treat in store for them. The unrivalled Telgmann sextette club, consisting of two sisters and four brothers, the family of the late Dr. Waldeck, of Germany, aided by Maggie Barr, the "queen of Scottish song, and Miss McGarry, elocutionist, considered the best public reader in the Dominion, will give one of their musical and literary evenings in the Bradburn Opera House on Tuesday evening, Oct. 13th. The programme is most varied, and gives assurance of being the most attractive ever presented to a Peterborough audience. The Guelph Daily Herald says: "The Telgmann Company's audience is never disappointed, but always from the first piece to the last listens with eager attention to the perfect execution of some of the master pieces of the greatest musicians, while their rendering of Scotch and Irish airs calls forth a perfect hurricane of applause."

Locks.

I am now receiving Door Locks made in Peterborough, and have no hesitation in saying that they are equal to the goods made by the best makers in the United States. As I intend to keep only these goods in stock in future, I am selling at reductions in prices of 20 to 30 per cent. all the American Locks Knobs and Door Trimmings that I have on hand to make room for a full line of our home-made goods. There are some very fine lines, especially in Mortice Locks among them, and I would respectfully ask your inspection. Cut Nails and Door Hangings are very low in price just now.

RANGE AND RIFLE.

Annual Matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association.

The Prize-winners.

The annual matches of the Peterborough Rifle Association were brought to a close yesterday afternoon, the Association match being completed and the County and Sporting matches shot off. The weather, though more favorable than on the preceding day, was still not the best for shooting. Quartermaster Sergeant Hill, as was said yesterday, has become the final holder and owner of the New York medal, which, presented to the town in 1866 by a few patriotic natives of Peterborough resident in New York, as a mark of their recognition of the gallantry of Canadian volunteers in repelling the Fenian invasion, has since been temporarily won by many local volunteers, some of whom held it two years in succession, but who failed by a third victory to make it their own. The names of the donors of the medal may be [illegible] them. The are J. J. English, E. C. Lane, R. Niblock, James Borrowman, W. C. D. Botham, J. H. Hughes, Wm. Donnelly, David English and H. H. Hughes.

The 57th Battalion cup has been taken by No. 1 Company, who wrested it from No. 4, who held it for a number of years.

The following are the scores made by the prize-winners in the various competition.

MAIDEN MATCH.

Open only to members of the Association, who have never won a prize at any rifle competition. Range, 400 yards. Five rounds. Entrance 25 cents. 1st prize, clock, presented by Rev. V. Clementi, $5, W. Reynolds 20; 2nd prize, cake, presented by F. Hall, $3, R. S. Hendson, 17; 3rd prize, slippers, presented by Messrs Foot & McWhinnie, $2, N. Brown, 15; 4th prize, vases, presented by Ten Cent Store, $1, H. Evans, 15; 5th prize, goods, presented by Carton Bros., 50cts, W. A. Mason, 14.

VOLUNTEER MATCH.

Only to volunteers in uniform, who are bona fide members of any one of the several corps of the County of Peterborough. Ranges, 200, 400 and 500 yards. Five rounds at each range. Entrance 25 cents. 1st prize, valise, presented by Association, $8,50, Sergt. Foley, 43; 2nd prize, lamp, presented by Lieut. J. E. Hammond, $5, Quarter-Master Sergt. Hill, 42; 3rd prize, Daily Review, presented by the Review Printing & Publishing Co., $4, Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, 38; 4th prize, statuettes, presented by Lieut.-Col J. Z. Rogers, $3, Sergt.-Major Stothart, 36; 5th prize, picture, presented by Dr. Kincaid, $2.25, Lieut. Haultain, 35; 6th prize, slippers, presented by Quarter-Master Millar, $2, Pte. Reynolds, 30; 7th prize, glassware, presented by J. W. Mason, $1.50, Major Bell, 30; 8th prize, vases, presented by Taylor & Macdonald, $1.25, Pte. W. A. Mason, 30; 9th prize, ink bottle, presented by Capt. Birdsall, $1, Pte. Wedlock, 27; 10th prize, Pipe, presented by Geo. Rubidge, $1, Pte. Miller, 26; Five Prizes, members tickets, Rifle Association value $1 each, presented by Peterborough Rifle Association, $5, Trooper Scobie, 26; Capt. Birdsall, 25.; Lieut. Dennistoun, 24; Pte. N. Brown, 23; Trooper Hunter, 22.

NEW YORK GOLD MEDAL.

The highest score made in the Volunteer Match by any member of Nos. 1, 2 or 3 Companies, 57th Battalion, or Peterborough Cavalry Troop, entitling such member to hold for the following year the "New York Gold Medal."—Value $50, Quarter-Master Sergeant Hill.

COMPANY MATCH.

Open to five members, in uniform, of any corps in the County of Peterborough, subject to same requirements as in Volunteer Match, Ranges, 200, 400 and 500 yards. Five rounds at each range. 1st prize, Challenge Cup, to be held by the Capt. of the winning Company each year, till won by same Company three years, presented by Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, $10; cash, presented by Lieut. R. A. Morrow, $5, total $15, Peterborough Cavalry, 146; 2nd prize, [illegible] No. 1 Company 57th Battalion, 123.

The 57th Battalion Cup, presented by Lieut.-Col. J. Z. Rogers, was awarded to the Company team from that Battalion, making the highest score in the Company Match, No. 1 Company, 57th Battalion, 123.

FOR SALE!

THE SPLENDID

Mill Property

Comprising the Circular Saw, Shingle and Grist Mills at the

VILLAGE OF YOUNG'S POINT,

at the outlet of the Otonabee River from Clear Lake, in the County of Peterborough, will be offered for sale BY PUBLIC AUCTION, on Friday, the 9th Day of Oct.

at three o'clock P.M., at Cavanagh's Hotel, in Peterborough.

All these mills are driven by water and are in good working order, and can with the substantial double dwelling house also on the property, be immediately rented for $1300.00.

The water supply at six feet head, is unlimited, and the dam being a Government one, is maintained at its expense.

The situation presents unequalled advantages for the milling business. At the head of river navigation, and in close proximity to abundant timber supply, all the expense, delay and loss of river driving, is avoided, and the manufactured material can be placed on the market, before most operators can get their logs to their mills; the adjoining lake affords unlimited safe booming accomodation.

In the centre of a good farming country, a large gristing business is done, and a good market is at hand for the product of all these mills. The Village of Lakefield, five miles distant on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, with which three steam boats communicate daily, affords convenient shipping facilities.

An opportunity will be afforded the purchaser, of purchasing a considerable extent of timber limits, convenient to the mills, and also a quantity of logs now at the mill.

There will be a reserve bid. Terms: $5000.00 or upwards to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder thereof in five annual instalments, with interest at 6 per cent half yearly, to be secured by mortage of the premises.

Further particulars and conditions of sale may be had on application to
